A few Sundays ago Professor Blackie preached in St. David's Established Church, Edinburgh, on the Land Laws. He took as his text Isaiah, v. 8:—"Woe unto them that join house and house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth." The subject of his discourse they would see was landed property, and its healthy distribution in society; how landed property formed as it were the raw material out of which society was made. If landed property was the foundation and root of the social system, it must be of the utmost importance that it be distributed in such a way that the greatest number of persons in the State shall have some share in the land of the country. The possession of landed property was the greatest guarantee of good. It was never among the landed proprietors they found fermentation and revolution if there was fair honest possession. That being the case they must have as many people as possible having a share in the land. As Aristotle said, all extremes were wrong, and therefore it could not be good that the land should be in the hands of a very few. If accumulation of land were natural and proper, how far was it to go, because if it went on and on what became of the certain mean? It must stop somewhere. Family claims were the natural laws of succession, but if a father had affection for all his children he ought not to leave his property to one. There would thus be a natural division of property, and that was nature's remedial process for preventing great accumulation. This succession of the eldest son to property could only be prevented by good laws; in fact, nature never intended that any man was entitled to lock up his property for ever and ever. And just in turn parties ought to prevent property falling into the hands of those who are not able wisely to use it. Each man was meant to cultivate his own estate, and not to hand it over to another. The advantages of farms and properties, he thought, were self-evidence. The man with a large property had an immense leverage. He could command large supplies: he could do things a little man could not possibly do. As an example, he mentioned the Duke of Sutherland, who is carrying out such an extensive scheme of improvement on his northern estate. Money was always powerful, and proprietors could do great thing if they were inclined. It was the boast of England that her great proprietors had been amongst the most noted of her land improvers. But again, no human being could boast of ubiquity. A man with a whole country belonging to him could not be everywhere, and thus his estates were in many cases neglected; indeed, it tended to vicarious administration. This also tendered to produce absenteeism, which he considered was the greatest of all sins. The system of repression was also encouraged. He knew parts of the country where they could not say a single word for fear of being turned out, or where a party could not get a property in case of his voting against the laird. A man could not go to the church he liked without being told a United Presbyterian tenant was not wanted. They wanted all good people to go to the Established Church. The Professor then laid down the following as his proposition:—While large properties under wise administration certainly possess their own peculiar vantage ground, which renders them tolerably enjoyable and even profitable, as a variety, their general influence on the social state of the country is not such as that any wise Government should feel itself justified in giving them encouragement, much less in upholding special laws tending to prevent them breaking down into smaller properties, when in the course of nature such a redistribution of the property in the soil may normally take place; yet as in other matters, so with regard to the distribution of land. All one-sidedness is to be avoided, and that state of possession is to be regarded as nominally best where large, small, and medium properties are found through the country, with a wise regard to the district and the capacities of the cultivator. That, he thought, would please all parties, even the extreme radicals. (A voice—"Rather ambiguous.") The Professor brought his lecture to a close by referring to the desirability of amending the laws of entail and primogeniture.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address,—

The CULVERWELL MEDICAL Co.,

MARTHY ELLEN.

There's nothin' in the name to strike
A feller more'n common-like!
'Taint liable to get no praise
Ner nothin' like it nowadays;
And yit that name o' her'n is just
[illegible]
[illegible] to say
I['ve been a-]thinkin' [illegible]
And [illegible] Marthy Ellen!

It may be I was [illegible]
In favor of it from the fust—
'Cause I kin recollect just how
We met, and here her mother now
A-callin' of her down the road—
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
And mock her—"Marthy Ellen!"

Our people never had no fuss,
And yit they never took to us;
We [illegible] back and forth some;
Until [illegible]
[illegible]
Was just together every whur
And all the time—and when they'd see
That I liked her, and she liked me,
They'd holler "Marthy Ellen!"

When we growed up, and they shet down
On me and her a-runnin' roun'
Together, and her father said
"He'd never have her [illegible]
[illegible] of the [illegible],"
And so on—and her mother she Jest egged the gyrl, and said "She 'lowed
[illegible]"
I wrote to Marthy Ellen.

That is, I kindo' took my pen
In hand, and stated whur and when
The undersigned would be that night
With two good hosses, saddled right
For lively travelin'—in case
[illegible]
[illegible] and writ
"The rose is red"—right under it—
"Your'n allus—Marthy Ellen."

That's all, I reckon—nothin' more
To tell but what you've heered afore—
The same old story—Sweeter tho'
For all the trouble, don't you know!
Old-fashioned name! and yit its just
As purty as the purtiest!
And more'n that, I'm here to say
I'll live a-thinkin' thataway
And die for Marthy Ellen.

SUGAR CANE.

BY P. C. BUCKE, OTTAWA, IN THE "CANADIAN HORTICULTURIST."

Perhaps it is right that some apology should be offered for writing on the above subject in a periodical devoted to fruit and flowers, but it must be admitted the article of sugar, like those mentioned, is one of the sweets of life, and therefore admissable. The importance of Canada being able to produce its own sugar, for which so many thousands of dollars are annually sent out of the country, may well lead both the government and private individuals to turn their attention to the subject of a home industry in this direction if such can be established. Everyone is aware who has given much attention to the manufacture of sugar from the beet root that it requires very expensive machinery and an exceedingly scientific treatment to produce an article suitable for commerce. These difficulties are overcome by the production of sugar from the new canes now cultivated on a large scale in the Western and other States.

Some time during the Eighteen Hundred and Fifties there was sent to the neighboring Republic by some of its foreign Consuls the seed of the Sorgo, or Chinese sugar cane, and some of the Imphee, or African sugar cane. These seeds were distributed by the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, all over the United States, and have apparently found a congenial home in the States of Minnesota, Illinois, Texas, Pennsylvania, Missouri, and Michigan. It will be noticed that it is not only adapted to the hotter Southern States, but comes to maturity in those whose climatic influences are similar to our own Province of Ontario. In point of fact, wherever Indian corn can be grown or grapes ripened these plants flourish, as it will arrive at maturity in a shorter season than the maize plant. The plant is a great deal similar to that of the Indian corn, with the exception that the corn bears its seed on the ear, whereas these canes have their seed on the tassel on the top of the plant.

It should have been stated that since the African and Chinese canes have been grown in America that they have either been naturally hybridized or have become changed by climate, and the variety been found to contain the greatest amount of saccharine matter is the Early Amber, a variety originating in Minnesota.

The best soils for its cultivation are the same as those for corn, warm upland sandy [illegible] low ground, and such as have been recently manured, should be avoided. The mode of planting for sugar cane is the same as for corn; that is, in check rows made with the plough four feet apart each way. The time of planting is also the same, that is, when warm weather sets in and all danger of frost is passed. During the growing season the ground must be kept clear of weeds, and the suckers removed from the plants. When the seed is ripe or nearly so the cane should be cut. If the season is ordinarly hot the time for cutting will be about the first week in September. After cutting, the cane should be left in windrows in the field for a week or ten days to cure. After this, if not wanted to work up, it should be placed under shelter, but if possible should not be allowed to get wet or be exposed to frost, as either of these spoil the color of the syrup and sugar, though they do not materially injure it. The leaves must be stripped from the cane before using; this is usually done by placing two or three hills of cane on a ranking board, one end of which rests on the ground, the other on a tressel, and whilst one man holds the tops another rakes down the cane with a steel toothed rake, and by this process all the leaves are removed. The man holding the tops then cuts them off with a heavy knife, and lays the canes in a pile for future use. The leaves make a valuable fodder and the seed an excellent feed, the first equal to the best hay, the latter equal to oats. It requires three men to top and strip an acre per day. The bagasse, or refuse stalks from which the juice has been extracted, also makes a superior food for cattle. It will thus be seen the entire product is available for useful purposes.

For making sugar and syrup it is necessary that a mill be procured for grinding the cane and pressing the juice, and an evaporator for boiling it down. The average yield of dense syrup per acre is about one hundred and sixty gallons. The appliances generly used are the Victor Cane Mill, Made by the Bloymer Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the Cook Evaporator. These are made in different sizes to suit the capacity required. The larger the manufactory the cheaper is the work accomplished. It is claimed that great advantage is afforded to the manufacture of sugars, from the circumstance that the period of cutting and working up the crop into dense syrup occurs at a time when the season for outdoor work is most favorable and when the days are long. The work of sugar making can be arrested at a point—in the syrup state—and may be completed during the winter when labor is cheap. It is also claimed that the sugar is manufactured simply and cheaply, and at less than half the cost of beet root sugar; the carbonacious process and the use of animal charcoal being entirely dispensed with, and the use of the vacuum pan is quite unnecessary.

Mr. S. H. Kenny, of the Pioneer Press, Minneapolis, Minnesota, says:—"We commenced work 12th September, (the season was late) and finished 20th October, 1878, manufacturing four thousand two hundred and forty-one gallons of good dense syrup, working eighteen hours per day. The help employed besides myself was three men and two boys, and horses to run the mill—a change of which should be made every six hours. Had I used a Victor Mill No. 5 I could have accomplished the same work with one less hand. I used a No. 7 Cook Evaporator. The wood required for evaporating was [illegible] all soft wood." He estimated that the expense of manufacture is twenty-six cents per gallon if the cane is bought at a price [illegible] delivered at the mill at twenty-five dollars, but it can be grown at seventeen dollars per acre, which would reduce the cost of manufacture five cents per gallon, making the syrup twenty-one cents per gallon. This syrup he has sold at seventy cents per gallon [illegible]. It will be seen if these figures are correct that there is a good margin for profit.

If necessary, facts of an official nature could be multiplied to show the success this industry has met with in its crude state, not only in manufacturing syrup but sugar also. The Early Amber cane has been successfully grown here in small quantities by more than one individual as an experiment, though no use has been made of it further than feeding to horses and cattle. These animals are exceedingly fond of it, and eat it up with great avidity. As a summer forage plant it has no equal, as the crop raised per acre is very heavy. Some seed was sown here [illegible] June, 1879, and the plants were cut 22nd September for the exhibition. Mr. Bennett, of Ottawa, showed one of [illegible] at the annual meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association measuring eleven feet high. A farmer between here and Montreal made some syrup in the autumn of 1878, and gave an interesting account of his success in a French paper. Col. William White, of this city, one of our esteemed members, was the first person here to introduce the seed, some of which he very kindly distributed, and some he sowed on his own grounds with very good results.

I feel quite convinced that as a sugar producer the Early Amber is distined to fill the great want of Ontario. It far surpasses the beet root, being much easier handled, and no washing is required. It is quite as productive per acre, and the appliances for manufacture are much simpler and cheaper, the chemical knowledge required not being of so scientific a nature. I trust the Ontario Government will direct that attention may be called to the manufacture of cane sugar at their Guelph Model Farm, and that every endeavor may be made to redeem the time lost in deciding the value of this enterprise, which has for centuries been carried on by the despised Zulus and the Chinese.

The Early Amber seed can be had from Messrs. Kenny & Miller, Dundas, Rice Co., Minnesota, U. S. A., at the following rates:—

By Mail	60 cents for one pound.
By Express	50	"	"
"	40 cents per pound for	10 pounds.
"	35	"	25 "
"	30	"	50 "
"	20	"	100 "

The quantity of seed to sow an acre is four pounds.

ENGLAND.

HER Majesty the Queen has placed in the Royal pew in Whippingham Church, Isle of Wight, a mural monument to the memory of the Princess Alice.

THE Corporation of the City of London have arranged to have a handsome pedestal constructed to mark the city boundaries at the site of old Temple Bar.

IT is possible that the Queen will go to Italy in March on a short visit to the Crown Princess of Germany, but the carrying out of the idea will depend on Her Majesty's health, the weather, and the state of public affairs.

LORD BEACONSFIELD will have completed six years of continuous Premiership on the 20th of February. Lord Palmerston's total was nine years and upwards. Lord Melbourne was Prime Minister for six years and two months. Lord Liverpool held the same office from 1812 to 1827.

MR. GLADSTONE on Dec. 29th received a Hawarden congratulatory addresses from various political associations, on the occasion of his 70th birthday anniversary. In acknowledgement of one from Liverpool the right hon. gentleman spoke at considerable length on political affairs.

BARON RAYLEIGH, who has just been elected Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge, Eng., is the first peer who has been a professor in the university.

IN 1857 the Liberal majority in Sheffield was 6,071, in 1865 it was 8,334, and in 1868 it was 26,000? In 1874 no Tory came forward, and to-day the Liberal majority is 472. What about public opinion? The patients in the hospital were carried to the polls at the election on the 22nd ult.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

IN a letter to the Rev. P. Sandlands, Mr. Gladstone says that an effective cultivation of the office of preaching is perhaps the most crying want of the church of England, and vocal expression and articulation are an important and essential part of it.

BISHOP UTTERTON, Suffragan of Guildford, died suddenly in All Saints Church, Ryde, Isle of Wight. After preaching he read the prayer for the Church Militant, and had just uttered the words, "That it may please thee shortly to accomplish the number of thine elect," when he knelt down before the Communion Table, and expired of heart disease in less than five minutes.

IT is particularly requested that subscribers not receiving the REVIEW regularly will at once make the fact known at this Office, in order that all cause of complaint may be removed as speedily as possible.

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption.

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

SATURDAY, Jan. 17.—The market contrary to expectation was a large one for this season of the year, following so soon after the holidays. The market square was well filled with farm wagons, having a fair variety of produce. Prices are holding steady, instead of an advance, as was anticipated. Beef was again abundant and found slow sale at quotations; some few fine hind quarters bringing $5.00 per cwt. Mutton, no change, selling at 5c. to 6c. The receipts of pork were light at quotations for shipping. Chickens were more plentiful and sold at 30c. to 35c. per pair. Ducks in light supply at 50c. to 70c. per pair. Geese, no change. Turkeys 60c. to 80c. each; the supply being fully up to the demand. Live geese were offered at 50c. to 60c. each. Live chickens of choice stock for laying, 50c. per pair. Lard 9c. to 10c. per lb. Butter roll only offered at 18c. to 20c. Eggs in fair supply at 16c. to 17 cents per dozen. Potatoes were in ample supply at 65c. per bag. Turnips at quotations with a light demand. Parsnips were selling at 50c. per bushel. Cabbages at 40 to 50c. per doz. according to size. Apples were plentiful; good table apples sold at 75c. to $1.25; greenings bringing the highest quoted price. There was one lot of box honey which readily sold at 16c. per pound. Hay $6.00 to $7.00, and in abundance. Hides have advanced to $8.00 per cwt. We quote $7.50 to $8.00. There was little doing in grains with no change in price to note. The weather was too unfavourable for farmers to venture with their cereals. Buyers seemed to be well satisfied that it is so, as they are reluctant to buy wheat especially at present prices. The outside markets are unsettled and drooping.

Special Meeting.

There will be a special meeting, at half-past seven o'clock this evening, of the Town Council for the past year, the last meeting there will be an opportunity of holding, as their term of office expires on Monday morning.

The New Town Council.

The newly elected Town Councillors will meet on Monday morning at eleven o'clock, to organise. They will meet again in the evening to strike the standing committees, to appoint auditors, and for other business.

Changed Condition.

Water has been flowing down our streets today, and the ice is rapidly disappearing. Runners have all disappeared, and wheels have been substituted. The farmers say that the wheeling is fine, as the frost has not given sufficiently to make the roads muddy.

Crowded Streets.

The streets have been crowded with people from the country, although the attendance at the market would not have led one to anticipate it. The rain does not seem to have frightened away the people, hence our store keepers have been kept busy most of the day.

Little Lake Cemetery Company.

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, for the election of officers and other business, will be held in the Town Council Chamber, at half-past twelve o'clock, on Monday, the 18th of January. The interest in this matter should be sufficient to insure a full attendance.

A Peterborough Poet Abroad.

We read in the Emmerson, Manitoba, International that Mr. John Cosley has moved his barber shop into his new building on the north side of Dominion street, and now has a neat place. We are glad to learn of the success of an old resident of Peterborough, whose poetry is not yet forgotten.

A Fishing Commission.

The Toronto Telegram has the following paragraph :—

"People are still in doubt as to the object of the appointment of a Royal Commission to enquire into something in connection with agriculture. But the suspicion is beginning to prevail that the object is to elicit the unfavourable opinions of farmers who are dissatisfied with the N. P. If this be so, it will be known in history as Mr. Mowat's anti-N.P. fishing commission."

Nearly an Accident.

A little fellow, whose name we did not learn, while standing in the market square listening to a patent medicine vendor, was caught by the wheel of a passing farm waggon and carried half way round the wheel, when he was observed and rescued. Had it not been for the promptness of Mr. Doherty, the Market Clerk, the little lad would have been crushed between the wheel and the body of the waggon.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are : Moderate to fresh winds; cloudy to partly cloudy continued warm weather, with rain areas. Peterborough is in sympathy with probabilities ; a moderate southerly to southwesterly wind has prevailed ; cloudy to partly cloudy weather with occasioned showers of rain. The thermometer indicated this morning at 9 o'clock, 40° and at noon 42°.

The Fire Brigade Band.

The following letter which speaks for itself appears in the Mail of this morning :—

SIR,—"Can you inform me through whose neglect it is that the diploma won by the Peterborough Fire Brigade Band, at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition in September of last year, as being the champion amateur band of the Province, has never yet been forwarded? It has been written for twice and called for once personally, still we are always put off with some trival excuse. This matter has been hanging off for some time, and I would like to know who is to blame, as I consider that the band have been treated very shabbily, to say the least, in this matter." Yours, &c.,

Sabbath School Anniversary.

The anniversary service in connection with the George Street Methodist Sabbath School will take place to-morrow, the Rev. Mr. Starr preaching in the morning and the Rev. Dr. Harper in the evening. The sermon in the morning will be especially for the young, the children of the school occupying the centre of the body of the church. The anniversary meeting will be held on Monday evening next, for which an attractive programme has been provided, and the committee having dispensed with an admission fee, a large attendance is expected.

MINDEN.

RAILWAY BONUS.—On Saturday, January 10th, a public meeting resolved in favour of a bonus in aid of the Northern Extension Railway from Kinmount to Mountain Lake, where communication by steamer can be obtained for over 40 miles in a northerly and easterly direction.

A GOOD BARGAIN.—The Reeve of Minden has effected a most advantageous arrangement with the County in reference to the Town Hall. The ratepayers of Minden built the Hall at considerable expense, and owing to the large outlay every year, and to their deriving no material benefit from the investment, Minden transferred its right and title to the County for a very respectable sum of money.

HALIBURTON.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Dysart Agricultural Society held their annual meeting in the Town Hall, Haliburton, on Saturday, January 10th. Mr. John Stothart, President in the Chair. The Auditors' Report was presented and accepted. Mr. John Stothart was re-elected President, and Mr. Prust re-elected Secretary and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Mr. T. Gould was elected Vice-President. The following gentlemen were elected as directors for the ensuing year :—Messrs. F. Dover, A. Quarry, W. Duggan, T. Neate, A. Patterson, H. Bain, W. Clinkscale, S. McKivers and T. Pascoe. Mr. A. McDonald and Mr. R. Grocey were appointed Auditors.

OTTAWA CORRESPONDENTS.

The Lindsay Post has the following paragraph :—

"The Mail takes the trouble to quote from a reform paper a recent strong condemnation of an item in the Globe's Ottawa telegraphic correspondence, and to "improve" the occasion. We do not suppose there is a reformer in the country who believes one-half of the "statements" in the telegrams in question unless they are supported by other evidence. The Globe's Ottawa correspondent appears to be a simple-minded youth with an unflagging appetite for the marvellous, and he is regularly crammed twice or thrice a week by tory officials and brokers at the capital. Consequently whenever he has foundation for a serious charge—which is not seldom—his statements are apt to be considerably discounted. The Ottawa despatches in the two Toronto papers, especialy during the session, are as a rule the reverse of creditable."

IRELAND.

MR. ARCHIBALD FORBES, the special correspondent of the Daily News, has attempted to deliver a lecture in the Cork Theatre Royal on the subject of the Zulu war, but could not gain a hearing.

THE Lord Mayor of Dublin has convened a meeting to take such steps as may be necessary for the relief of the distressed districts. Lord Beaconsfield has subscribed £100 and the Lord Lieutenant £200 to the Duchess of Marlborough's fund.

ON December 21st, whilst some lads were playing "pitch and toss" at Milward's field, situated within a short distance of Waterford, the cry of police was raised, when the lads ran, but after going a short distance, one of them, named Peter Brennan, dropped dead. Dr. Arthur was examined at the inquest, and deposed that death resulted from heart disease.

MR. ALEX. THOM, Queen's printer, died on Dec. 23rd, at his residence, Donnycarney, near Clontarf, County Dublin. His name is known chiefly in connection with his annual directory, containing a fund of statistical and other authentic information of the highest value concerning Ireland, compiled with great care, and given in a convenient and intelligible form. Mr. Thom was born in Aberdeen in the year 1800, and went to Ireland in 1813 with his father, who was a journalist, and edited a newspaper then published in Dublin, called the Correspondent. During his long connection with Ireland, he witnessed many remarkable events and great changes in the habits of people and the times. He was wont to refer to his early experience, and the contrast which he observed between the social circumstances of the country and those of Scotland, and of Ireland herself, in her more advanced civilization. As an instance, he would tell how even sixty years ago it was necessary to send an escort of dragoons with Her Majesty's mail from Dundalk to Dublin, to protect it from attacks by Collyer, a daring bandit, whose exploits made him so popular that the people could not be tempted by any reward to give him up. He ultimately surrendered upon certain terms, which recognized his importance, for they provided that he should keep the road clear of other freebooters.

Russia's Warlike Preparations.

VIENNA, Jan. 16.—Notwithstanding all the peaceful professions of Russia, she is secretly continuing her preparations for war. The directors of her rifle manufactories have been instructed by the War Office quietly to prepare as many breech-loaders as possible, therefore 70,000 will be manufactured at Sestroreiz, 80,000 at Isevzix, and half a million abroad. A very trustworthy correspondent, who has just visited the larger towns in Russian Poland, on his way, via Warsaw and Wilna, to Riga, writes that not only all the larger towns in that district, but also the places which previously had either a small garrison or none at all, are now all crowded by troops of all arms. This is chiefly the case in respect to those places lying west of Warsaw, on the route from Czenstochow to Wilna and Dunaburg. In the three governments bordering upon Germany and Austria, via Warsaw, Wilna and Keif, are quartered nineteen foot and nine horse divisions, besides a great force of fully equipped batteries, and they are incessantly increased by fresh arrivals.

A Real Ice House.

A house of ice, similar to that which was built in Empress Anne's reign, is about to be constructed in the zoological garden at Moscow. The managers of that establishment have found among its archives some valuable details as to the mode of building which was adopted on the former occasion, and they will be adhered to in the present instance. The first edifice was raised between the admiralty and the winter palace of St. Petersburg, 1740, and was formed throughout—walls, roof, windows, decorations, alike—of ice. The blocks were cut in a square shape and their surfaces sprinkled with water, which when the cubes were placed in juxtaposition, froze in the interstices and bound the whole into one compact and solid mass. At the entrance of the structure was a large gallery filled with statues. The pilasters on the exterior were fashioned to imitate green marbles. The ante-chamber possessed four windows and the other rooms 6 each, while on the sills stood vases filled with flowers made with ice, shrub like plants, covered with birds of the same material, standing at the corners. Clock cases, chairs, tables, wardrobes, utensils, candlelabras, beds, were all of ice.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw51-1y

MONTREAL.

THE REV. J. EWART was elected Moderator of the Montreal Presbytery on Wednesday last.

PREPARATIONS are being made by the Irish citizens to welcome Parnell, while French Canadians are getting ready to regally receive Bishop Fabvre, who will return from Rome next month.

A MRS. HOLBROOK, of Boston, Mass., is looking for her daughter Lilla, who eloped from Berlin, Mass., some months ago with her own uncle, also named Holbrook, and said to have been at one time a British soldier.

IT WOULD SEEM as though ruffianism was rampant in the vicinity of Montreal. A few nights ago in Longueuil a gentleman was compelled to defend his household with a revolver. Yesterday afternoon another strange affair occurred which took a long time to reach the ears of the police. At about two o'clock ten well-known roughs and thieves entered the residence of Edward Masson, No. 4 Allard street, and demanded refreshments. This was refused, whereupon a general onslaught was made on Masson and his wife, both of whom were severely beaten about the head and body. The roughs then stripped the hooks in the passage of all the clothing they contained, and decamped. This morning Deputy High Constable Contant captured three parties, Alphonse Desjardins, Charles Ouellette, and Guillaume Lahaie, all of whom were only yesterday released from the gaol, where they had been serving for larceny. They are well known to the authorities as belonging to a most dangerous class, and were remanded until to-morrow, when the authorities hope to have under arrest the other members of the ruffians.

Stanley's Present Expedition.

Mr. H. M. Stanley's expedition to open up the heart of Africa for commercial purposes, and in which he acts as agent of the Brussels International Expedition, includes 15 Europeans—all engaged for 3 years, and skilled as carpenters, smiths, sailmakers, &c.,—and several hundred natives. He has with him a small river steamer, 3 steam launches, a cutter, and 3 lighters, none of the vessels drawing more than 15 ft. and all being protected with iron plates against arrows and bullets. The launches are to form the advance guard, while the steamer will tow the supplies. Thus Mr. Stanley, as soon as he has passed the lower series of 63 falls, will be able to ascend the Congo and its affluents. No violence will be used, the expedition having abundant means to pay for everything, and being charged to withdraw to another field when rejected by hostile savages.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column. d146-1y

The Duchess of Marlborough's fund now amounts to $100,000.

EQUIVALENT TO COMMUNISM.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Roman Catholic Bishop of Salford publishes a letter, disavowing his alleged approval of the Irish agrarian agitation, saying that to threaten landlords or tenants, and to address violent, inflammatory revolutionary harangues to crowds of excitable peasants, are equivalent to proclaiming communism. His previous letter was intended only to approve of constitutional agitation.

SELECTION OF A GOVERNOR.

AUGUSTA, Jan. 17.—The Committee on the gubeonatorial votes in the Republican Legislature reported as follows:—The whole number of votes, 138,806; necessary to choice, 69,404; Davis, 68,967; Smith, 47,673; Garcelon, 21,851; Bradbury, 264. No choice. The House proceeded to the selection of two names to be sent to the Senate. Each member, as his name was called, came forward and deposited his ballot. As Sproule, of Veazie, who had deserted the Fusionists, came forward, there was tremendous applause. He voted for Davis. The result of the balloting was as follows:—Davis, 88; Bradbury, 87; Garcelon, 1. The names of Daniel F. Davis and Bion Bradbury were sent to the Senate. The Senate was crowded, as it had not been during the controversy. When the vote was taken for Governor, nineteen votes were thrown, all for Davis, who was declared by the President to be legally chosen Governor of the State. Several Fusion members were present, but none in their seats, and none participating. The announcement was followed by applause.

GOVERNOR OF UTAH.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says that it is reported that the President has concluded to appoint Eli H. Murray, of Kentucky, Governor of Utah, notwithstanding that every member of the Cabinet advised against it, and six of them advised the re-appointment of Governor Emery. The contest has been very animated, and developed an extraordinary large and influential backing in favor of Emery.

STEAMER ARRIVED.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Anchoria has arrived from Glasgow.

NOMINATION TO OFFICE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The President has nominated the following:—James Russell, of Lowell, Mass., Minister to England; J. W. Foster, Indiana, Minister to Russia; L. Fairchild, Wisconsin, Minister to Spain; Philip H. Morgan, Louisiana, Minister to Mexico; Lewis Richmond, R. I., Consul at Belfast; Eli H. Murray, Ky., Governor of Utah.

SUICIDE FROM LOVE.

Mollie Brooks, a beautiful and accomplished young lady, aged 20, committed suicide by taking morphine last evening, it is said on account of a quarrel with her lover.

POSSESSION OF OFFICES.

The Sun's Augusta despatch says to-day Governor Smith and Secretary Sawyer will go to the Capitol and attempt to take possession of their respective offices, now occupied forcibly by the Republicans. In case of a refusal on the part of the Republicans to allow them, no definite plan of action has been determined upon.

A CLERICAL SCANDAL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—On Saturday evening Mr. Bob, of West Hoboken, discovered the Rev. Wm. M. Trumbower, of Hackettstown, in his wife's room, and heard improper remarks between them. Mrs. Bob is a member of Trumbower's congregation, and a teacher of the Bible class. Her husband, suspecting an improper intimacy, had contrived to entrap them. Trumbower, on being discovered, left hastily. Mrs. Bob attempted to follow, and on being detained by her husband, screamed murder, which brought back the minister, who levelled a revolver at Bob's head, threatening to shoot him. At midnight Trumbower was arrested on the charge of assault and battery with attempt to kill. He was locked up all night, and as a consequence there were no services at his church yesterday.

ENGLISH AND RUSSIAN MISSIONS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The Sun says nominations for English and Russian Missions will be sent to the Senate to-day. It is understood that Cortlandt Parker has been selected for the English Mission. It is reported that the Russian Mission will be filled by promotion from the present service, and that Goodloe, Minister to Belgium, will be promoted to St. Petersburg. In this event Nicholas Fish will succeed him.

IRISH RELIEF FUNDS.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19.—There are two Irish relief organizations in full operation here. At a mass meeting yesterday, called for the relief of the distress in Ireland, Dr. Carroll resisted a motion for the appointment of a committee to collect funds, charging that money raised for this purpose heretofore had been used to print scurrilous literature; that moneys had been misappropriated and mismanaged. He wanted no more disreputable men on such a committee. Considerable excitement was manifested, and the selection of a committee was postponed.

DISTRESS IN IRELAND.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Talmage yesterday made the famine in Ireland the subject of his sermon. He made an eloquent appeal for relief of the distress. The collection at the close was very large.

A DESERTED WIFE.

Mrs. Mary Ann White, of Brooklyn, committed suicide by drowning herself on Saturday night, because she had been deserted by her husband.

LARGE CUSTOM RECEIPTS.

Three and a half million dollars were paid at the Custom House last week for duties on imported goods, being the largest receipts in a single week in eight years.

THE TELEGRAPH COMPANIES WAR.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—There are indications that the impending war between the Western Union and American Union Telegraph Companies will be the fiercest ever known. The Western Union, two years ago, acquired the control of the Atlantic and Pacific Company, closed most of its offices, and used that company's wires for its own business. It is already reported that these offices will now be re-opened at all points where the American Union will compete. The wires of the Continental Telegraph Company are to be completed from New York to Washington under the auspices of the Western Union Company, and both the Atlantic and Pacific Company and the Continental Company will be used by the Western Union Company as dummies to fight the American Union with. Rates will probably be reduced by the Atlantic and Pacific and Continental Companies as low, and perhaps lower than the American Union Company can afford, while the Western Union rates will remain as they are now. The Western Union will work its wires if necessary from the offices of the Atlantic and Pacific and Continental Companies.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

RENEWED ANXIETY ON ACCOUNT OF THE MOHMUND OUTBREAK.

Acquiescence in British Interference—Suffering Among the Troops—Dissensions in the Camp of the Enemy.

A REWARD.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Mohmund outbreak renews the anxiety regarding Afghanistan. General Roberts reports no further hangings. The official telegram asserting that fifteen was the entire number of persons executed, though worded to indicate during the whole campaign, confessedly covers only the executions ordered since the recapture of Cabul. The Queen confers the Star of India as a mark of her appreciation of General Roberts' services in this last campaign.

NO FURTHER FEAR.

A Cabul correspondent quotes the opinion of high authority that there never has been so strong a combination in Afghanistan as the recent one. It having signally failed, no further combination need be feared. It seems reasonable to hope the interference of the British Government in the affairs of Afghanistan will be gradually acquiesced in by the Afghans. Martial law in Cabul has been suspended.

SICKNESS AMONG THE TROOPS.

A despatch from Cabul says the British troops are suffering from pneumonia. Another despatch says dissension has arisen among the Afghan leaders, and several disturbances have occurred in the Jellalabad district.

By Telegraph to the Review.

THE AFGHAN LEADERS.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A Cabul despatch says that dissensions have arisen among the Afghan leaders at Ghuzni. Mahomed Jan has gone to Zurmat, and Priest Muski Alim to Wardak.

A NEW GOVERNOR.

Sirdar Wali Mahomed, a son of the former Ameer, Dost Mahomed, has entered upon his duties as Governor of Cabul. He is the best choice Sir F. Roberts could make. He hopes doubtless to rise later to the Ameership.

EXTENDING HIS POSITION.

Gen. Roberts has been greatly extending his position.

Clearing Forests by Steam.

A company has been formed in Glasgow, Scotland, to operate in the forest lands of Oregon and Washington Territory, for the purpose of utilizing a process of clearing forests by steam, introduced into Scotland a few years since. A traction engine of twelve horse power is stationed some distance from the wood, and a wire chain is fastened to a tree. Steam is then put on, and the tree is pulled forcibly out by the roots. Upwards of 900 trees per day of ten hours can be pulled out by this process. The company will commence operations with fifty engines, which are now being manufactured for them, to be located and worked in different sections of the country, and it is calculated that in the course of a few years the whole north-west of the United States will be cleared and opened up for settlement.

THE CARRYING TRADE.

THE Monetary Times and Trade Review in a recent article enters very fully into the grain carrying trade of the continent, and in doing so gives some facts and figures which go to prove the great advantages which would be derived from the completion of the Trent Valley route. It quotes the report of the retiring controller of the State of New York on the trade of that State for the past year as saying:—"That New York can only retain it supremacy by the vigorous operation of her canals, and that he points out that if New York depended on her railways her receipts of grain would be considerably smaller than those of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston, and asserts that the water route must be credited with giving New York its supremacy not only as an exporting but as an importing port, because vessels return to those ports from which they receive outgoing cargoes." The "Erie ditch," therefore, not only gives New York its export trade, but is fairly entitled to a large share of the credit for its supremacy in the importing business.

As the Trent Valley route will, when completed, be infinitely superior to the "Erie ditch" for the grain trade of the west, it can scarcely be doubted that once completed, Montreal would rapidly outstrip New York as a grain exporting port, and therefore as a port of import to the manifest advantage of every Canadian interest.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

PUTTING IN TIME.

TORONTO, Jan. 16.—Were it not for the trivial discussions which are raised on motions for returns, the House would literally meet simply to adjourn. Here have our worthy Provincial rulers been in session nearly two days, and what have they done? This morning the various committees met, and performed the arduous duty of appointing their chairmen. After a while they will, no doubt, have to make up for the time they are now losing by "rushing" things, but why should this be done? Why should not the Public Accounts Committee at least have been at work all this week instead of its members kicking their heels in the smoking room for want of something better to do, and then at a future stage of the session, have to neglect this or some other equally important committee. The amount of it is a little more common sense and a little less redtapeism at the beginning of the session is sadly wanted to enable our representatives to properly perform their duties within a reasonable time. For instance, we can see no good reason why the standing committees might not all be got to work immediately upon the assembling of the Legislature, instead of as now, its taking a week or ten days to get them organized. Were this done and were all private bills printed and sent direct to the committees instead of going through the present red-tape process, the work of the session would be much more evenly distributed, and much better performed than at present.

OUR IRON MINES.

*For several years past the reports and rumours regarding iron deposits in our back country have largely engaged public attention, and so strong was the impression that there were vast beds of iron ore that one gentleman was induced to construct a branch railway to the mines. The hopes then formed have not hitherto been realized, and it is not impossible to disguise the fact that there has been a great deal of deception practised and a large amount of lying, duplicity, and misrepresentation. It is only now that we have to record a discovery of iron ore, in which the facts are fully disclosed, and the statements are thoroughly reliable. The following are the particulars:—

Mr. Thomas Paxton, M.P.P., in company with Mr. J. B. Campbell, discovered indications of an iron deposit on lot 5, con. 6, Lutterworth, about five miles from Kinmount. Mr. Paxton purchased the lots around from the Government, and at once made the necessary preparations for a thorough examination. His efforts were speedily rewarded by the discovery of a large vein of fine iron ore. He took samples to Professor Chapman, of Toronto, who analysed them, and gave the following certificate:—

Siliceous Rock Matter	23 17
The amount of Metallic Iron	55 12

This sample contains a comparatively large percentage of intermixed rock matter; but the ore itself is of good quality, being absolutely free from titanium, and practically free from phosphorous and sulphur. The rock-matter consists of pyroxene and a little quartz, and thus consists essentially of Silica, Magnesia, Lime, and a small amount of Ironoxide. It would be self-fluxing or nearly so.

E. J. CHAPMAN, Ph. D., &c.

Upon this Mr. Paxton proceeded to work, and hiring a gang of men opened the mine. The surface of the deposit is covered with a stratum of hornblende, varying in thickness from three inches to a couple of feet, and then comes the iron ore, a broad vein of great purity. Already Mr. Paxton has mined the deposit to a depth of twenty feet, and the vein increases in width and shows no sign of giving out. He has taken out several hundred tons of ore, and has shipped it at once to Cleveland. Mr. Paxton has no more to say about the mine than we have given above, except that the demand for the ore is very great and that he can sell all he can get out at a remunerative price. He has already got out more ore than Mr. Myles did the whole of last summer. He says he cannot pretend to say what is the extent of the mine, and admits that it may be merely a pocket, though he is of the opinion that if a pocket it is a very large one. He is still mining, still getting out ore, and is shipping as fast as it is got out. Should the mine be established as one capable of yielding a large supply of ore, the Victoria Railway will run a line for a tramway to the mine, the distance being less than two miles.

We regard this discovery of Mr. Paxton's as of the greatest consequence. We have hitherto not joined in the gloaming enthusiasm with which every announcement regarding 'minerals' in the back country has been received, but on the present occasion we do not hesitate to express our conviction that a most important discovery has been made, and one which will materially influence the fortunes of the back country.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

IT IS MAINTAINED THAT RUSSIA, so far from making preparations for war, actually reduced her army 36,000 below a peace-footing in December, and further peace measures and a further reduction of the army are contemplated.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE TOWN COUNCIL FOR THE PAST YEAR.

The Special Audit Again—Who Has Had the Benefit of the Money—The Toronto and Ottawa Railway.

The Council met in special session on Saturday, January 17th, at the call of the Mayor.

Present—The Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Smith, Butler, Paterson, Yelland, Douglas, Rutherford, Denne, Taylor and Robertson.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

Councillor DENNE asked if any answer had been received as to the proposed Toronto and Ottawa bill and the Ottawa by-law.

The MAYOR said in consequence of the illness of Mr. Scott, he had not asked him about the proposed act.

The CLERK read a communication from the City Clerk of Ottawa, enclosing a copy of their by-law granting a bonus to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, which was ordered to be filed.

FIRE ENGINE.

The CLERK read a letter from Henry Irving, giving an account of a steam fire engine offered for sale by the Chaudiere Steam Fire Engine Company, of Ottawa.

Councillor PATERSON explained that the Chief Engineer had seen an account of this engine being for sale, and had written for information.

THE SPECIAL AUDIT.

Councillor CAHILL brought in the report of the Finance Committee as follows:—

The Finance Committee beg leave to report that they held a meeting to take into consideration the report of the Special Auditors, who, with the Treasurer and Collector, were present.

The time at the disposal of your Committee was necessarily short and consequently we have been unable to thoroughly investigate the matters contained in the said report, but we do find that numerous errors and omissions were made in the preparation of the Collector's Rolls for several years, which consist in some instances of the taxes of parties on the Assessment Roll being entirely omitted from the Collector's Roll, and in other cases of partial omissions. It will require further investigation before a complete report can be made. The Treasurer has been requested to prepare certain statements which it is expected will materially assist in determining whether or not the Town has had the benefit of the monies in question. The annexed schedule, marked A, contains a list of persons whose assessments according to the Auditors' Report have not been placed on the Collector's Roll, and who appear by the said report as not having paid their taxes, but who have produced receipts or other evidences satisfactory to your Committee that they have paid their taxes.

Schedule B shows a partial list of persons whose taxes were partially omitted on the Collector's Rolls and shows the amount they should have paid, the amounts actually paid, and the deficiencies actually existing in each case. There are other matters referred to in said report which require further investigation.

Councillor DENNE said it had been reported round town that the special audit was wrong. Mr. Edwards had an opportunity afforded him of giving explanations, but he had not done so in a satisfactory manner to the Finance Committee. It was proved that money had been received both by the Treasurer and the Collector, but they did not know if the Town had received the benefit. He thought they should look to the Clerk.

The report was adopted.

Councillor DENNE moved, seconded by Councillor ROBERTSON,—That the Town Treasurer shall prepare a statement showing the amount of assessments for the year 1873—the amount received and the amount returned against lands, the balance, if any, how disposed of—also for the following years in like manner, for 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877 and 1878 of each and every year.—Carried.

Mr. HOGAN said they would not have made mistakes if the Treasurer had given them facilities. He had not furnished the special auditors with the settlements between him and the Collector. They reported on what was furnished them. While making out the report, they gave Mr. Edwards information of any errors that they found. They had done nothing with the intention of injuring Mr. Edwards.

OTTAWA AND PACIFIC JUNCTION R. R.

A memorial to the Dominion Government in favor of the Ottawa and Pacific Junction Railway read at the last meeting, was ordered to be signed and sealed.

TAXES REMITTED.

The MAYOR said that the taxes of several persons had been agreed to be remitted during the year by the Finance Committee and the collector had brought in a further list of persons from whom he could not collect. He had intended to have a report but there had not been time.

THE FIRE HALL.

Councillor PATERSON asked what had been done as to the account of Mr. J. E. Belcher, for a plan and report on the proposed addition to the fire hall.

Councillor CAHILL said it had not been reported on, as they waited for information from the Fire Committee.

Councillor PATERSON said it was correct.

The matter was left to the new Council.

RETIRING MEMBERS.

Councillor DENNE thought they should move a vote of thanks to the retiring members.

The Council then adjourned.

PORT HOPE.

NOT SO.—The Guide says:—We observe that the Globe mentions the Port Hope Times among journals which have helped to dry-nurse the Rag Baby. This is not correct, for we must do our local contemporary justice by saying that this is one of the few public questions on which it is perfectly rational.

THE NEW TOWN COUNCIL

THE FORMAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNCIL FOR THE CURRENT YEAR.

Very Liberal Payment for Competent Auditors—The Committee to Strike Standing Committees—Address from the Mayor.

The newly elected Town Council met according to statute at 11 o'clock this morning.

The Mayor J. J. Lundy, Esq., having been re-elected, took the chair.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

The Clerk reported that the following members of the Council of 1880 had filed their declaration of qualification and office.

MAYOR.—J. J. Lundy, Esq.

FIRST WARD.—Messrs. Cahill, Taylor and McNaughton.

SECOND WARD.—Messrs. Smith, Dunsford and Paterson.

THIRD WARD.—Messrs. Yelland, Douglas and Toole.

FOURTH WARD.—Messrs. Denne and Menzies.

These Councillors were all present, Mr. J. Sowers being the only one absent.

ADDRESS FROM THE MAYOR.

The MAYOR expressed his pleasure at meeting the incoming Council. He expressed his intention of doing his duty to the best of his ability, in which he would be assisted by the old Councillors whom he saw present. He spoke of the necessity for regular attendance, and of the importance of the work done in the committees which should be carefully considered. He expressed his intention of not offering himself for re-election next year.

The minutes of the special meeting of Saturday were read and confirmed.

AUDITORS.

The MAYOR nominated Allan Hay Macdougal as auditor.

The Council went into committee of the whole on the by-law appointing auditors.

Councillor CAHILL nominated J. J. Hall for the second auditor.

Councillor TOOLE nominated Edgcombe Pearse. One matter that would come before the auditors for the year would be the investigation of the Town Trust Debenture Accounts, and the drawing up of statements showing the whole dealings with them. This Mr. Pearse would do efficiently and without additional remuneration.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON seconded Mr. Hall.

Councillor DENNE seconded Mr. Pearse.

Councillor PATERSON nominated Mr. Eastland, but had no seconder.

Councillor CAHILL said he had no doubt that Mr. Pearse would make an excellent auditor, but he thought Mr. Hall would be equally efficient, and would be willing to see to the Town Trust accounts without additional remuneration.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON spoke in favor of Mr. Hall.

The vote was in favor of Mr. Edgcombe Pearse.

The by-law in addition to the ordinary duty of the auditors required them to compare the Assessment and Collector's Rolls and report errors and make complete statements in book form of the past history of the Town Debentures and their present position. The salary was fixed at $60, after some discussion the Mayor alluded to the much larger sum that had been paid to the special auditors for a comparatively small amount of work.

The by-law was put through its remaining stages.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR,—That Messrs. Paterson, Smith, Taylor, Douglas, Toole and Denne be a Special Committee to draft the Standing Committees for the current year, and that they report this evening.

The Council then adjourned till the evening.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

The following is given by Whitaker's Almanac as the extent and population of the British Empire at the beginning of 1880:—

	Area in sq. mls.	Population
Great Britain and Ireland	121,570	34,000,000
Indian Possessions, etc	1,460,000	241,000,000
Other Eastern Possessions	30,000	2,300,000
Australasia	3,173,310	2,500,000
North America	3,620,500	4,000,000
Guiana, etc	120,000	300,000
Africa	270,000	1,800,000
West Indies, etc	12,757	1,300,000
European Possessions	120	160,000
Various Settlements	24,171	200,000
	8,852,177	287,000,000

The same authority says:—"This table, short as it is, presents a result unparalleled in this world's history. The British Empire is grander than those of Greece or Rome, or any other country, and it may be safely asserted that its rule is more beneficent. Wherever the flag of England floats there is freedom. Justice is impartially administered, and no man can be punished except for infringements of the law. Religion also is free. With all its anomalies the British Empire, under its present sovereign, presents the nearest approach to a true Commonwealth that the world has yet seen."

MR. VENNOR AGAIN.

More Mild Weather with Cold Dips—Wintry February and March.

The following letter appears in the Montreal Witness:—

SIR,—The peculiar nature and short duration of the "dip" on the night of the 10th and morning of the 11th days, gives one a further insight into the probable behavior of the weather for the remainder of this month and for February, and strengthens my former impression respecting the severe and wintry character of the latter month. I see, then, clearly, we are yet to have some remarkably mild and slushy, possibly rainy, weather between now and the end of the month, over a great extent of country. This is, however, will probably be interrupted by a cold term and "dip" on the 19th, 20th, 21st or 20th, 21st and 22nd days, the severity of which may be greater or less, but decided enough to be noted; and that this term will terminate in a fair snow-fall and mildness again. I think that the end of the month will, with the exception of one day's "dip," be mild again, and that February will enter in the same manner. After the entry of February I bid adieu to mildness and slush for a season. Possibly the first week of this month may continue moderate, but it is probable that either the 4th or 5th day will see the mercury settling down to the uncomfortable points I have alluded to, and for a second time this winter registering a series of very low readings. This dip will moderate in some heavy snow-falls, and the month will give us more snow than we have yet had this winter. A second dip is probable further on in the same month, also severe, but this I cannot locate precisely from my present standpoint. March bids fair to give the heaviest snow-falls of the winter of 1880, but these will not delay the early arrival of spring.

H. G. V.

Montreal, 15th January, 1880.

THE Duke of Devonshire, if not a very remarkable man, is unquestionably a very remarkable Duke. He graduated at Cambridge when twenty-one, as second wrangler, thus only missing by one place the very highest honor the University can bestow, and Smith's prizeman—an honor only second to first wrangler, and generally going with it—and the same year was returned as one of the representatives in Parliament of the University, an honor without a parallel in a man of his years.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address,—

THE TAY BRIDGE DISASTER.

Items of Interest—The Capital Lying Idle—The Structure to be Repaired.

It is considered certain that the wreckage thrown up at Broughty Ferry and along the shore quite accounts for all the missing carriages and vans that fell into the Tay on the night of the 28th. It is thought all the bodies have been washed out to sea.

Four new names of missing persons have been received; those of Peebles, a gardener, who was returning to Dundee from the funeral of his father-in-law; Mr. G. [illegible], a Caledonian goods guard; Mrs. Nicoll, wife of David Nicoll, baker, Dundee; and John Scot, a young man returning to his friends from America.

Only one body has been washed ashore, and it has been identified as that of Ann Cruickshank, a lady's maid.

During the examination of the iron columns of the bridge, which are still hanging in bunches round the tops of each of the piers, it was found that they were filled, some apparently with cement, but others clearly with nothing but sand.

The capital practically lying idle, owing to this disaster, is represented by the following figures, which reach a total of nearly a million sterling:—Cost of bridge, £480,000; cost of bridge station, with tunnel communicating with line to the north, £266,000; the Montrose and Arbroath Railway now being constructed as a link in the Tay Bridge system, £150,000; Suburban Railway, between Newport and Tayport, for traffic to Dundee by the bridge, £74,000.

It appears that the last train which safely crossed the bridge was so affected by the wind that the wheels of the engine grated against the guard-rail, and caused a continuous shower of sparks.

It has been ascertained from the tickets taken up, that, including officials, there were seventy-five on board the train. The number of children under three years of age was about ten or fifteen, making the whole number of lives lost eighty-five or ninety. The disaster materially affects the relations of the two great railway interests in Scotland; and it consequently produced a great influence on the Stock Exchange. Its effect was seen in the sheer fall of North British stock of 10 per cent, and a rise in Caledonian of 4½ per cent. The ultimate consequences of the calamity to the North British can scarcely yet be fully foreseen. The compensation which the Company may have to pay, it is feared, will be heavy; and the cost of repairing the Bridge is estimated at about £150,000. The Directors of the North British Company have already resolved to repair the structure.

The Solicitors' Journal is already discussing the liability of the North British Railway Company in the matter of the Tay Bridge disaster. Common sense would decide that a company is bound to provide viaducts which shall be safe. To admit that a railway company, with a view to economy, can build a bridge too narrow to resist a gale of wind, necessitating the passengers opening the windows of the carriage when crossing, so that the pressure of the wind might be lessened, is to give non-liability a very wide scope, and place security in the hands of economists. True economy railway directors cannot understand. The only thing they comprehend is compensation and the most ingenious way to avoid paying it.

THE "AURORA."

The New Vatican Daily—Pope Leo XIII. as a Journalist.

The first number of the Aurora, the new Vatican daily, will be published about January 14. The Pope himself will direct the journal through the apparent and responsible director, Mgr. Balan, a learned and [illegible] prelate, who is the author of a good translation of Rohrbacher's (French) "History of the Catholic Church."

Leo XIII., although generally not very liberal towards the press, has placed 100,000f. at Mgr. Balan's disposal for the expenses of the foundation of the Aurora, and has also indicated to him several persons well calculated to act as sub-editors. His Holiness, aided by a sort of literary council, will probably revise the articles of the new journal. Mgr. Balan is sub-archivist of the Holy See, and will not lose that office by becoming director of the Aurora. Another prelate of the Pope's immediate circle, Mgr. Ciccolini, director of the Giornale di Roma before the 20th September, 1870, and lately promoted by Leo XIII. to the dignities of cameriere partecipante and secretary of embassy, will aid Mgr. Balan in his task.

The third authority on the editorial staff will be Mgr. Schiaffino, Director of the Academy of Noble Ecclesiastics. The Pope's object is to endow the Holy See with a serious organ, respectable in itself and respected by its adversaries and likely to succeed in diffusing the doctrines of St. Thomas, in favor of which Leo XIII. so impressively raised his voice in the Encyclica published some months ago, to which the formal adhesions of the Catholic bishops of Christendom are published successively every evening in the Osservatore.

The motto heading the Aurora will be "Diligite homines, interficite errores."

The new journal will be an economical paper, as it will only cost a soldo, whereas the Osservatore and the Voce cost two. The Unita Cattolica of Turin, perhaps the best known and most fervent Catholic journal of Italy, which has also cost two soldi hitherto, has been just reduced to the price of one soldo, but the old established papers evidently consider that the new comer is introducing dangerous innovations.

EFFECT OF A LECTURE.

Miss Corson's lecture on cooking had a singular effect upon the wife of a gentleman residing in Washington. The gentleman was awakened from a sound sleep about two o'clock in the morning by a flood of gaslight in the chamber, coming from the jets in the chandelier, burning at full head. Standing over him, evidently in a somnambulistic state, and in a pose closely resembling that of the late Charlotte Cushman in the celebrated sleep-walking scene of Lady Macbeth, stood his wife, while in either hand, and ominously flashing in the gaslight, she grasped the mammoth carving knife and fork. Curious to know just what was going to be the denouement of this singular scene, he kept quiet, while the lady soliloquized:—"Hold the carver in an easy position in the right hand, thus," and she dipped the point of the huge knife as gracefully as a fencing master in the broadsword exercise. "Then," continued the culinary student, "bend slightly the left wrist and insert the fork in the breast of the turkey, one prong on either side of the breast bone," and suiting the action to the word, she was about to plunge the fork into her husband's anatomy, about where the ribs join the sternum, when he caught and disarmed her. She drew back and glared at him for a moment, and then, pushing back the sleeves of her robe de nuit, pointed her finger toward him and exclaimed, in a loud, theatrical manner:—"The only way to reach your husband's heart is through his stomach!" Since that night this gentleman has slept in another apartment, with the door bolted and a stack of trunks piled up against it.

On Christmas day an extraordinary game of foot-ball took place in the streets of Kirkwall. At one o'clock a ball was thrown up at the Market Cross, and immediately a scrimmage commenced, in which at least 500 young men took part. There were no sides chosen, or any rules regulating the game, but those residing above the Market Cross tried to get the ball up the street, while the opposite side fought to take it to the harbour. After more than an hour's fight, the "up" party managed to get the ball to the junction with the Scapa Road. The struggle was there renewed, and long continued with great violence. Some damage was done to property.

A meeting of the Aberdeen branch of the Gaelic School Society was held lately, when the chairman, Mr. W. Henderson, of Devanha House, stated the object of the society was for the purpose of getting children of Gaelic-speaking parents to read the Scriptures in their own tongue. It was formed in 1811, and was subsequently re-organised in 1821. During all these years it had been the means of doing much good in the Highlands in teaching young people the Gaelic language, for the purpose of reading the Scriptures in their own tongue. The income of the society last year had been about £800, while they would require about £2,000 for the purpose of being able to meet the wants of the children in the Highlands. In the last year's report he found that a committee had been making inquiries in reference to the necessity for the teaching of Gaelic, and they stated that there are 300 schools, with an attendance of 18,500, who required to be taught to read in Gaelic. In five-sixths of these schools no Gaelic was taught, and in the other sixth it was only partially taught.

Relating His Experience at Home.

"It's astonishin'," remarked the old forty-niner this morning as he nodded over his glass to our reporter, "it's astonishin' what a coward a man is at home—a reg'lar crawlin' sneak, by Jove! I've travelled a good bit and held up my end in most o' the camps on the coast since '49. I've got three bullets inside o' me. I've shot an' been shot at, an' never heard nobody say I hadn't as good grit as most fellers that's goin'. But at home I'm a kyote. Afore I'd let the old woman know that her hot biscuit wasn't A1 when its like stiff amalgam, I'd fill myself as full as a retort. I've done it lots o' times. Most o' my teeth is gone from tuggin' on beefsteaks that the old woman has fried. D'ye think I roar out and cuss when I go over a chair in the dark? No, Sir. While I'm rubbin' my shins an' keepin' back the tears I'm likewise [illegible] fur fear the old woman has been woke by the racket. [illegible] to be so," sighed the poor fellow, thoughtfully rubbing his shining scalp. "When we was first hitched I thought I was superintendent, but after a year or two of scrapin' the plat I settled down to shovin' the car at low wages. I can lick any man o' my age an' size," cried the old gentleman, banging the saloon table with his wrinkled fist. "I'll shoot, knife, stand up or rough and tumble for coin, but when I hang my hat on the peg an' take off my muddy boots, an' hear the old woman ask if that's me, I tell you the starch comes right out o' me."

Education of Women.

Miss Rogers, a cousin of Richard Cobden, is the prodigy in the last examinations at Oxford University, England. She outstripped all the other students in Greek and Latin. Her knowledge in other branches is quite as wonderful. After passing her examination she was at once appointed lecturer in Sommerville Hall, one of the Oxford buildings for women students. After this who will question the mental ability of the fair sex. The young men in the universities will have to look well to their laurels or else before long they will not only be outstripped in scholarship but have precious little share in any of the emoluments that have hitherto fallen to them by right of sex and station.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

MONDAY, Jan. 19.—The market is still unsettled and drooping. The millers bid $1.20 for spring, and the shippers had no disposition to bid over them. Fall wheat shared the same fate, and lower prices had to be accepted. We quote to-day fall wheat at $1.21 @ $1.22, and spring wheat at $1.19 @ $1.20. There were a few lots of peas brought in, but there is no change of price to note. Some clover seed is still coming forward, and is being taken for shipment. We quote it at $4.00 @ $4.50 per bushel. Several loads of hay were in on orders; no change in quotations.

Wallack's Orchestra.—The orchestra of Wallack's Theatre, New York, is famous for its extraordinary precision. This is due entirely to Thomas Baker, an Englishman, who has conducted it for years. Mr. Baker used to suffer terribly from rheumatism, but now is as supple and nimble as a school boy. He ascribes his freedom, as he ought, to Giles' Liniment Iodide Ammonia.

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. wd11-1m

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. w4d13-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native Isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. wd11-1m

Nervous Debility.

Vital weakness or depression, a weak exhausted feeling, no energy or courage, the result of mental overwork, indiscretions or excesses, or some drain upon the system, is always cured by Victoria Hypophosphites. It tones up and invigorates the system, dispels the gloom and despondency, imparts strength and energy, stops the drain, renovates the entire system, purifying the blood, increasing the appetite, and giving the stomach a healthy tone for food. Sold by all dealers. w4d13-2w

Time never sets so heavily on the aged as when they are ill and depressed. A heavy percentage of old people suffer from kidney complaints, etc., brought on by derangements of the secretory organs, who will hail with joy the great remedy prepared expressly to meet their case—Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. It can be recommended with confidence. For sale by all dealers. w4d13-2w

Hagyard's Yellow Oil combines in such an eminent degree all the healing, curative and extracting qualities known to medical science, that it is truly a family medicine that cannot be dispensed with. When applied to any Swelling, Sore, Burn, Chilblain, Frostbites, Skin Eruption, etc., it [illegible] and [illegible]. LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY COMPANY.

The Old Directors Re-Elected—Satisfactory Reports of the President, the Treasurer and the Superintendent.

In accordance with advertisement the annual meeting of this Company was held in the Council Chamber on Monday, the 19th inst., at 12.30 p. m., there being a large number of stockholders present, Rev. Mr. Clementi, President, in the Chair.

The President opened the meeting by reading the notice calling the meeting, and then read the following

ANNUAL REPORT.

On behalf of the Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company I beg to submit for the information of the stockholders the following report of our proceedings for the past twelve months.

At the first meeting of the Directors, which was held shortly after the annual general meeting in 1879, a committee, consisting of myself with Messrs. J. J. Lundy and Stevenson, was appointed to consider the advisability of purchasing from Mr. John Burnham a small gore of land consisting of about one-third of an acre, being a portion of Park Lot No. 6, lying between the street and the lake, immediately in front of the caretaker's house.

The committee thus appointed went accordingly to inspect and value the lot in question, and arrived at the conclusion that in order to free the Company from the chance, not a remote one, of the lot being purchased by other parties, in the event of our failing to secure it, and some small and unsightly building being erected thereon, it was worth the sum of one hundred dollars to the Company, the sum previously asked for the same lot having been $300.

The committee having reported to the Board, the Secretary was instructed to write to Mr. Burnham, offering him $100 for the lot. The offer was accepted, and the title, submitted to our solicitor, proving satisfactory, the purchase was completed.

When the lot thus came into our possession it was found necessary to construct some crib work on the lake side of the lot and to fence it in, and authority was given to the committee to carry out such improvements, as planting, &c., as they might deem proper.

I was also authorised to memorialize the Town Council respecting the encroachment of the river on the street leading to the Cemetery, which I did to the following effect :—

Peterborough, May 31, 1879.

To the Mayor and Councillors of the Town of Peterborough :

GENTLEMEN,—On behalf of the Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Co., I beg to draw your attention to the condition of the street leading to the Cemetery, and to express a hope that, in the interest of the community at large, you will adopt such means as may be deemed advisable for preserving the road from utter destruction.

The Lake is constantly encroaching upon the road, and, year by year, washing away portions of the embankment, so that if nothing be done to resist this encroachment, it is to be apprehended that, ere many years have elapsed, the street will be altogether lost.

We suggest that cribwork would be the most effectual method of securing the road, and we invite you to consider that, if it is to be saved at all, the longer the delay in performing the work, the greater will be the expense.

As this is a matter which is of importance, not only to the inhabitants of the entire town, but also to those of the surrounding country, we trust you will see the necessity of prosecuting the required work with as little delay as possible.

I am, Gentlemen, your obedient servant,

VINCENT CLEMENTI,
Pres. Cem. Co.

The result of this communication was that the Council carried on the cribwork for some distance west of our lot, and it is confidently hoped that, seeing the importance of the work, a still further addition will be made in the direction of the town.

When not otherwise employed the caretaker has occupied his time in cleaning and improving vacant lots, with the view of promoting the sale of such lots. His report will show, among other things, the number of lots so improved (over 130), as well as the number sold (25), during the past twelvemonth.

Although I do not hear of any complaints as to the price charged for lots, it seems that exception is occasionally taken to the charge made for deeds; and, as in the sale of other property, it is customary for the vendor to give a free deed to the purchaser, I think, considering the satisfactory condition of our finances, that it would be well that we should adopt that plan in future, and not make any charge for our deeds.

The Treasurer has now the sum of $840 in hand.

The Directors, in conclusion, have to express their entire satisfaction at the manner in which the Superintendent has discharged his duties during the past year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

VINCENT CLEMENTI,
President.

On motion of MR. J. F. DENNISTOUN, seconded by MR. MORROW, the report was received and adopted.

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The TREASURER then read and submitted the following report :—

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, in account with the Company for 1879 :—

MR. KINGAN suggested that in future the Treasurer's statement should be printed and distributed some days before the annual meeting, so that they might have an opportunity of considering it before being called to pass upon it. The suggestion was generally concurred in, and will no doubt be adopted next year.

On motion of MR. CARNEGIE, seconded by MR. STAPLETON,—Messrs. J. J. Hall and Edg. Pearse were appointed Auditors, and the Treasurer's statement was referred to them.

THE SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

Mr. Kelly, Superintendent, read the following report :—

JOHN KELLY,
Superintendent.

Little Lake Cemetery, January 19th, 1880.

Mr. Morrow suggested that the Directors should consider the propriety of setting aside a sum of money, the interest of which should be devoted to taking care of the lots generally, as the beauty of the Cemetery was marred by all the lots not being equally cared for, and concluded by moving that the report be referred to the Auditors, which was carried.

THE ELECTION OF DIRECTORS.

MESSRS. JAMES F. DENNISTOUN and JAMES CAMPBELL were appointed scrutineers, and the vote being by ballot resulted in the election of the following Directors for the current year, viz :—

Wm. Eastland	101 "

Literary Association.

The regular weekly meeting of the Peterboro' Literary Association will be held this evening at half-past seven o'clock, in a room in the Mechanics' Institute. Besides the regular debate, readings, etc., there will be an address by the President, Mr. Jeffers, so that a more than usually interesting meeting may be expected.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are : Cloudy to partly cloudy weather with light rain in some localities ; followed to-morrow with north-westerly to westerly winds and colder weather. Peterborough has had cloudy to partly cloudy, rainy weather since Saturday. To-day there is a change to partly cloudy, clearing weather, with south-easterly to south-westerly winds. The thermometer indicated both yesterday and to-day 40°, where it stood at 12 o'clock; at 2 o'clock it indicated 44°

The Lost Cows.

Last week two cows were advertised as having strayed away, and no tidings could be had of their whereabouts until yesterday, when they were discovered jammed between a pile of lumber and the fence near Hilliard's mills. One cow, belonging to John McGee, it seems fell upon the ice in such a manner as to be entirely helpless, and was found dead. The other cow, belonging to Patrick Tagney, in company with McGee's cow, was also down but not dead, though she will die. The spot where they were was very icy and uneven ; it was about 1,000 feet from McGee's house.

Sabbath School Anniversary.

As announced in our issue of Saturday, Rev. Mr. Starr preached the sermon to the children attending the George Street Methodist Sabbath School, on Sunday morning last. The children filled the body of the church and adjacent seats in the side aisles. The Rev. Mr. Starr took his text from 2nd Samuel, and was most happy in his remarks, engrossing the undivided attention of his youthful congregation. "The King's Ferry-boat," was the text epitomized, and with the admirable illustrations given by the Rev. Mr. Starr, conveyed to the children a lesson of vital importance. In the evening the Rev. Dr. Harper preached to a large congregation an able sermon bearing on the Sabbath Schools as a vital aid to the church, whose importance could not be overrated.

The DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents a week.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw81-ly

AN ENTIRELY NEW FEATURE!

How to Obtain the Leading Papers and Save Money.

FAIR, SQUARE AND, RELIABLE OFFERS.

WITH the year 1880, the WEEKLY REVIEW will enter on its 28th year of publication. Splendid Clubbing Advantages.

The Proprietors of the REVIEW have great pleasure in announcing that they have made arrangements with the publishers of the following leading periodicals in Canada and the United States, by which they are enabled to club these periodicals with the WEEKLY REVIEW at remarkably low prices.

READ CAREFULLY.—Below are three columns of figures. The name of the paper or magazine is given, and the FIRST column gives the REGULAR PUBLISHER'S PRICE. It is certainly an object to save money these times, and it is easy to see by our Club List how it can be done.

SILK MANUFACTORY.—A Canada Silk Manufacturing Company is being formed here with a capital of $50,000.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—On the question of railway extension, the Gazette, editorially, says:—"There is probably no more important commercial question before the people of Montreal than that of increasing the advantages of the port as a depot for the receipt and shipment of the grain crop of the great West." Next in importance comes the construction of the Pacific Junction Railway to Sault Ste. Marie, there to connect with the line from St. Paul to the Sault.

TORONTO.

Special to the Review, Jan. 20.

EXEMPT PROPERTY.—The York County Council has petitioned the Legislature for amendments to the municipal code respecting the liability of corporations for accidents resulting from roads being out of repair. It is held that while so much property is exempt from paying its quota towards the construction and repair of highways, it is unfair to hold municipalities responsible for accidents occuring in front of such exempt property. There is between forty and fifty million dollars worth of property exempt in this city alone.

HEAVY CALENDAR.—The calendar at the assizes which open to-morrow is very heavy.

OTTAWA.

Special to the Review, Jan. 20.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The Governor-General attended the concert at the Opera House in aid of the poor of all creeds and denominations. The Governor-General leaves on the 27th inst. for Halifax.

SMALL-POX HOSPITAL.—The small-pox hospital now in course of erection in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, Sandy Hill, is almost completed. The residents of Sandy Hill have petitioned the Minister of the Interior, protesting against the erection of the hospital. An attempt has been made to fire it.

The crusade is to be carried into other branches of trade, and before the end of the month, the department expects to confiscate many hundreds of these spring balance weights.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines.

A NEW FRONTIER PROVINCE.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A correspondent at Lahore has reason to believe a new frontier Province will soon be organized. It will include the portion of the Khyber and Kurum valleys mentioned by the Gundamuk treaty, with a part of the Scinde, with the River Indus for an eastern boundary.

MIDNIGHT TELEGRAMS

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines

CABLE.

ABOLITION OF SLAVERY.

MADRID, Jan. 19.—The Cuban members of the Diet will to-day present an amendment to the bill for the abolition of slavery, asking the Government to promise tariff reforms to facilitate the Cuban trade with foreign countries, and to declare the previleges of the coasting trade extended to the West Indian Provinces. If their demands are rejected, the Creole members will not favor the ministerial bill, which will also be opposed by the Liberals, should their abstention from participating in the proceedings cease on Monday, as is generally expected from the attitude of the dynastic Liberals, who were much pleased with their reception by the King on the occasion of the presentation of the address congratulating him on his recent escape from assassination.

GERMAN INTERESTS IN SAMOA.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—In the Prussian Diet today, the Minister of Finance said that the Government could not oppose Prince Bismarck's national aims in regard to the Samoan question, that it was very essential that German interests in Samoa be supported by German energy and resources. An official telegram from the German Consul states that the whole of Samoa has recognized King Malietoa.

M. FERRY'S EDUCATION BILL.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A Paris correspondent is informed on the best of authority that article 7 of the Ferry Education Bill is certain to obtain a majority in the Senate.

THE SPANISH MINORITY.

MADRID, Jan. 19.—A Madrid despatch says the Opposition have unanimously resolved that no reasons exist for discontinuing the policy of abstention because the President of the Cortes is not empowered to propose the settlement, which they deem necessary for their dignity. Another despatch reports that a Council of Ministers will be held to determine the line of conduct to be adopted by the Government, in consequence of the attitude of the Opposition. The intelligence that the Opposition had decided to abstain from taking their seats created general surprise. Ministerialists are much irritated. The Creole deputies are disgusted, as the slavery abolition will now be passed with but little resistance.

MARRIAGE ANNULLED.

ROME, Jan. 19.—An appeal has been lodged in the case of Prince Albert, of Monaco, whose marriage with Lady Mary Hamilton was annulled on the 3rd instant, by the special Congregation of Cardinals.

AFTERNOON TELEGRAMS

Press Despatches to the Review via Cable and Montreal Lines.

CABLE.

THE PRICE OF CHEESE.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 20.—Cheese is quoted at 72 shillings.

OURAY'S VIEWS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says that Ouray told General Fisk yesterday that he would not consent to the removal of his people from Colorado. He looks upon the demand that he shall surrender the murderers of Meeker as an absurdity. Ouray thinks it will be a good plan for the Government to redeem its pledges to the Utes, before they enter into further negotiations.

THE UNITED STATES AND JAPAN.

TOKIO, Jan. 3.—There is much surprise over the announced intention of Japan to fix higher customs duties upon American than upon English imports. The remonstances of the United States Minister will doubtless prove effective.

THE POPE INDIGNANT.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—A Rome despatch says the Pope is surprised and indignant at Cardinal McCloskey's reception of Parnell in New York, and has ordered the Secretary of State to telegraph to Cardinal McCloskey for information. The Pope is confined to his bed.

A considerable part of the foreign district is destroyed, including several missionary establishments and one church. The Legation of the United States was in danger but he escaped. The loss of life was about one hundred.

WAGNER'S HEALTH.

NAPLES, Jan. 20.—Wagner, the composer, is here with his health greatly improved.

A PRIEST DEFIED.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Near Balla, in County Mayo, on Sunday the Parish Priest ordered a meeting in favor of the National Land League to disperse, and said he would not have any secret organizations in his parish. The crowd became excited, cheered Parnell, and refused to disperse.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

DUBLIN, Jan. 20.—An earnest appeal to the people of the United States had been issued by by the Mansion House Committee for the relief of the distress in Ireland. The appeal says the distress is daily increasing in area and intensity. It was almost impossible to avert absolute famine in very many places.

AMERICAN.

AWAITING CARGOES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—There never was a time in the history of New York when so many vessels lay in harbour awaiting cargoes. This situation is mainly due to the stagnation in the grain and provision markets.

CHINESE NEWS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—The advices by steamer from China are as follows:—Hong Kong, Dec. 24. Chung How, who has just returned from St. Petersburg, now occupies the chief position of influence at the Imperial Court. He is a strong advocate of exclusive Chinese rights. Reports are circulated of new proposals for treaty amendments, all tending to the resumption of complete control over all the ports by China, and the assertion of the same rights over foreign residents as over native subjects. Owing to strong intercessions from foreign private sources. The barbarous sentences of mutilation passed upon the surviving relatives of Yakub, ex-Ruler of Kashgar have been commuted to life imprisonment.

NEW RAILWAY COMBINATION.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The Times says the consolidation of the Union Pacific and the Kansas Pacific Railways has been agreed upon. The Union Pacific is to issue new stock to take up the stock of the Kansas Pacific Company at the market rate. As Gould holds most of the Kansas Pacific stock, he will thus obtain Union Pacific stock in exchange for it, and will again secure the absolute control of the Union Pacific. The consolidation gives the Union Pacific another eastern outlet by way of Cheyenne to Denver and Kansas City. Under the United States law the Union Pacific is compelled to prorate at Omaha, its other eastern terminus, with all the roads running eastward from that point. No such restriction is imposed at Kansas City, where Gould's famous south-western system of roads begins. Thus at one stroke the entire Pacific coast traffic is given over bodily to the Wabash system. The Chicago and Rock Island, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and particularly the Chicago and North-West, Gould's old enemy, all of whom have termini at Omaha, will be the principal sufferers.

THE FUSIONIST LEGISLATURE.

AUGUSTA, Jan. 20.—The Fusionist Legislature was called to order at 10 o'clock in Union Hall. In the House Dickey said he had confidence that this body would be recognized as the legal Legislature by the Courts as well as by Congress. In fact he had an assurance to this effect.

A COUNTERFEITOR ARRESTED.

NORTH TROY, Vt., Jan. 20.—Mark L. Bannister, of Troy, was arrested under a requisition from the Governor-General of Canada for passing counterfeit bills on the State National Bank of Troy, N.Y. Bannister has borne an excellent reputation.

A CLERGYMAN INHIBITED.

Bishop Littlejohn has prohibited the Rev. J. W. Sparks, an English Episcopal clergyman, from conducting the services for a small congregation in Brooklyn. Sparks is an Ultra High Churchman.

ENDORSING PARNELL.

The World says that the action of the House in allowing Parnell and Dillon to speak in the Hall of Representatives is commented upon as a bad precedent. It may compromise the Government by seeming to endorse the Parnell movement.

A COSTLY YACHT.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 20.—Henri Say, who started on a trip round the world in the yacht Henriette has decided to remain in the United States until the completion of the new $200,000 yacht, which he has ordered to be built here.

GRANT AND CONKLING.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The Herald's Albany despatch says it is responsibly reported here that Grant stated in Philadelphia that he no longer reposes the same degree of confidence in Conkling which the Senator formerly enjoyed.

THE SEAL OF STATE.

The Herald's Augusta despatch says the Fusionist programme is understood to be an adjournment to-morrow to some indefinite time, perhaps to the call of Governor Smith. It is believed that they will establish a regular Government, with officers, in the different departments. They possess the Seal of State. The safe in the Secretary of State's Office was broken open yesterday, but the seal was not found.

OPENING A SAFE.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 20.—Machinists worked all night on the safe in the Secretary's office. No valuable papers were in it. It is believed that the election returns have been destroyed.

Daily Evening Review

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1880.

NOT AN N.P. MONOPOLY.

THERE is an old saying that when rogues fall out honest men get their own, and, although we do not wish to be understood as intimating that those engaged in publishing the authorized text books for our schools are rogues, we are confident that if the Minister of Education does his duty, the honest parents of Ontario children will be largely benefitted by the "falling-out," which has taken place among the Toronto publishers in question.

From the correspondence going on in the Globe it would appear that Mr. W. Warwick had undertaken to sell the "readers" to retailers at prices under those of other publishers. Finding that this was interfering with their business, his competitors first endeavored to convince Mr. Warwick of the error of his ways, and failing in this, they set about driving him out of the school-book trade by refusing to sell to him upon any terms those authorized books, of which they controlled the copyright, and therefore the sole right of publication. Of course it would be useless for the retailer to go to Mr. Warwick for the "readers" unless he could supply them with all authorised school-books, and as he could no longer do that, every dealer in school-books would speedily be compelled to close their account with him and transfer it to one of his rivals. This being the position, Mr. Warwick, in self-defence, has been compelled to appeal to the Minister of Education and to the public against the monopoly which is trying to crush him, and, if Mr. Warwick's statements are correct, is wringing thousands of dollars per annum out of the pockets of the parents of school children by charging exhorbitant prices for school books.

But whatever the merits of the quarrel between these gentlemen, Mr. Warwick makes an offer which the Minister of Education should at once put to a practical test. His offer is that upon the copyrights of the other authorized school books being placed in the same position as that of the "readers," he will enter into bonds to the extent of $50,000 to publish the following works so that the retail price thereof can be reduced as follows:—

	Present Retail Price. cents.	Proposed Retail Price. cents.
Todhunter's Algebra	60	30
Edith Thompson's History of England	65	40
Hamblin Smith's Algebra	90	60
Hamblin Smith's Arithmetic	75	37½
Jeffers' Canada	30	15
Miller's Swinton	25	20
Campbell's Geography	75	60
Mason's Grammar	75	35
Kirkland's Statics	100	40
Hamblin Smith's Statics	90	60
Hamblin Smith's Hydrostatics	75	37½
Beatty & Clare's Bookkeeping	70	40

A reduction, which, if practical, would certainly be of great advantage to the public—especially that large portion of it which finds these same school books a very serious item in the cost of educating their children.

It may be, in fact it is said that it would be unjust to deprive the authors of these text-books of the royalty which they are now receiving from the publishers and which Mr. Warwick proposes should be assumed by the Department, but it is to be borne in mind that it is the Department, which, by making them "authorized" gives them their value, and therefore the Minister of Education would not only be justified, but it is his duty to either insist upon their compilers accepting a reasonable sum for their interest in them, or withdraw his authorization, which would render them worthless. As Mr. Warwick very truly observes in one of his letters, the publishing of these "authorized" school books is a very different thing from the publication of ordinary books. No matter what the intrinsic merits of the work, the moment it is authorised an enormous sale is guaranteed, and therefore the publisher can well afford to sell them at a small advance on the cost of paper, ink and binding. While in ordinary cases, it is a pure matter of speculation, owing to the sale of the work depending entirely upon the uncertain taste and fancies of the public.

Taking everything into consideration, we are convinced that this embroglio affords Mr. Crooks a splendid opportunity of doing the Province a real service, by reducing very materially the cost of what most parents have found to be a trying if not unnecessary tax on their pockets, and it only remains to be seen whether he will avail himself of it or not.

THE LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

THE annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company this year excited unusual interest, and there was a large attendance of shareholders, who seemed well satisfied with the position of affairs. There is good reason for this since our beautiful cemetery is one of the things of which Peterborough may be proud, its great natural advantages having been improved by the good taste and thoughtful management of the Directors and the successive Superintendants.

The suggestion of Mr. Stratton (which was by error attributed to Mr. Hatton) that the Directors should set aside a fund to be devoted to taking care of the lots generally, is well worth their consideration. There are some lots, which from their neglected condition, are blots amidst the generally beautiful scene. At the same time no more should be attempted than would ensure neatness, leaving to the owners the charge of ornamenting their lots according to their taste and their care for the last resting place of those they have lost.

Mr. Kingan's suggestion that the Treasurer's statement should be printed and distributed a few days before the annual meeting is also a good one and worthy of adoption.

Some observation was called forth by the way in which the ballot was taken. It would be well for the Secretary to have the list of shareholders before him, and when taking the ballot to ascertain the name and number of lots of the voter, so as to avoid the possibility of ballots being cast by those who have not a right to vote.

OUR RIVERS.

The following detail of works constructed on the Otonabee river and its affluents in 1879, and of those recommended for 1880, appears in the Report of the Commissioner of Public Works for Ontario:—

GULL AND BURNT RIVER WORKS.

The works constructed under this head this year and the repairs made are as follows:—

At Devil's Creek the work performed consists of a new dam, 125 feet long, and 20 feet wide, with a slide 40 feet in length and 6 feet 6 inches in width, and an apron 20 feet in length, and 10 feet in width.

On Bear Creek above the lower marsh a pier has been built, 48 feet in length, 6 feet in width, and 5 feet in height, for the purpose of contracting the water over the rapids and preventing it overflowing the low, flat land on the adjacent bank. Two slides between this pier and the foot of the "Big Marsh" have been slightly repaired, and raised one foot higher this year.

Otter Lake dam below the outlet of Otter Lake, on Lot 25, in the 14th concession of Monmouth, has been gravelled, and some other slight repairs made thereto.

Grace Lake dam has been provided with some new stop logs, and the planking of the slide repaired.

Some gravelling was done and other slight repairs made to two pile-dams at Redstone Lake, in the township of Guilford.

The dam at the outlet of Oblong Lake has been gravelled and supplied with some new stop logs.

Crab Lake dam and slide at the outlet of Crab Lake in the township of Sherborne was built early in the spring of 1879, for the purpose of reserving the water of the lake and to facilitate the driving of the timber down the river.

The dam is 89 feet long, and 20 feet wide, and the slide is 40 feet in length and 20 feet in width, with an apron 70 feet in length, and 20 feet in width constructed of round logs.

Paint Lake dam has been supplied with some new stop logs.

Hawk Lake dam, in the township of Stanhope, was built in the fall of 1878 for the purpose of reserving the waters of Hawk Lakes. A slide, 40 feet in length and 20 feet in width, and an apron constructed of round logs, 30 feet in length and 24 feet in width, have been built to it this year.

Horse Shoe Lake dam, on the Gull river, in the Township of Minden, has been gravelled, and supplied with 4 new stop logs this year.

Dam and Slide at Workman's Mills.—This dam has been supplied with new stop logs, and the slide has been lengthened 80 feet, to facilitate the running of timber over the falls. The crib-work on the North side of the slide was also lengthened 43 feet and some broken planking repaired in the slide. Some blasting was also done at the falls below.

At Racketty Creek, the outlet of Bob Lakes, there has been a slide built 420 feet in length and 5 feet 4 inches in width. There has also been two dams built at the top of the slide for the purpose of blocking up the channels of the creek, and forming a basin to receive the timber before entering the slide. A quantity of loose rock had to be removed and some blasting done during the progress of these works, which are situated on Lot No. 13 in the 12th Concession of Lutterworth.

Dam and Slide at Elliott's Falls, Gull River.—Some slight repairs have been made to the slide, and the dam has been furnished with some new stop logs.

Kennesis Lake dam and the dam at Norland, on the Gull River, have also been supplied with new stop logs.

In connection with the Gull and Burnt River waters, appropriations will be required in 1880 for the following works:—

The dam at the outlet of Redstone Lake will require to be re-built. The present slide could be made use of with a few repairs.

Two pile-dams on Lot No. 30, in the 8th Concession of Guilford, will require to be re-built. These dams prevent the water of Redstone Lake from running into Eagle Lake.

The dam at the foot of Hall's Lake, requires an apron and other slight repairs.

A new pile-dam will require to be built at the outlet of Oblong Lake, and the stop log dam will require to be repaired.

The dam at the outlet of Horse Shoe Lake requires an apron along the back, to prevent the water from washing the gravel from under the foundations and some of the cribbing requires planking.

The Slide at Elliott's Falls, on the Gull River, requires lengthening, on account of the unevenness of the rock below; the cribwork, a distance of 30 feet, and the planking, a distance of 80 feet.

The dam at Fenelon Falls requires gravelling, and some repairs made to the planking. The crib-work of the slide is also much worn in some places, and will require to be re-built.

MAINTENANCE OF LOCKS, DAMS AND SWING BRIDGES.

In the estimates of this year, provision was made for partial re-construction and extensive repairs to be made to the swing bridges at Lindsay and Young's Point, but upon examination it was found that the timbers were so decayed, that it would be impossible to repair them. Two new bridges were therefore built at Lindsay, and one at Young's Point, and as the appropriation was not sufficient to cover the expense of re-building the bridge over the Scugog river south of Lindsay, it was slightly repaired and adjusted, but it is now entirely worn out, and will require to be re-built in 1880. The guard-piers both above and below the bridge will also require considerable repairs.

The swing bridge at Port Carling was adjusted and supplied with new truss rods to the centre beam, and rollers under the ends of the bridge. Some of the planking of the lock was also repaired.

The swing bridge at Rosedale on the Balsam river was adjusted, and the dam was gravelled and supplied with some new stop logs. Some repairs were also made to the booms.

Some new timbers were put on the dam at Young's Point, and some planking done. The slide was also repaired with some new planking and cross sills, and some slight repairs made to the pier and platform above the lock.

A sunken pier was taken out up the river and some repairs made to the lock gates.

The recess for the lower gates of the Lindsay lock was cleaned out, and some slight repairs made to it and also to the lock at Rosedale on the Balsam river.

The following improvements and repairs will be required on these works in 1880:—

A new swing bridge will require to be built over the Scugog river, south of Lindsay, and the present guard piers repaired.

The crib-work extending along the edge of the Scugog river, below the Lindsay lock, will be required to be repaired, and the apron of the dam requires planking.

At Young's Point there will be two piers required up the river above the canal, 20 feet square and 18 feet high, for the purpose of preventing the boats and scows from breaking the present boom and going over the dam.

There are also three piers required below the lock, 15 feet square and 12 feet in height, and about 300 feet of double boom, to prevent the steamers and barges from being driven on shoals and rocks by the strong current below the entrance to the lock.

THE MAINE DEADLOCK.

THE REPUBLICANS TAKE THE TIDE AT THE FLOOD.

The Supreme Court Having Decided in their Interest, the Republican Chambers Meet a Governor.

A CRISIS APPROACHING.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The Sun's Augusta special says:—The Republican Legislature will meet to-day in the State House with the consent of Chamberlain. The Fusionists feel that a crisis is approaching, and that trouble will ensue. Courage and determination to a marked degree are manifested, and they assert with spirit that they will appeal from the Court of Maine to the Congress of the United States. Fighting is strongly talked of by many Republicans if the Fusionists refuse to comply with the Court's decision.

GOV. SMITH HAS NO BACKING.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—The Herald's Augusta special says:—Mayor Nash says Smith has no arms and no backing of an official character, and if he attempts to turn Chamberlain out of the State House by force his force will be that of a mob, and a mob would have an exceedingly warm reception here. When asked if there would be any breach of the peace the Mayor said, "Certainly not on our part. If an act of violence is committed it must come from the other side. We are here to preserve the peace, and not to break it."

THE FUSIONIST HOUSES IN SESSION.

Both Houses met at nine o'clock and took recess until ten o'clock. It is doubtful if a quorum is present in the House. It is understood the Fusionists telegraphed for the opinion of Gen. Butler, Bradberry, and other eminent lawyers to offset the opinion of the Supreme Court, and expect replies in season to lay before the members of their Legislature on Tuesday. Some of the Fusionists have weakened; at least two members said they would not resist the decision of the Supreme Court. At the end of the recess both Houses agreed to appoint a Joint Committee to consider the situation of affairs, and to report the best method of procedure.

GOV. SMITH MAKES A RESOLVE.

The Herald's Saco, Me., special says that the ex-Secretary of State and the Governor arrived from Augusta on the midnight train, and states that J. L. Smith declares, "I've been chosen Governor, and by God I'll be Governor." This most of the Fusionists applaud, and laugh at the Supreme Court, and say that they will support Smith and whatever he may do. On the other hand the Republicans are no less resolute to adhere at any cost to what they say is the side of right and law. There is no mistaking the fact that deep and bitter feelings are being engendered, and no one knows what an hour may bring forth.

THE MILITIA.

The Journal's August special says that J. T. Lynch, Captain of the Montgomery Guards, replying to Chamberlain's circular to company commanders, telegraphs him that he should obey his orders till the decision of the Court was given. Every company except the Oldtown Company says the same.

GENERAL CHAMBERLAIN'S POSITION.

AUGUSTA, Jan. 17.—General Chamberlain will pay no attention to the order of Governor Smith taking command of the militia from him. He holds his first announced position, and will remain at the place assigned to him till a Governor legally elected has qualified. The Democrats this morning talk threateningly, and condemn the decision of the Court.

ADJOURNED TILL MONDAY.

Both branches of the Legislature have adjourned to Monday afternoon. The general opinion is that neither branches as constituted will ever meet again. General Chamberlain has notified Hon. Joseph L. Smith that he cannot recognize him as Governor unless he furnishes proper evidence that he is such.

THE REPUBLICAN HOUSE IN SESSION.

The Republican House was called to order at 2.30 p.m., by speaker Weeks. Prayer was offered by Rev. M. E. Cobb, of Augusta. The Representatives' hall was packed with men, every inch of space surrounding the seats being occupied by standing men, while the galleries were a solid mass of human beings. The taking up of passes at the outer door was abandoned at this time, the police being removed to the foot of the staircases and the doors of the two Houses. Just as prayer ended Blaine came upon the floor of the House, and was received with the utmost enthusiasm—men getting upon chairs and desks, and waving their hats and handkerchiefs, while they rent the air with cheers and shouts. Business was entirely suspended, for a few minutes, and it was some time before anything like order could be restored. Lot Morrill and Eugene Hall followed Blaine, and received a greeting scarcely less cordial, though not so loud. The Republican members were all present with few exceptions. Knowles, of Bradford, and Temple, of Eddington, Fusion members, came in and took the seats they had occupied in the Fusion House, and were greeted with applause. Reading the House journal concluded at 2.30, and the Speaker appointed a Committee to join the Senate Committee on Gubernatorial Votes. Orders were then passed adopting the rules of last year, and providing that the House hold one session daily, beginning at 10 a.m.

THE REPUBLICAN SENATE

At half-past two was called to order by President Locke, of Portland. Atwell, of Penobscott, and one or two other Fusionists occupied seats in rear of the Chamber, but not the desks to which they are entitled. Half a dozen spectators on the floor and the empty galleries presented a striking contrast to the crowd in the House. Rounds of cheering and hand-clapping from the House occasionally reached the Senate Chamber, and disturbed the stillness. After prayer the journal was read and a committee of seven on Senatorial votes, and one of five on Gubernatorial votes, were appointed, after which the answers of the Supreme Court to the questions of the Republican Legislature were read.

THE GUBERNATORIAL ELECTION.

The Committee on Gubernatorial Votes reported as follows:—

Whole number of votes, 138,806; necessary to choice, 69,404. Davis, 68,967; Smith, 47,672; Garcelon, 21,902; Bradbury, 264. No choice.

The House proceeded to the selection of two names to be presented to the Senate. Each member, as his name was called, came forward and deposited his ballot. As Sprowle, of Veazie, who had deserted the Fusionists, came forward there was tremendous applause. He voted for Davis. The result of the balloting was—Davis, 88; Bradbury, 87; Garcelon, 1. The names of Daniel F. Davis and Bion Bradbury were then sent to the Senate.

THE SENATE WAS CROWDED.

as it has not been during the controversy. When the vote was taken for Governor 19 votes were thrown, all for Davis, who was declared by the President to be the legally chosen Governor of the State. Several Fusion members were present, but none in their seats, and none participating. The announcement was followed by applause. A joint convention was then held for the purpose of electing seven Councillors.

A SCENE OF INTENSE EXCITEMENT.

At 6.45 another convention was formed, this time for the most interesting event of this season of intense excitement. The people had waited for this, not a man moving from the densely-packed hall. A committee representing both branches waited upon the Governor-elect, Davis, and soon reported that he would forthwith attend and take the oath of office. As he entered the hall, attended by the Council and several distinguished gentlemen, the audience arose as one man and the air was rent with deafening applause, steadily increasing until the capitol fairly rocked. Men jumped upon the seats and upon each other's shoulders, pounded with their canes, and manifested their joy in ways indescribable. As Davis stood at the right of the President and faced towards the audience, the applause broke out again. Three cheers followed for Davis, Blain, Boutelle, Chamberlain, Nash and Sproule. After quiet was restored, Governor Davis, in an impressive manner, took the oath of office, and delivered the inaugural address.

GOV. DAVIS TAKES POSSESSION.

The cheering which followed the address did not subside until the gubernatorial party had departed. The Governor took possession of the Executive Chamber without interference. The only obstacle by the Fusionists during the day was the refusal of the Deputy Secretary of State to give up the gubernatorial returns, but certified copies of the Clerk's returns were substituted. At 7.45 both branches adjourned until Monday morning.

GOV. DAVIS' AUTHORITY RECOGNIZED BY GENERAL CHAMBERLAIN.

Gov. Davis has issued an order continuing the care of the public property in the hands of General Chamberlain, as follows:—

To Major-General Chamberlain:

SIR,—I have the honour to inform you that I have this day been legally elected governor and Commander-in-chief, and have been duly qualified to perform the duties of that office. In common with all citizens of the State, I have watched with great anxiety the events of the past few days, and rejoice with them in the good results of the wise and efficient measures adopted by you for the preservation of peace and the protection of the property and institutions of the State, and more especially that those results have been accomplished without resorting to military force or permitting violence. Fully recognizing the propriety of the demand made by you upon others who have claimed the right to exercise the office of Governor that they should furnish you with an authorative decision of the Court, and believing that you will require the same of me, I hand you herewith a copy of the opinions of the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court, addressed to Joseph A. Locke, President of the Senate, and George E. Weeks, Speaker of the House, sustaining the legality of the Legislature by which I have been elected and qualified.

I have the honour to be,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) DANIEL F. DAVIS, Governor.

To Hon. Daniel F. Davis:—

SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your communication, together with the certified copy of the opinion of the Supreme Court upon the questions affecting the legality and organization of the Legislature of 1880. As it is manifest that this opinion establishes the legality of your election, and that you are duly qualified as Governor, I have the honour to report to you that I consider my trust under Special Order No. 45 as at an end. I am, with the highest respect,

Your obedient servant,
(Signed) JOSHUA L. CHAMBERLAIN, Major-General.

THE Duke of Sutherland has granted permission to place a statue of the late Prince Imperial in Stafford House Garden.

RAILWAY COMPANY ACCEPTANCES.

Questions of much nicety and difficulty are constantly arising before the courts, as to the personal liability of the officers of a company on promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques made for the company but failing to comply with the forms of the requirements necessary [illegible]. Probably it is because so many railway companies are practically "[illegible] proof" that these questions arise more frequently in reference to railway companies than any other corporations.

A case of this kind, exciting much interest, is now pending in the Court of Queen's Bench in this Province, [illegible] v. George A. Cox, President of the Midland Railway Company. The action is by an endorsee of a bill of exchange which runs in something like the following form:—

[illegible] Montreal, 5th Dec., 1876.
Four months after date, pay to my order at the office of the Bank of Montreal, in Port Hope, the sum of six hundred and thirty-one dollars and eighty cents, and charge same to account of
R. Hurdon.
To the President Midland Ry. Co., Port Hope.

Across the face of this instrument was written "Accepted for the Company," which was signed by Mr. Reid as Secretary and Mr. Cox as President. The consideration for the bill was certain supplies furnished to the Railway Company by Mr. Hurdon. On the trial it was shewn that authority was by statute given to the President and Secretary to bind the Company, by drawing, making or endorsing negotiable instruments, by the observance of certain formalities which did not all seem to have been complied with in this case.

Under these circumstances the majority of the Court (Chief Justice Hagarty and Justice Armour) held that Mr. Cox is personally liable to pay the amount of the acceptance. The grounds on which their Lordships rest this decision are that the bill is addressed, not to the Company, but to its President, which they hold is the case as fully as if it had been addressed to him by name; that as a matter of law no one can accept a bill of exchange other than he to whom it is addressed; and that Mr. Cox had practically by his signature accepted the bill. The circumstance that the acceptance was expressed to be on behalf of the Company was held to make no difference.

The other member of the Court, Mr. Justice Cameron, delivered a vigorous dissenting judgment and combatted with much force the arguments of his learned brothers. He contended that it was shown by the [illegible] circumstances that what was in the contemplation of all parties concerned was that the Railway Company should be liable and not the President personally. He did not think the case the same as if the bill had been addressed to Mr. Cox by name, and asked what would have been the effect in view of that contention if the President of the Company had been changed between the drawing and the acceptance? So that it would have been drawn on one President and accepted by another. In his view the form of the acceptance was clear notice to everyone into whose hands the instrument came that it was meant to be the obligation of the Company and not of Mr. Cox. As evidence of its having been treated in that way by parties through whose hands it passed he pointed out that the Bank of Toronto who were the holders of the bill at its maturity in protesting it dealt with it as the Company's acceptance. The conclusions at which he arrived as correct, may be summed up as follows: the consideration for the bill was received by the company; Mr. Hurdon made his claim and meant to direct his draft to the Company; the acceptance given was meant to be the Company's acceptance and was so taken by Hurdon; it was taken by all subsequent holders on the same understanding and treated by them accordingly; it never occurred to any one that any personal liability attached to the President until it was found that nothing could be obtained from the company; and finally, it did not necessarily follow that Mr. Cox was personally liable even if it were admitted that by reason of non-compliance with certain formalities the Company could not be compelled to pay.

We presume that the matter will be brought before the Court of Appeal. If it is, all must hope for a unanimous judgment by that tribunal, so that it may govern any cases which may arise in future. To a non-professional mind it would appear, that however the views of the majority of the Court may accord with fusty rules of law, the deductions of Mr. Justice Cameron are much more consonant with broad common sense and our ideas of natural justice. If this is the view, it would be well for the public and all officials of companies to note this decision, and remember that bills of exchange meant for a company should be directed to it and not to any official; and that bills otherwise addressed cannot, with safety to the officers acting for the company, be accepted at all. The aim in these matters should be to conform strictly to the law's requirements, and to run no risks.—Trade Review.

COBOURG.

Fire.—An alarm was given about four o'clock on Friday morning, when it was ascertained that Michael Welch's barns were in a blaze. Strong efforts were made by the brigade to save the buildings, but without avail. A valuable horse, two cows, farm implements, and several other things were burned. Loss, $800; insurance, $500.

Personal.—Among the names of those who have passed their examinations and have been approved for admission as cadets to the Royal Military College of Canada, appears that of Mr. John Laing Weller of this town.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Last Year to the Peter's Pence France contributed 1,100,000 francs; America, [illegible] francs; Great Britain and Ireland, [illegible] francs; Austria-Hungary, 700,000 francs; Italy, 600,000 francs; Belgium, 300,000 francs; Germany, 150,000 francs; Holland, 60,000 francs; and Switzerland, 30,000 francs.

The Guelph Ministerial Association has issued a manifesto against funerals on Sunday, and funerals attended by processions of organized societies with regalia, and the use of instrumental music on that day. Its members have agreed not to officiate at funerals or attend them on Sundays, unless satisfied that they are absolutely necessary.

The Bishop of Rochester (England) in a "pastoral letter calls upon the Church to doff the somewhat chilly seclusion which it has inherited from generations of high-backed pews," and calls for lay evangelists who shall usually minister by themselves in unlicensed rooms or the open air. The Bishop thinks that one of the results of the movement will be to compel the churchmen to appreciate and esteem—though not in all things to concur with—those whom they once fancied to be their foes.

Edward Hanlan, the champion oarsman, has been in Ottawa for the purpose of procuring from the Department of Marine and Fisheries the lease of a water frontage for the proposed hotel on Toronto Island. He had an interview on the subject with the Hon. J. H. Pope. A number of citizens called on Hanlan at the Russell House, and questioned him as to his future intentions in the matter of rowing. He intimated that he would go over to England next fall if a match was arranged; and respecting the Courtney affair he frankly expressed the opinion that Courtney's prowess was overestimated.

Calcraft, the hangman, left his autobiography in manuscript, and it is to be published forthwith. It purports to give an account of all the executions at which the great man assisted during his fifty years of office—a capital of horrors which ought surely to satisfy the most morbid readers of the Newgate calendar class of literature.

☞TIME EXTENDED TO FIRST FEBRUARY.

Not a few of our old subscribers have sent us the names of one or two new subscribers along with their own for 1880, and thus have made one dollar go as far as one and a half did last year. Finding that those who have tried it, fully realize that "a penny saved is two earned," and that others are still anxious to reap the same advantage, we have determined to receive new subscriptions from old subscribers up to the first of February upon the following terms, viz:—

THE WEEKLY REVIEW.

Any person now, and for the last twelve months a subscriber to the Weekly Review, who sends us his renewal subscription with that of another person not now or for the last twelve months a subscriber to it, will have the TWO sent to any separate address for $2.50! Or if accompanied with the names of two other such, such persons may have the THREE sent to separate addresses for $3.00!

THE DAILY REVIEW.

Any person now a subscriber to the Daily Evening Review who sends us his renewal subscription with that of another person not now on our subscription list, may have the TWO delivered or sent to any separate address for six months for $3.50, or for twelve months for $6.00!

Any one is at liberty to get up a club. Each club paper may be addressed separately. Parties making up clubs may send in the names (accompanied by the money) as they receive them, and credit will be given for the whole number sent in when the club is completed.

OUR CLUB LIST.

We are also enabled to announce that the very liberal advantages offered in our Club List will be kept open until the first of February. Parties who may yet be desirous of subscribing for the Review along with any one or more of the leading papers or magazines contained in our Club List, can therefore avail themselves of the opportunity offered all through the month of January. We would again direct attention to our "Entirely New Feature"—"How to Obtain the Leading Papers and Save Money." See advertisement in another column of this paper. OMEMEE.

A Distinguished Lodge.—The Messenger says that L.O.L. No. 114, numbers amongst its members a member of Parliament, two Reeves, two Deputy-Reeves, three J.P.'s, and a host of other distinguished personages. The Lodge feels rather "big" over it, too, and in honor of the distinguished brethren is going to have a dinner in the Orange Hall, George Street, on Friday evening next. Several distinguished gentlemen from a distance will be there, and a pleasant evening is expected.

Carnival.—Arrangements have been made for a grand Masquerade Carnival in the Rink on Wednesday evening next. This will be the first this season in Omemee, and it promises to be well sustained in every particular.

MADOC.

Progress.—The iron ore business is looking well. The vein in the Seymour mine is growing wider and wider, and of greater richness as the work progresses. The shipment from this mine is five cars per day. Several new mines are being developed. Everything looks splendid for the future of Madoc. There is not a vacant dwelling or store in the place. This year there will be erected three or four fine three-story brick blocks, a large grain warehouse to replace the one destroyed by fire in December, a Roman Catholic church and several dwellings. The Orser block is being fitted up for a first-class hotel by Mr. Gumming. This will, when the Moon House is built, give Madoc three as good hotels as can be found in any town in these parts.

PORT HOPE.

Advertising the Town.—The new Council at their first meeting appointed a Committee to make arrangements for advertising the facilities which the town has to offer to manufacturers.

The Midland.—Mr. G. A. Cox addressed the new Township Council of Hope, at their first meeting, in favour of the bill of the Company in the Local Legislature. He showed that the claim of the municipality would not be prejudiced, and that the sale of the new bonds would enable it to satisfy the present claims against it.

A Dishonest Carter.—Patrick Ward, a carter, has been detected in stealing barrels of coal oil and kegs of nails, selling them for his own benefit. He jumped on a passing freight train and left for the States.

A Spring Tonic.—A good appetizing stimulant for the early spring can be made of one cupful each of black cherry bark, burdock and dandelion roots, and half a cupful of hop dust. Cover with two quarts of cider, and take a tablespoonful before each meal. As it is often difficult to procure these when one desires to begin their use, about the first of March, it is well to have a quantity in reserve.

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our edible rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, combined with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary for our health we [illegible] "down" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is Scott & Bowne's Palatable Castor Oil we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints tending to Consumption. wd12-2w

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Agricultural Society.

The annual meeting of the West Riding Agricultural Society will be held in the Town Council Chamber to-morrow at 1 o'clock.

The Poultry Association.

The meeting of the Midland Central Poultry Association, announced for this evening, has been postponed until Friday evening, January 23rd, when it will be held in the Town Hall at 7.30 o'clock.

Presbytery and the Sunday Schools.

To-morrow the Peterborough Presbytery will meet the Sunday School Superintendents, and teachers of the district in conference at St. Paul's (Presbyterian) Church. The session will be held at 9 o'clock a.m., 2 o'clock and 7.30 p.m.

Friendship's Entertainment.

Friendship Lodge, No. 146, I. O. G. T., give their twenty-second anniversary entertainment this evening, at their hall, George Street. The programme is an excellent one, comprising songs, duets, choruses, instrumental music, readings and recitations.

Wheat Steady.

Several loads of wheat came in to-day and were sold at yesterday's quotations. There is no disposition on the part of shippers to bid for it and the lower rates are offered, leaving the farmer to accept or reject. Millers are buying only to keep their mills running.

Toronto and Ottawa Railway.

A public meeting called by the Mayor in compliance with a requisition of ratepayers, will be held this evening in the Town Council Chamber at half-past seven o'clock, to consider matters relating to the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, with a view to secure immediate prosecution of its construction.

The Change.

The moon actually favoured us with her presence for an hour or two last evening. With the clear weather came frost which hardened the muddy streets, making the walking pleasant. Before ten o'clock the moon became obscured and so continued until after midnight, by which time the muddy streets had become quite hard with the frost.

The Little Lake Cemetery.

In spite of an organized attempt to defeat the old Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company at the annual meeting, they were all re-elected. This is a fitting and well-deserved testimony to the ability and care with which they have conducted the affairs of this very important company, and insures similar good management for the current year.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to-day are: Fresh to brisk, north-easterly to northerly wind; cloudy to partly cloudy, rather colder weather with snow areas. In Peterborough to-day, brisk easterly, to north-easterly winds have prevailed; cloudy to partly cloudy weather with light snow from 8 o'clock in the morning to 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The thermometer indicated at 9 o'clock 22°, and at noon 24°.

Somebody's Business.

There is a fine opportunity afforded for the display of the zeal of the Health Inspector near the Otonabee river bridge. The late warm weather has given our neighbors, when crossing over the river, a foretaste of what may be expected when spring opens up. No harm would result if the Street Inspector should accompany him and view the condition of the sidewalk. In fact, it would not be amiss for the Mayor and Council to pay a visit to that locality. The effluvia arising from the road accumulations added to the perfume from the collection of old bones, rags and scraps, must be exhilarating to the Ashburnhamites, who are compelled to pass and repass daily. The Ashburnham authorities, however, would do well to inspect their own side of the river before they complain of ours. The sidewalk from the bridge to a point opposite Roger's Otonabee flouring mills is almost, if not quite, as badly off as that upon the Peterborough side of the river. They have on their side and near the bridge, too, a perfumery manufacture, that is very trying to weak stomachs, especially in warm weather.

SABBATH SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.

Anniversary of the George Street Methodist Sabbath School—A Large Meeting.

On Monday evening last the anniversary meeting was held in the George Street Methodist Church, which was filled with a large and sympathetic audience of members of the Church, parents of the scholars and friends of the school. The meeting had been previously announced to be held in the Lecture Room of the Church, but in view of the large attendance expected, it was thought advisable to make the change.

The remarks of the several speakers were interspersed with an interesting programme of music and readings, which had been prepared, and which was well rendered by scholars and the choir.

The Rev. Dr. Harper occupied the Chair, and was supported on the platform by Rev. Mr. Starr, Mr. LeLane, of Port Hope, Mr. D. W. Dumble, and other officers of the Sabbath School.

The Chairman after a few introductory remarks called on the first speaker

MR. D. W. DUMBLE, Superintendent of the School, who, gave an interesting address, urging parents to send their children to the School, and to supplement the efforts of the teachers by home instruction. He spoke of the difficulty experienced in keeping together an efficient staff of faithful, zealous and intelligent teachers, who would sacrifice personal convenience to further the school work. He thanked them for what had been done in the past, and urged the claims of the school for increased assistance and sympathy.

After a selection by the choir, the Treasurer's Report was read by Mr. A. Clegg, who has filled that office for the past year. The report contained much interesting information connected with the finances of the school, and other statistics relative to attendance, equipments methods of teaching and organization. The total number of scholars was 326, the average attendance being a trifle less. A comparison of financial items showed a balance on hand of $63.26. Mr. Clegg supplemented his report with an interesting address, making an earnest appeal as an officer of the School, and urging its claims on the consideration of its hearers.

Mr. LELANE, Superintendent of the Methodist Sabbath School at Port Hope, was introduced by the Chairman, who alluded to the period of his incumbency in that town, during which term M. LeLane and himself had been co-workers in the Sabbath School.

Mr. LELANE's remarks were eminently of a practical nature, and dealt more particularly with spiritual work in the Sabbath School. He gave many interesting particulars from his own experience, showing that the influence of the Sunday School was a power whose effects in shaping the future of children could not be overestimated. He spoke of the contention made by many that the Sabbath School was only useful for the purpose of memorizing Scripture, and the opinions of others having reference to the teaching of the catechism. He eulogized this latter as being a compendium of theology almost inimitable. The Sabbath School, he maintained, taught a reverence for the house of God that could not be acquired as freely in any other institutions of the Church. The most careful attention was paid to the requirements of the class meeting, and of the prayer meeting, but too often the Sabbath School was neglected, more from apathy on the part of the people than from any positive refusal to assist. We had the School held up to us as the place of all others where the good seed should be sown in the youthful heart. This contention was good, but it did not go far enough. He held that the School was the place where the ground should be prepared for the seed; where the "sub-soil plowing" should be done, and the germs of bad habits eradicated ere they had time to reach the vigor of growth. He addressed the teachers, the parents, and the children, pointing out their relative positions in the work of instruction. He enlarged upon the sacrifices made by many teachers of their own convenience and comfort, to allow of their attending to Sabbath School work. He called on all parents to awaken and give aid by their sympathy and practical support, alleging, that if the parents of children did not take an interest in the spiritual wants of their own children, they could not expect that others would do so.

REV. MR. STARR, followed and handled the subject with great thoughtfulness and care. His address was forcible and instructive, placing the claims of the Sabbath School most strongly before his hearers. He urged that inaction on this vital point could not be tolerated. It was for the parents of this generation to mould the thoughts and direct the actions of the coming one. Further it was for each one personally to say how it should be done. There was a reticence, a repugnance to taking part in Sabbath School work that was most alarming. The school should engross more of their attention, should hold the premier place in their consideration. All personal differences and jealousies should be cast aside, vigorous action should take the place of censurable inertness.

During the evening the Misses Heather and Wells sang charmingly a couple of duets, "The Old Musician and his Harp," and "Beautiful Zion." Miss Bertha Harper read very nicely a short poem, "Where the money goes," and Mr. Templeton Brown gave a very effective solo. In the absence of Mr. McCamus, from Keene, who had been assigned a place on the programme, Mr. A. S. Davis kindly consented to fill the vacancy and sang with good effect "The Ninety and Nine."

After a collection had been taken up the meeting closed with the benediction.

Our New Council.

The Town Council for 1880 is constituted as follows:—Two lawyers, two independent gentlemen two carriage-makers, one Government official, one pump-maker, one shoemaker, one tanner, one manufacturer, one miller, and one stationer.

From Peterborough.

We understand that Mr. J. J. McGee who has just been appointed to the office of Assistant Clerk of the Privy Council, in the place of Mr. Cote, promoted to the position of Chief Clerk, is a brother of the late Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee. Mr. McGee lived some years in Peterborough, having served his time with Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald of this town.

St. John's Church Bazaar.

A bazaar will be held in Bradburn's Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 3rd and 4th, in aid of the building fund of St. John's Church Sunday School. Most of the articles offered for sale will be of a useful character, so that purchasers will obtain a better return for their money than is usually the case. Meals will be served in the hall during the day and in the evening.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

THE EVENING SESSION—STANDING COMMITTEES STRUCK FOR THE YEAR.

Tenders Required for Stone for the Streets and Wood for the Corporation—Remission of Taxes—Applications for Office.

The Council met on Monday evening, pursuant to adjournment.

Present—The Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, McNaughton, Paterson, Dunsford, Douglas, Denne and Menzies.

The minutes of the morning session were read and confirmed.

PETITIONS.

From Wm. Bell, complaining of improper assessment.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From C. McGrath, asking for the position of assessor.

From Mrs. Butcher, asking to be relieved from paying dog tax.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From Maxwell Hall, asking for appointment as Treasurer.

From Wm. Sanderson, asking for the position of Street Inspector, at a salary of $350.

The applications for office were referred to the Committee on Appointments.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Councillor CAHILL brought in the report of the Special Committee appointed to strike standing committees, recommending as follows:—

FINANCE AND ASSESSMENTS.—Messrs. Smith (chairman), Denne, Paterson, Cahill, Toole and Douglas.

FIRE, WATER AND GAS.—Messrs. Paterson (chairman), Taylor, Douglas, Sawers and Yelland.

PRINTING.—Messrs. Menzies (chairman), Toole, Paterson, Taylor and Smith.

LICENSES.—Messrs. Dunsford (chairman), Denne, McNaughton, Menzies and Douglas.

JOINT COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Toole (chairman), Menzies, Taylor, Dunsford and McNaughton.

CHARITY.—Messrs. Yelland, Sawers, Dunsford and McNaughton.

COURT OF REVISION.—Messrs. Dunsford (chairman), Taylor, Sawers, Yelland and Toole.

APPOINTMENTS TO OFFICE.—Messrs. Toole (chairman), Cahill, Denne, Smith and Paterson.

MARKET.—Messrs. Dunsford (chairman), Douglas, McNaughton, Denne and Smith.

STREETS AND BRIDGES.—Messrs. Cahill (chairman), Paterson, Douglas, Denne and Toole.

BUILDING BY-LAW.—Messrs. Yelland (chairman), McNaughton, Dunsford and Menzies.

The first named on each committee to be chairman thereof, except the Charity Committee, who will elect their own chairman.

He moved the adoption of the report.

Councillor DUNSFORD objected to being on the Charity Committee.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON said he was just the gentleman to be on the Committee, and he thought the name should stand.

The report was adopted.

STONE FOR THE STREETS.

Councillor SMITH moved, seconded by Councillor PATERSON,—That the Clerk be and is hereby requested to advertise for tenders for the delivery of 200 cords or more of field stone suitable for macadamizing streets, the same to be delivered and corded up where directed by the Street and Bridge Committee, in quantities of not less than 10 cords each. The tenders to be opened by the Street and Bridge Committee.

Councillor SMITH said he thought they could get the stone cheap now, and the work was sought by some of the ratepayers who wished by that means to pay their taxes. George Street required a considerable quantity of stone to macadamize it.

Councillor DUNSFORD asked if this did not call for an expenditure of money, and so was out of order.

Councillor PATERSON said it was so strictly speaking, but the only expenditure would be for the advertisement, and unless the stone was procured while there was sleighing, the expense would be greater, so they should get tenders at once.

The motion was carried.

WOOD FOR THE CORPORATION.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DENNE,—That the Clerk be instructed to advertise for 50 cords of soft wood and 50 cords of hardwood for the use of the corporation; the soft wood to consist of 25 cords of tamarac, and 25 cords of ash and elm; the whole to be delivered before the 15th March. The contract to be awarded by the Finance Committee, and the wood to be delivered and placed where directed by the said Committee; and that the Mayor be requested to make arrangements for a suitable wood yard.—Carried.

REMISSION OF TAXES.

The Mayor produced a list of persons from whom the collector said he could not collect the taxes.

The matter was referred to the Finance Committee to act.

APPOINTMENTS TO OFFICE.

Councillor DENNE asked whether the officers had to be appointed at their next meeting.

Councillor SMITH said that only the assessors had to be appointed.

The Council adjourned for one week.

ASHBURNHAM VILLAGE COUNCIL.

The Organization of the Newly Elected Council—The Appointment of Auditors.

The Ashburnham Council met on Monday evening, January 19.

Present—Councillors H. Calcutt, Wm. Wand, Geo. C. Rogers and R. Mowry.

The Reeve, Mr. John Burnham, being absent on account of sickness, Mr. H. Calcutt was appointed chairman.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

The CLERK, Mr. John Wood, reported that the following members of the Council for 1880 had filed their declarations of qualification:—

REEVE—Mr. John Burnham, M.P.

COUNCILLORS—Messrs. H. Calcutt, W. Wand, Geo. C. Rogers and Robt. Mowry.

The minutes of the preceeding meeting were read and confirmed.

APPOINTMENT OF AUDITORS.

Messrs. Jonathan Stephenson and Edward Calcutt were appointed auditors.

The Council then adjourned until the next regular meeting, Feb. 3rd.

The DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents a week.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wondrous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw81-1y

TROUBLE WITH THE PORTE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 21.—The Porte has addressed a note to Sir A. Layard, the British Ambassador, in reply to the latter's ultimatum on the subject of the prosecution of Koellar, the German missionary, for distributing religious tracts. The Porte argues that the proceedings of Koellar justified the seizure of his papers, which were only returned out of regard for England; that Ahmed Tewfik, the Mohammedan priest, deserved the punishment awarded him in conformity with the religious laws of the country, and that he was liberated only by the clemency of the Consul. The Porte expresses satisfaction at the resumption of official relations with the British Ambassador. Sir A. Layard will reply declaring that he does not accept the principle that a foreigner may be arrested provided his Ambassador be informed within 24 hours. He will refute the arguments of the Porte on the religious aspect of the affair as contrary to the stipulations of the Treaty of Berlin. The German and Austrian Ambassadors have asked for instructions in the matter. It is reported that the French Ambassador has resigned. Hafiz Pasha has received a decoration, and has been appointed aide-de-camp to the Sultan. He retains the post of Minister of Police. These honors to Hafiz are very offensive to Layard.

A revolt of the negroes occurred in the Department of Chincha, and some horrible butcheries ensued, excited at a report maliciously circulated that the Hacendados were about to establish slavery on their estates, fifty or sixty negroes broke into several hacintas, murdering the proprietors and the principal employees, sacking and setting fire to the premises. This would give the Pennsylvania Company a trunk route to which no other road offers comparison. Another vast railroad combination, which was completed yesterday, consisted in the purchase of the New Orleans, St. Louis and Chicago Railroad and its branches by the Illinois Central Railway Company. The Consolidated Road will have a mileage of over 1700 miles, forming a strong rival to the Louisville and Nashville combination for the through southern business.

Afterwards it is claimed that Finck, his brother-in-law, used the proceeds in speculation in Wall street, his transaction amounting to nearly a million with large profits. His success, it is claimed, was due to the possession of Gould's business secrets, obtained from Mrs. Williams, then the housekeeper, but now the wife of Bilden, Gould's partner and broker.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. THE AUDITORS' REMUNERATION.

The first act of the new Council was in accordance with law—the appointment of two gentlemen to audit the various town accounts for the year 1879—and so far as the gentlemen selected for this purpose are individually concerned, we venture to think it would have been difficult to make a better selection; but, when the Council came to fixing their remuneration, we are equally decided in thinking that they miserably failed to appreciate the importance and quantity of the work to be performed by the auditors in the faithful discharge of their duties. It should be remembered that it is the duty of these gentlemen to overhaul three distinct sets of accounts, viz: those of the Town Council, School Board, and Commissioners of the Town Trust, and that the by-law appointing them—very properly we think—makes it their duty to verify the Collector's Roll for the past year, while some members of the Council at least expect that they shall, in addition, examine and fully report upon the Debenture debt of the town, from, if not before, its inauguration—and all this for the magnificent sum of $50 each. Every item of the work mentioned, it is desirable, should not only be done, but thoroughly done by competent men, but they should be remunerated at least somewhat in proportion to the work to be performed and the responsibility of their task. The smallness of the fee proposed to be paid to Messrs. Macdougall and Pearse is certainly in strong contradistinction to the $600 appropriated to the services of Messrs. Hogan and Mills, and the second $200 proposed to be given the same gentlemen for doing alone what the Auditors are now expected to do over and above the duties devolving upon them under the by-law appointing them.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

ANOTHER EASY DAY.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Another easy day for members. A large number of petitions were presented to-day for private bills—among them being one "for the legalization of certain by-laws with reference to the Toronto & Ottawa Railway Company."

RETURNS.

A return was moved for, showing the cost of Grand Juries in the years 1878 and 1879 in each county in the Province. Another for the papers and correspondence between the Provincial and Dominion Governments with reference to the boundary award, and another for a return showing the aggregate fees received by each County Judge in connection with his duties as Judge of the Surrogate Court in 1878 and 1879.

PUBLIC BILLS.

Mr. Mowat's bill relating to co-operative associations was read a second time, as also his bill relating to coroner's inquests, which [illegible] making it necessary for [illegible] to make a "declaration" that there is reason to believe that the deceased came to his death by other means than through accident or misfortune, instead of the certificate which they have now to give to the same effect.

And then the House adjourned at 10 minutes past 4 o'clock.

NATIONAL CURRENCY.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—In an issue of your paper you stated that if we had a national currency we would have no gold to pay the difference between our imports and exports. Will you please inform me how we paid the difference during the years 1870 and 1874, as follows:—

1870.	1. The excess was	$12,778,[illegible]
1871.	2. " " "	[illegible]
1872.	3. " " "	27,734,772
1873.	4. " " "	36,082,241
1874.	5. " " "	41,731,678

RAG BABY.

The answer is very simple. The difference never has been paid, but it is represented by the indebtedness abroad of the Dominion, the provinces, municipalities, companies and individuals. Only goods or gold, not paper, will satisfy these debts.—ED. REVIEW.

MANUFACTURERS IN COUNCIL.

Meeting of the Montreal Association—Address of the President.

MONTREAL, Jan 17.—At the annual meeting of the Manufacturers' Association yesterday afternoon, the President, Mr. E. K. Greene, occupied the chair. In an opening address he said:—The Manufacturers' Association, he had heard it said, was a political organization. Of course all present were aware that such was not the case, as it was well known, the organization comprised in its membership, persons of both shades of politics. The only object the Society had in view was the welfare and prosperity of the country. Up to the last twelve months the people of this country had never been accorded any satisfactory legislation tending to the development of the industrial resources of the country. The re-action from the effects of the late civil war in the United States had thrown the people upon their own resources, and as regards the future of the country, its prosperity will have to depend upon the development of our resources. He believed we were now on the eve of a period of prosperity which the people had not enjoyed for four years past.

TORONTO & OTTAWA R.R.

A PUBLIC MEETING TO CONSIDER THE BEST MEANS OF PROMOTING ITS CONSTRUCTION.

A Committee Appointed to Agree as to the Conditions of a New By-law—The Plans of the Directors.

A public meeting, called by the Mayor in compliance with a requisition, was held in the Town Council Chamber on Tuesday evening, January 20th, to consider the best means of promoting the early construction of the Toronto & Ottawa Railway. There was a large attendance of the ratepayers.

The MAYOR was called to the chair, and opened the meeting with a brief explanation. He read the following letter from Mr. Scott, the President of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company:—

To J. J. Lundy, Esq., Mayor of Peterborough:

DEAR SIR,—I regret that I will be unable, from illness, to attend the railway meeting to-morrow evening. I can only say that at the meeting last spring I expressed a personal desire to become relieved of the enterprise, and would be glad if the town would then express a desire to drop it. The expression of the meeting was unanimously the other way. I therefore gave it a hard summer's work, and seriously injured my health. We have nevertheless succeeded in getting it into condition that, should the town and county desire it, there is little doubt but that the work will be commenced as soon as the spring opens. The very slight change that we ask in the conditions of the by-law would enable the work to be commenced next spring, instead of a year or two from that time, which would be a matter of very great importance, as well to the Company as to the corporation.

Yours very truly,
W. H. SCOTT.

MR. DUMBLE said, in the absence of Mr. Scott, he had to represent the Company. He expressed his regrets at the absence, through illness, of Mr. Scott, whose exertions in the cause of the railway had done much to injure his health. He spoke of the aid granted in the City of Ottawa, and of the general appreciation of the road in the press and throughout the country. Wherever a bonus had been asked, except at Toronto, it had been granted. The failure at Toronto had thrown back the scheme. At Ottawa there were several railways constructed, and the Ottawa Railway under construction, giving access to the sea ports, and by lessening freight, increasing the value of produce. So at Toronto there were many lines from the west, but there was a gap between these two cities. He spoke of the construction of the bridge by Government across the Ottawa at the capital, thus giving their company the connection they required. Between Peterborough and Ottawa $664,000 had been voted, the details of which he gave. Westward there were bonuses to the amount of $340,000. They expected another $100,000 from Carleton County and other municipalities. He spoke of the condition in the Town and County by-laws that they should not be valid till $1,000,000 were granted. The Grand Trunk Railway Company had procured the rejection of the bonus in Toronto, and they even were exerting an influence here. The rejection at Toronto had made the grant of $1,000,000 impossible. Some of their most influential citizens had thought it would be well to confine their exertions to the section between this and Ottawa, leaving Toronto to come in hereafter. The question was whether they should not act on this basis. They had such grants as would with Government aid enable them to build this section. They could not, however, offer the Peterborough grants as a basis for the Government grant till the by-laws were modified in this respect. He asked them to consider whether the by-laws could not be so modified as to ensure the early construction of the road while retaining full security for the town. He spoke of the probability of the Grand Junction combining with them if they touched Norwood. He read certain clauses of the by-law to [illegible] showing how the debentures became payable, with the limit. As to the workshops they looked to them to increase the population of the town, and so decrease the burden upon their shoulders. Of necessity from its location, not only the workshops of their own railway but perhaps those of other Companies would be situated here. They proposed to lessen the sum of $1,000,000 necessary to make the bonus valid. They were anxious to communicate with the iron region of Madoc, which would afford a great advantage. He described also the proposed connection with the Midland at Omemee, thus sharing in the transport of the grain of the west from Midland City. Peterborough had originated this scheme and they looked upon the people of Peterborough now to support them. The benefit that would accrue during [illegible] than described. The bonus given by the town was a large sum, but a great part would be [illegible] during construction. If the town had not given so liberally they would not have received such liberal aid from other municipalities. He gave instances of the assistance granted to other railways. He hoped they would appoint a committee to advise such changes in the by-law as would ensure the early construction of the road with all the attendant advantages to the town.

MR. DENNE asked if it was intended by the Company to appeal to the public.

MR. DUMBLE replied in the affirmative. In answer to a question he said that Ottawa and the surrounding district had given more money than this, and they could not expect to monopolize the benefit. Ottawa had been promised workshops to the extent of half what was required. The Company would like the $1,000,000 reduced to a smaller sum in view of their not aiming at Toronto at present. They would be willing to make the clause as to workshops similar to that in the Ottawa by-law. The moving of workshops to Stratford and Belleville had thrown thousands of people into those towns. They did not object to making the number of men 500. The sinking fund would amount to $1,000 on $100,000, and the interest to $6,000.

MR. MILLS said he was not opposed to the railway if it was in different hands. He proceeded to abuse the Directors in his usual style. He quoted Mr. Sandford Fleming as being opposed to railway bonuses. He then spoke of the money owed to him him by the Midland railway which they had not paid him. He said it was only the United States freights that supported the the Canadian railways, not the local trade. He heard the Midland charged more from Port Hope here than the Grand Trunk from Montreal to Port Hope. He compared the Ottawa by-law with the old Peterborough one. He thought the by-law should have been passed before the present session. He then went on to speak of the interest that would be required, erroneously asserting that there would be no provision for paying off the debentures, which would have to be renewed at 7 per cent. He moved that a deputation, which he named, should be sent to Toronto to oppose the bill of the Company. He spoke of the Trent Valley Canal, and of the manufactures that might be encouraged by grants. Perhaps if they gave a grant to the Government they would construct the canal. He then proceeded with more personal abuse till he was called to order. He wanted to keep some money in reserve to give to the canal. Returning to the Peterborough Bylaws, he repeated his old arguments. Then he again abused the Directors, stating falsely that they had not subscribed any stock. He said they could not get money as there was only one firm in London that could give it, which he knew no dealt with it, and the Grand Trunk would not let them do it. He then accused the Directors of selling the charter to the Grand Junction Road so as to rob the Town and County of $250,000.

MR. DUMBLE said he would deal gently with Mr. Mills, but a man, who would stand there and slander Mr. Scott, when he was absent through illness, ought to hide himself through shame. He had slandered the directors and called them bankrupts, but some of them were well-known as wealthy men. All knew that railways could not be built by private enterprise and where would the country be without its railways. Mr. Mills had spoken of people being sold out for taxes for want of work; what they wanted to do was to give them work. He quoted the expressed opinion of Mr. G. A. Cox and Mr. Elias Burnham, as being of more weight than that of the previous speaker. They did not ask for the $150,000, but for the $100,000 for the construction of the road westward, and they might never be asked for the $50,000. They were prepared to accept such acceptable conditions as the citizens wished. He explained how they had kept the charter alive when Mr. Fowler was dropping it. As to not taking stock, they had done so to the extent of many thousands, $60,000 half [illegible] expended. Such an amount of bonuses had never before been raised in Canada for such a small expenditure. If the town had advanced $4,000, Perth had given $6,000, and several of the Directors, as individuals, still more. He would like to see a committee appointed to agree upon the modification of the by-law. He would move that a committee be appointed to confer with the Directors and report.

MR. ELIAS BURNHAM said he had been a supporter of the road, but was not now. He then thought a through road would be a benefit to the town, but now he thought it would ruin it. Peterborough would get no more trade from the west, and would lose that from the east. He thought Toronto would get the trade. If the road helped the farmers, the farmers should build it. Manufacturers would not come unless they got bonuses. The great cities wanted the railway, but we were only a little place, and were better without it. No man had been a warmer advocate of the road than himself, but now he had changed his mind. [illegible] for want of business. He did not see the hope that they might get the Grand Junction road for nothing. Stores were now empty on George street, and there would be more empty if this road was built. It was very well to give labour, but they could not keep on raising money to pay labor. He hoped the road would not be constructed. The Midland Railway owed the town $80,000, and they, by taking traffic from it, would render it unable to pay. He did not believe in the workshops any more than the Bobcaygeon Independent. [illegible] 500 men at Port Hope? Lindsay had lots of stores vacant in spite of the railways they had aided. He quoted Mr. Hall as saying that the Grand Trunk would operate the Grand Junction when it got to Omemee. The Grand Trunk wanted it to form part of the connection with Sault Ste. Marie. If they made the grant they would repent it.

MR. G. M. ROGER said he was not there either as an advocate or opponent of the road. He wanted to be convinced that it would pay them to give $150,000, and that it would secure the construction of the road. It had done more harm than good to some other towns to have railways. He thought the road might benefit the rich men and make them richer, while making the poor poorer. Rents might increase, but they did not want to pay greater rents. It might cause work, but if it brought 3,000 men, they would do this work.

MR. DUMBLE said they had not come there to speak of it as a new project, after the town had carried a by-law four years ago. He thought men who had come to years of discretion would not change their minds so readily.

MR. ELIAS BURNHAM made another speech, advocating gravel roads.

MR. G. A. COX said Mr. Mills had put his name on a deputation to oppose the railway. From his position he would not take any active part in supporting or opposing railways. On the other hand Mr. Dumble had put his name on a committee as to the by-law, and there he could bring forward a plan which he thought for the good of the town, but which this was not a fitting time to bring forward. Mr. Dumble had said he (the speaker) had talked of the increased value that the road would give to his property. He had somewhat changed his mind now, not to the extent Mr. Burnham had, but he thought $150,000 was too much for the town to give. He thought the committee suggested would carefully consider the matter and would recommend what was good for the town.

MR. CLUXTON said it was creditable to the Town of Peterborough to have inaugurated a project which had been so widely and generally sustained. They would place themselves in a very awkward position in regard to the municipalities that had followed their example if they abandoned the project that night. He spoke of the abuse that was showered upon all who took part in public affairs. He instanced the time and trouble he had spent when president of the Cemetery Company in bringing the beautiful grounds into good order, and had then requested the Rev. Mr. Clementi to succeed him. At the very next meeting he had only received one vote. Mr. Mills had attacked the Directors, but if they were not rich, they were at all events honest, for they could have filled their pockets if they had only cared for that instead of pushing on the road to a [illegible]. After a passing criticism of some points of Mr. Burnham's speech, he read from a report of the committee of the Montreal Corn Association follows:—

"The Committee feels keenly how disheartening it is to have such a policy inflicted upon commerce by a corporation which has received so much public money, and which has been the recipient of so many legislative considerations. There is no action that can hopefully be recommended; for representation and remonstrance have heretofore been in vain. There is a distant prospect of the cities of Toronto and Ottawa being connected by railway; when that is accomplished, the Grand Trunk Railway Company may perhaps come to realize that, while it may not be able sufficiently to atone for the past, it must at least act more considerately, and deal more equitably with the Canadian public in the future."

He then gave details of freights by the present routes, showing the great saving that would be made. The Grand Junction would not benefit them because the Grand Trunk would change the name from Belleville as from Port Hope. As to the Midland not having work to do, [illegible] Lindsay, Norwood and [illegible] Lake. He had not been strongly in favor of the road when it aimed at Toronto, but he preferred greatly to adopt the present plan and connect with the Midland. He gave more details of freight to show the extortion of the Grand Trunk, and the necessity for a competing line. After having originated the charter they would make a show of themselves before the world if they rejected it to-night without reason.

MR. BERTRAM said he had signed the requisition to hear what modification was proposed. As to Mr. Mills' deputation to Toronto, he thought it was premature to oppose legislation when they did not know what it was. He thought $150,000 was too much to give for any benefits they would receive. He thought the promoters of the road deserved much credit and sympathy. He had not put himself in a position of antagonism, because the ratepayers of the town and county had voted aid, and he thought he could bear the taxation as well as the majority. Now, however, the scheme was virtually a new one, and they had a new bargain to make. If it was only to be a local road, it still might be beneficial, but it would be a question of the money it would cost. He wanted to hear the proposals of the promoters.

MR. DUMBLE said the proposition was to modify the condition which prevented them from doing anything till $1,000,000 was voted.

MR. CARNEGIE said they had arrived at a very important point in their history, and they should consider it carefully. It had been assumed by the speakers that the old by-law was dead, but it was far from impossible with the present feeling in Toronto that they might grant the bonus when the by-law could be carried out. If they get the Grand Junction it would simply be because the Grand Trunk was trying to ward off the projected competition. He thought the Committee should have power to consider the whole subject.

The following motion was then put by the Mayor:—

Moved by MR. DUMBLE, seconded by MR. COX,—That the following gentlemen be a Committee to confer and report to this meeting on Tuesday evening next, in reference to the request of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company for the re-submission to the people of Peterborough of a by-law to aid their railway, namely:—T. Cahill, Jas. Stevenson, J. F. Dennistoun, Wm. Cluxton, G. A. Cox, E. Burnham, J. J. Lundy, Wm. Hamilton, D. W. Dumble, T. Bradburn, T. G. Hazlitt, J. Bertram, J. Carnegie and R. H. Smith.

The Mayor declared the resolution carried unanimously.

The meeting then adjourned.

QUARREL OF PRISONERS.—The names of the two prisoners, who quarrelled in the Central Prison yesterday are Kelly and Ferris. The latter was the man who was stabbed. Kelly, while his back was turned, thrusting a knife deep into a fleshy part, inflicting a ghastly wound. Kelly will be placed on trial when it has been seen how Ferris wound is likely to turn out. Had the weapon been plunged into him half an inch higher, he would not have lived five minutes afterwards.

Remedy for Hard Times.
Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read it in another column. d146-1y

THE HAYDEN MURDER TRIAL.

The Jury Fail to Agree, and are Discharged—Scenes in Court.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 20.—At 7:22 p.m., yesterday, the jury in the Hayden case reported a disagreement, and were sent back. Mrs. Hayden sobbed hysterically, and kept a handkerchief to her face. Hayden manifested little emotion. The foreman of the jury reported the disagreement, and stated that some jurymen thought there was no reasonable hope of an agreement. The Judge thought they had better retire again, and if there was no hope of agreement they might report again.

At 9.30 p. m. the jury sent a communication to the Court asking "Have we a legal right to bring in a verdict under this indictment of murder in the second degree?" Hayden was sent for and took his seat in the Court without his wife, being the first time she had failed to be in Court. The jury entered, and the Judge charged, "If the jury is satisfied that the accused is guilty of murder in the second degree they should say so." Hayden's face flushed, and his friends were downcast. It was felt that the question was significant. The jury retired, but ten minutes afterwards came into the Court-room. This time Mrs. Hayden was present, prepared for the worst. The jury announced they were unable to agree, and were discharged.

Hayden was warmly congratulated by his friends, and several members of the jury shook hands with him. He said the disagreement of the jury was a great relief, as the suspense was getting terrible. He had no doubt the majority of the jury was on his side. He said one juror paid no attention to the testimony. Hayden was convinced this juror had made up his mind against him.

CURRENT EVENTS.

At the Greenback Convention in Washington the proposition to have the sessions opened with prayer was greeted with hisses.

MISS DURYEA, a young lady belonging to fashionable society in San Francisco, has shocked her friends by announcing her betrothal to a Chinaman.

IT IS ESTIMATED that more miles of railroad will be built during 1880 in the United States than during any year before. About 9,000 miles of new road are already under contract.

THE CULTURE OF FROGS is quite an important industry in Illinois, where one man has over an acre and a quarter of land, on which he is breeding 200,000 dozen of frogs of all ages for Chicago and Cincinnati markets.

UNDER THE HEADING "EXPLOSION IN A BED," the Norwalk (Conn.) Gazette tells of a married pair in Westport, Conn., who warmed a cold bed with a glass bottle full of boiling water. The bottle exploded with a pistol-like report, drenching them with hot water and making the children upstairs exclaim, "Is that Santa Claus?"

IN TEXAS the agent of a small dramatic company is in the habit of going to the passenger agent at every depot and buying 50 tickets at the reduced price of ½ or ⅔ the the fare, claiming he had that number of persons in his organization, but there were really only 15, and he sold the other 35 to "scalpers" at a sufficient profit to get his own people carried free.

THEY TALK OF FORMING this winter in Washington a Congress of ladies, of which all the wives of Senators, members of the House, and other dignitaries will be members. They will discuss grave and disputed questions of etiquette, dress, cooking, bric-a-brac, and confectionary.

HURON AND ONTARIO SHIP CANAL.—The Council of the county of York have sent a petition to the Ontario Legislature praying that an appropriation be made by that body for the purpose of making a new survey and detailed estimates of the proposed work.

CANADIAN PIG IRON is now being bought by the Americans. A considerable quantity of Three Rivers iron has lately been sent to the States, including 1,000 tons sold by the estate of the late G. B. Hall from the Radnor mines at $35 per ton, which is cheap, as prices are now going. The extensive St. Maurice forges are, we hear, to be started again shortly.

MRS. SCOTT-SIDDONS has thrown the modest members of the faculty of Asbury University, Greencastle, Ind., into a panic. She recently delivered readings in the town, and complimented her audience by appearing in a handsome party dress. The next morning at prayers the lady was publicly and severely criticised for her offence. It is maintained by the officers of the college that, by appearing in such a costume, she grossly insulted all who were present, and this opinion was advanced to students in the chapel exercises. The students on the other hand, like the way in which the lady arrayed herself, and are indignant at the judicious course of the professors, especially as she was brought there by a member of the faculty, and gave her reading for the benefit of the University.

GEORGE H. STUART, the well-known philanthropist of Philadelphia, has lost all his princely fortune by the failing of another whose endorser he had become. He surrendered his entire estate to the creditors of the party for whom he endorsed, and now at the age of over 70 years lives in a rented house, yet meets his friends every day with the sweet smile of conscious integrity and the proud content resulting from a well ordered and honorable life.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 21.—The general market was a light one to-day, much lighter than the fine weather would seem to warrant. The attendance of buyers was small. Beef was again in abundant supply as compared with the demand, and prices remain unchanged. Mutton, no change in prices to note, hind quarters selling at 6c. Pork held at our quotations, $6 being paid for fine hogs. Cut pork sold at 6c. @ 7c. per pound. Potatoes were in fair supply at 65c. per bag. Cabbages were slow at 40c. @ 60c. per doz. Roll butter was scarce, and sold at 20c. per pound. No eggs offered. Apples were in fair supply at 80c. @ 90c. per bag. Hay was again plenty, but maintained quotations. Clover seed is coming forward rapidly, and the receipts are heavy, causing a break in the price. We quote $3.75 @ $4.25. Wood plentiful and no change in price. Peas are still coming in and are firm at 65c. @ 66c. We heard of 68c. being offered for one lot, but could not authenticate it. Oats were scarce, 32c. was paid for two small lots. Rye, 70c.; one or two parcels being offered. There is very little rye offering in this market. Wheat is coming in quite freely, on a downward market. The price broke again to-day, and from two to three cents lower is being paid. There was an effort made by the farmers to get yesterday's quotations, but they failed. We quote Fall Wheat at $1.20 and Spring at $1.18. The eastern and western as well as the foreign market for wheat was again lower to-day with little or no prospect for an early advance.

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. wd21-1m

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. wd21-1m

Nervous Debility.

Vital weakness or depression, a weak exhausted feeling, no energy or courage, the result of mental overwork, indiscretions or excesses, or some drain upon the system, is always cured by Victoria Hypophosphites. It tones up and invigorates the system, dispels the gloom and despondency, imparts strength and energy, stops the drain, renovates the entire system, purifying the blood, increasing the appetite, and giving the stomach a healthy tone for food. Sold by all dealers. wd13-2w

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. wd13-2w

An Authority on Black Eyes.—Harry Hill the famous "sport," is said to know more about black eyes than the brightest brunette in America. He has given and taken thousands in his time, and he says the only thing which will remove them within twelve hours is Giles' Liniment Iodide Ammonia.

GILES' PILLS cure Constipation.

Time never sets so heavily on the aged as when they are ill and depressed. A heavy percentage of old people suffer from kidney complaints, etc., brought on by derangements of the secretory organs, who will hail with joy the great remedy prepared expressly to meet their cases—Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. It can be recommended with confidence. For sale by all dealers. wd13-2w

Hagyard's Yellow Oil combines in such an eminent degree all the healing, counter-irritant, extracting qualities known to medical science, that it is truly a family medicine that cannot be dispensed with. When applied to any Swelling, Sore, Burn, Chilblain, Frostbite, Skin Eruption, etc., its effects are magical. It is highly esteemed wherever known, and its enormous sale annually is the best certificate of its merits. wd13-2w

A meeting of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club will take place to-morrow evening in the Huffman House, at eight o'clock, when business of importance will be brought up.

St. George's Society.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough St. George's Society, for the election of officers and other business, will be held in the Court Room of the Town Hall this evening, at half-past seven o'clock.

Value of the "Review."

The value of the columns of the EVENING REVIEW as a means of publicity was proved yesterday. We gave the particulars of the theft of skates at the rink last week, and when the skates were offered for sale, the article noting the theft was remembered, which led to their recovery.

Cows Roaming at Large.

The cows that are allowed to roam about town, are becoming intolerable nuisances. They open gates and walk into your premises, destroying the shrubery, or otherwise annoying the occupants. They are sure to take to the sidewalk, to the discomfort of pedestrians. The question is frequently asked, How is this state of things to be remedied? And who is responsible?

Valuable Advice.

At a recent convention of the stove manufacturers held at Detroit, Mich., the President said:—

"If we would make the best possible use of our money, we should patronize ably conducted and responsible newspapers. The newspaper is immeasurably the best medium open to our trade; the most liberal and expert advertisers testify to its value, and in the employment of its columns we would find a means of escape from wasteful, undignified, and ineffective methods."

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: northerly to easterly winds, partly cloudy to cloudy weather, followed by areas of snow or rain. A charming day for Peterborough; moderate, westerly to south-westerly winds and clear weather. The thermometer indicated this morning at 8 o'clock 10° and at noon 20°, and in the sun 45°.

Snow and Sleighing.

The snow storm of yesterday, continued until nearly nine o'clock last evening, when the moon came out and the stormy north wind caused the mercury to sink rapidly. Although the fall of snow was light, there was a sufficient amount to make very good sleighing, and those having sleighs have availed themselves of it to-day. The day has been bright and cheerful though moderately cold.

County Lodge of Good Templars.

The annual meeting of the County Lodge of Good Templars, will be held on Thursday, Jan. 29th, in the Orange Hall on Water Street, at one o'clock. The Grand Worthy Templar of Ontario, the Rev. J. Shaw, of Whitby, will be present and take part in the proceedings. In the evening the Grand Templar will address the people of Peterborough at Friendship Hall, on George street, at half-past seven o'clock.

Signor Bosco.

Mr. Hillyer, advance agent for Signor Bosco, the celebrated magician, arrived in town to-day, and is making arrangements for giving three performances in Bradburn's Hall on the 24th, 26th and 27th instant.

Friendship Lodge Entertainment.

The 22nd anniversary entertainment of Friendship Lodge, No. 146, I.O.G.T., last evening, was the most successful and enjoyable one ever given by the Lodge. The snow storm prevailing did not deter people from coming out, and the hall was filled with an appreciative audience. The programme consisted of a quartette by the Misses Johnston, Mr. G. H. Johnston and Mr. James Thompson; solos by Mr. Templeton Brown, Miss Stratton, Mr. G. H. Johnston, Miss Heather and Herbert Mitchell; readings by Rev. Mr. Starr, Master Willie Mitchell, the blind boy, A. Clegg and W. Gulliett; recitation by Master Willie Mitchell. The singing, music and the readings were all a decided success, and it would be out of place to criticise, when all did so well. The reading by the blind boy, Mitchell, was an exhibition of the wonderful improvements in the blind language. To prove to the audience that the reading was purely by aid of the fingers, the chairman opened the book and the little fellow, when led to the desk, placed his fingers upon the page and read off, without hesitation, what was there printed. The Rev. Mr. Hadness, of Perrytown, attending the Peterborough Presbytery, being present, opened the exercises with prayer and also gave an excellent speech between the first and second part of the programme, taking for his theme, "Never Say Fail." At the conclusion Mr. Brown led in singing "God Save the Queen," when the audience separated with many of them expressing the wish that the entertainment might be repeated.

The Late Professor McKerras.

At the conclusion of a most impressive discourse, delivered last Sabbath morning, in St. Paul's Church, here, by the Pastor, Rev. E. F. Torrance, from the text, Isa. LVII., 1, 2.—"The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart; and merciful men are taken away, none considering that the righteous is taken away from the evil to come. He shall enter into peace: They shall rest in their beds, each one walking in his uprightness," the following graceful tribute was paid to the memory of the late Reverend Professor McKerras, "a man greatly beloved" by those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance in this town as elsewhere:—

"My mind was directed to this subject to-day because a righteous and merciful man has lately been taken away from our midst. All of you knew him to whom I refer by repute. Many of you knew him personally, and in his death you must feel that the church and the world have sustained a great loss. Occupying as he did a most important position in the church—a position for which he was peculiarly fitted by high intellectual endowments, rare beauties of character and much of the spirit of his Master, we ought to lay his death to heart, and to consider why he has been taken away. God has a wise purpose in this stroke, though we may not be able to see what that purpose is. The eye of sense beholds stricken relatives, sorrowing friends, an important post unoccupied, the eye of faith beholds a perfected spirit before the throne, a good and faithful servant entered into the joy of his Lord. Let us seek to follow this righteous and merciful man, even as he followed Christ, that when the messenger of death comes to us, we may not be unprepared, but ready to enter into peace."

Not a few of our old subscribers have sent us the names of one or two new subscribers along with their own for 1880, and thus have made one dollar go as far as one and a half did last year. THE WEEKLY REVIEW.

Any person now, and for the last twelve months a subscriber to the WEEKLY REVIEW, who sends us his renewal subscription with that of another person not now or for the last twelve months a subscriber to it, will have the TWO sent to any separate address for $2.50! Or if accompanied with the names of two other such, such persons may have the THREE sent to separate addresses for $3.00!

THE DAILY REVIEW.

Any person now a subscriber to the DAILY EVENING REVIEW who sends us his renewal subscription with that of another person not now on our subscription list, may have the TWO delivered or sent to any separate address for six months for $3.50, or for twelve months for $6.00!

OUR CLUB LIST.

We are also enabled to announce that the very liberal advantages offered in our Club List will be kept open until the first of February. ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 20.—In the Assembly, Hurd called up the resolution requesting the New York Congressmen to oppose the erection of a bridge across the Detroit River, as being detrimental to the navigation of the lakes. AN ENGAGEMENT WITH VICTORIA.

SANTA FE, N. M., Jan. 20.—The following has been received from Major Morrow:—"Alamosa, Jan. 18.—I engaged Victoria again yesterday in the San Mateo mountains, and drove him from his position. Lieut. French will be buried at Ojocaliente."

A TERRIBLE HOLE.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 20.—The report of the prison Sanitary Committee to the Legislature on the condition of the penitentiary describes a deplorable state of affairs. Eight convicts cannot live longer than a few months. Fifth others probably cannot survive the coming spring. Two hundred others are in a state of debility and the balance are not healthy. There is much uneasiness among the Indians in regard to the pending negotiations at Washington. Designing parties have circulated a report that as soon as Ouray returns the Utes must go. The citizens of Ouray have taken a decided stand against the parties who commenced the erection of buildings on the reservation, and have obtained a warrant for a person known to have furnished whiskey to the Indians.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a years since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit.

Special to the Review, Jan. 23.

Mysterious Affair.—A most remarkable letter has just been received by the city police from a Mrs. J. E. Dickinson, of Petersburg, Menard County, Illinois, U. S., stating that a letter written by her husband to her address has been picked up by an American on a wharf in this city and mailed to her. She states that her husband left home for Chicago with stock for which he received $600, and that he writes to her to the effect that he was drugged in that city, and that when he came to himself he was on a large steamer confined as a prisoner and forced to work. He had called for help but without success, and the boat was at the time he wrote in the river, so that he intended, when his letter was finished to throw it through a window at night. The woman very naturally expressed her fears that her husband may be crazed and in some hospital here, and innocently inquires if there are pirates upon the river here. His name is James Edward Dickinson, and he is described as follows:—About 5 ft. 6 inches in height, dark hair, blue eyes, weight 180 lbs., walks very erect, had a long moustache and a scar on his body, five inches by four, caused by a blister. The poor woman appeared by her letter to be in sad distress, and entreats the police to make diligent enquiries and let her know the result. The detectives are looking into the matter.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 23, 1880.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

PRIVATE BILLS.

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—This being the last day for presenting petitions for private bills, a large number were presented. The only one among them of any interest to the readers of the REVIEW was that of the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, for amendments to the act incorporating the William Hall Poor Trust.

THE JUDICATURE ACT.

After the Co-operative Association Bill had been put through committee, Mr. Mowat's Judicature Act was read a second time. The bill seems to be largely copied from the English Act, and seems to be one about the general principle of which there is little difference of opinion. It is a bill of [illegible] containing a great many provisions, it will doubtless take a long time to put through committee, when its details are under consideration. Complaint was made that the bill had only just been distributed. It does seem a great pity that such measures could not be printed and distributed before the meeting of the House in order that its members might be afforded ample opportunity of considering important measures—a consideration which is all the more necessary when there is no second chamber to revise the work of the first.

COLONIZATION ROADS.

On motion of Mr. MERRICK, a return was ordered showing (1) the amount of money expended respectively by each overseer employed on colonization roads for the year 1879, giving names of overseers and road or roads built or repaired by each, and the daily wages paid each overseer respectively; (2) the total number of days' work done, and the total amount paid for such wages on each job; (3) the total number of days' work done by, and total amount of wages paid to teams on each job; (4) the total amount paid for provisions by or on behalf of each overseer, including freight; (5) the total amount paid for tools, implements, blankets, cooking utensils, and all supplies other than provisions by or on behalf of each overseer, including freight.

AGRICULTURAL AND ARTS ASSOCIATION.

Mr. GIBSON (Huron) moved for a return from the Treasurer of the Agricultural and Arts Association, giving a detailed statement of the income and expenditure for the years 1878 and 1879. He said his object was to obtain a fuller statement than was contained in the papers usually presented to the House. The income from the Exhibition held at Toronto in 1878 was $22,000, to which was added $10,000 granted by the Government, making a total of $32,000. Of that amount about $14,000 had been expended in prizes, thus leaving a balance of about $18,000, and the expenditure of this sum the House and the country should know more about, so that they might see whether they were getting value for their money. He observed that at London, Hamilton, Guelph, and Toronto, almost as good Exhibitions as the Provincial were held. Some of the money received in 1878 was paid to the city on account of the buildings that were put up.—Carried.

THE GRAND JUNCTION.

TORONTO, Jan. 23.—Among the private bills introduced to-day was one relating to the Grand Junction Railway Company. The County Council of Peterborough will do well to keep their eye upon this bill.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTES.

Mr. CROOKS introduced a bill to transfer the control of Mechanics' Institutes from the Minister of Agriculture to the Educational Department.

THE COST OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

On motion of Mr. BAXTER, an order of the House was passed for a return, giving the names of the books authorized by the Minister of Education for use in the public schools; the number of copyrights held by the Government, and the number held by private individuals, together with the names of the publishers and the price of such books to the public.

In giving his consent to the passage of the motion, Mr. CROOKS expressed his intention, in view of recent circumstances, of fully considering the possibility of making a considerable reduction in the retail price of school books.

THE FIRST DIVISION.

The first division of the session took place to-day on the motion for the second reading of Mr. Creighton's bill, providing that the License Commissioners should furnish a detailed statement of their expenditure to the municipalities. Mr. HARDY opposed the bill on behalf of the Government, and as a balm to the "Reform principles" of their supporters, promised that the Government would cause such information to be distributed, without the passing of the bill—a practical acknowledgment that such information should be given, but that it should not be compulsory simply because a member of the Opposition asked for it. Of course under the circumstances the bill was voted down. As it was the first division the yeas and nays may, however, prove interesting.

YEAS—Messrs. Baker, Baskerville, Bell, Boulter, Broder, Calvin, Creighton, French, Harkin, Jelly, Lauder, Lees, Mack, Meredith, Merrick, Metcalfe, Monk, Morgan, Morris, Near, Parkhill, Richardson, Rosevear, Tooley, White, Wigle.—26.

NAYS—Messrs. Appleby, Awrey, Badgerow, Ballantyne, Baxter, Bishop, Blezard, Bonfield, Cascaden, Cook, Dryden, Ferris, Field, Fraser, Freeman, Gibson (Huron), Graham, Harcourt, Hardy, Hawley, Hay, Hunter, Laidlaw, Livingston, Lyon, McCraney, McKim, McLaughlin, McMahon, Miller, Mowat, Murray, Nairn, Neelon, Pardee, Patterson, Paxton, Peck, Robinson (Cardwell), Robinson (Kent), Robertson, Ross, Sinclair, Springer, Waters, Watterworth, Wells, Widdifield, Wood, Young.—52.

Mr. [illegible] and Mr. Striker paired. The following were absent:—Messrs. Crooks, Caldwell, Gibson (Hamilton), Deroche, Chisholm, McMaster, and Long. Stormont and West Hastings were unrepresented.

PRESBYTERY OF PETERBOROUGH.

The Presbytery of Peterborough met on Tuesday, 20th January, in St. Andrew's Church. Present,—Messrs. Cleland, Ewing, Windell, Smith, Andrews, Bennet, (clerk), R. J. Beattie, Bell, Hodnett, Clarke, Cameron, Torrance, McFarlane, Ministers; Messrs. Robertson, Riddel, Johnston, Sanderson, Scott, Carnegie, [illegible], Haultain, Casement, Elders. Mr. Hodnett was chosen Moderator for the next six months.

The first business done was the discussion of a motion by Mr. BENNETT, of which he had given notice at a previous meeting, viz.:—

"That the Presbytery take the necessary steps towards the organization of a Presbytery Fund, to aid in the erection of churches and manses within the bounds."

Mr. BENNETT submitted the following plan for the regulation of the Fund:—

I. The Fund shall be raised by collections and subscriptions taken in the congregations within the bounds of the Presbytery, and received from friends of church extension generally, and shall be managed by a committee of the contributors, appointed annually by the Presbytery.

II. No contribution shall be given from the Fund for any church whose cost shall exceed $3,000; nor for any manse whose cost shall exceed $1,200.

III. For no church shall more than $1,000 be contributed from the Fund; and for no manse shall more than $400 be given.

IV. In no case shall more be given for either church or manse than has been contributed by the people themselves.

V. No grant shall be made from the fund until the plan of building, the estimate of expense and the deed shall have been submitted to the committee, and approved of by it; and no grant shall be paid until at least one-half of the money subscribed—or legal security therefor—shall be in the hands of the Treasurer.

VI. All applicants shall be understood by the fact of their application to engage that if a grant be made to them, no subscriptions shall be solicited outside of the bounds of the congregation unless leave shall have been obtained from the committee.

Messrs. Bell (convener), Torrance, Bennett, ministers, with Colonel Haultain and Mr. John Carnegie, elders, were appointed a committee to consider the scheme, and to report at next meeting.

Colonel HAULTAIN was appointed to preach in Perrytown, Knoxville and Oakhill on Sabbath, and to read to the people at Oakhill the finding of the Presbytery arrived at in the matter reported to them from that station.

The following resolution was adopted regarding the remit sent down from the General Assembly on the question of the establishment of a Presbyterian University of Canada:—

"That in the opinion of the Presbytery, the question of the establishment of an Ecclesiastical University for the purpose of conferring degrees of divinity is one which does not fall within the legitimate province of the Church of Christ, and that in the present circumstances of our Church, the agitation is both inexpedient and impracticable, and calculated to lead to no satisfactory results."

In answer to the prayer of a petition from the people at Blairton steps were ordered to be taken for the transfer of that station from the jurisdiction of the Kingston to that of the Peterborough Presbytery. The other matters contained in the petition were handed to the Presbytery's Home Mission Committee for consideration.

The Home Mission business of the Presbytery was next taken up and discussed at length. Steps were taken in order to the payment of the arrears of salary due to the missionaries who had been labouring within the bounds during the summer months.

The next meeting of the Presbytery was appointed to be held in Port Hope, and in the first Presbyterian Church there, on the 23rd March, at 10 o'clock a.m.

MR. BELL reported regarding trial discourses submitted by students since last meeting of Presbytery.

Upon the remit "Anent the status of retired ministers," the Presbytery adopted the following:—

"That the names of ministers who have been permitted by the General Assembly to retire on account of age or infirmity from the active duties of the ministry, and who continue to reside within the bounds of the Presbytery to which they had belonged, be retained on the rolls of their respective Presbyteries."

After half an hour employed in praise and prayer, the Presbytery adjourned at six o'clock, to meet in St. Paul's Church at nine o'clock on Wednesday morning.

On Wednesday morning the question of the indebtedness on the Minden manse was considered at great length. The ministers and representative elders residing in Peterborough, Mr. Bell, convener, were appointed a committee to take steps to secure the release of the manse from its present embarrassment.

The Presbytery adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock for the purpose of holding the S. S. Conference appointed at the last meeting in Cobourg.

THE PRESBYTERY AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Peterborough Presbytery met the Sunday School Superintendents and teachers in conference at St. Paul's (Presbyterian) Church, Peterborough, on Wednesday at two o'clock. There was a good attendance and a deep interest was taken in the proceedings. The Reverend A. Bell, of St. Andrew's; E. F. Torrance, of St. Paul's; A. McFarlane, of Bobcaygeon; and W. Bennett, of Springville, of the Presbytery, were present.

After prayer and singing the Rev. A. Bell opened the discussion of the subject, "The Preparation of the Session at Home." The Rev. D. Sutherland, M. A., not being present, Sheriff Hall introduced the subject, "The Relation of the Sunday School to the Session." Rev. J. Cameron not being present, Rev. E. F. Torrance gave an outline of the subject, "Teachers Meetings." The Rev. A. Bell presided.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was largely attended by parents and friends of the Sunday School, and the services were interesting. The Rev. A. Bell, of St. Andrew's Kirk, presided and opened the meeting with prayer and singing. The subject of "The Teaching of Presbyterian Doctrine and Government in the Sunday School," was introduced by Rev. A. McFarlane. Quite a discussion followed, which was participated in by Messrs. Sheriff Hall, N. Meikle, of Norwood, Wm. Tully, Ropes, G. H. Johnston, D. Pentland, Col. Haultain, and the Revs. Bell, Bennett, Torrance and McFarlane. It was apparently the sense of the meeting that the children should be taught the doctrines of the church from the shorter Catechism at home, and rehearsed in full school by the Superintendent at a time set apart for general instruction. Some maintained that a portion of the Sunday School hour each week should be appropriated by the teacher to his class for this work, which was deemed impracticable by others. All agreed, however, that the children should be instructed in the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church either in the Sunday School or at home, or both.

The Rev. Mr. BENNETT then introduced the subject of "How parents may help the Sunday School," Col. Haultain and the Rev. Mr. Torrance taking part in the discussion. Mr. Bennett set forth the duties of parents in a clear and unmistakeable light.

The subject, "The claims of baptised children upon the church," Rev. F. R. Beattie not being present, Col. Haultain opened the discussion, and was followed by others, after which, and the singing of a hymn, the Benediction was pronounced.

RETURNING TO THE SHANTIES.—A great many teams are returning to their respective shanties on the Burleigh Road, which they had to leave a short while ago for want of snow and frost.

Young, J.P., at the instance of Mr. Chalmers, sr., (he keeping a sharp eye on the county property) for trotting across the bridge here one day last week. As he had a load on his sleigh he said he was compelled to go across them at a trot, the bridges being bare for want of snow; the case was therefore dismissed.

SEPARATE SCHOOL.—A good many of the Roman Catholic ratepayers—being displeased at the last election for school trustee—have withdrawn from this section, No. 8, and are going to have a school of their own, to be held in the R. C. Church here. It is a pity we cannot all agree.

MADOC.

MINING.—A deposit of free gold has been discovered on Mr. Henry Ball's property, in this place. This gentleman is the owner of a bed of red hematite iron within the corporation, and only about thirty rods from the railway station. Mr. Hall, of Buffalo, has been stopping here since Saturday last. He has purchased 10 car loads of refuse from the iron mines. This refuse is too full of sulphur for manufacturing purposes, and he wishes to test it with his new process.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

We are glad to learn that Montreal has at last come out boldly in favour of this project. At the late meeting of the City Council Mayor Rivard and Alderman Nelson gave an account of their trip to Ottawa on the 23rd ult., at which city they were present at the reception of the delegation by the Minister of Railways and Canals. Both gentlemen expressed themselves in favour of the Trent Valley Canal, the completion of which would divert trade to the city. We think that they are right, and we are glad that Montreal has become a fast friend of the truly feasible canal project before the public. In Montreal's reception into the ranks of the Trent Valley supporters may be seen the acknowledgment of the inutility of the Ottawa Canal. That proclaimed as dead Montreal comes to the aid of the project that alone can, by its completion, [illegible], if not altogether prevent the building of the [illegible] bridge. To build the bridge means carrying trade by the very doors of Montreal. This the city discovers will never do, and she therefore tells the world that she is in favor of the Trent Valley Canal. It is a pity her representatives had not attended the reception of the delegation as live delegates, and not merely onlookers. Their voices added to Ontario would have made a good effect on the Minister. It would seem that Toronto, the "selfish" Queen City, stands alone. Surely the position of Montreal and many counties in Ontario will be able to neutralise, if not kill any undue influence that city will bring to bear on the Government.—Trenton Advocate.

Was Adam a Peruvian?

Dr. Rudolf Falb, whose linguistic researches in South America have already been noticed in this paper, has lately sent to a Vienna paper a summary of his conclusions. He says that the language spoken by the Indians in Peru and Bolivia, especially in Quichua and Aymara, exhibit the most astounding affinities with the Semitic languages, and particularly with the Arabic—in which tongue Dr. Falb himself has been skilled from his boyhood. Following up the lines of this discovery, Dr. Falb has found, first, a connecting link with the Aryan roots, and, second, has arrived face to face with the surprising revelation that "the Semitic roots are universally Aryan." The common stems of all the variants are found in Quichua and Aymara, from which fact Dr. Falb derives the conclusion that the high plains of Peru and Bolivia must be regarded as the point of exit of the present human race.—Scientific American.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

A GRANDSIRE'S DREAM.

I [illegible] book,
Rapid and [illegible] I know;
[illegible] my [illegible] look;
(Tis fifty years ago)
[illegible] youth [illegible] hope is dead,
And life's [illegible] running low.

The Christmas bells are chiming sweet
(Tis fifty years ago),
There comes the fall of fairy feet
[illegible]
And [illegible] as pleasure might,
[illegible]

From out the ivied manor-house
I see a golden glow;
And merry voices welcome us
(Tis fifty years ago),
A [illegible] hand in hand
[illegible]

In hall and homestead, great and small,
Sing blithely as they go;
The smile of one the smile of all
(Tis fifty years ago),
And hearts are light and eyes are bright,
That Christmas long ago.

[illegible] out [illegible] of hair,
That [illegible] o'er brow of snow;
And brown eyes droop with shyest air
(Tis fifty years ago),
And cheeks are flushed and voices hushed
To whisper sweet and low.

A kerchief crossed a swelling breast,
The heart that throbbed below
Grew restless with its own unrest;
For, ah, how could you know
That I loved you, so well, so true,
(Just fifty years ago)
[illegible] a measure through the hall
With stately steps and slow—
Once more I hear your footsteps fall;
Your bright cheeks brighter glow,
And you are mine, by right divine,
Of love—long years ago!

Your dainty cap, your golden hair,
Your muslin kerchief's snow;
Your tiny feet that cross the stair
Keep [illegible] with thine, I know;
All these I hear and see, my dear,
As fifty years ago.

How fair you looked! How fond I loved!
'Twas well it should be so;
I gaze upon your picture now
Till tears begin to flow;
And all the past is held as fast
As fifty years ago.

It is not fifty years—and time
Has stayed by us, I know;
We hear the merry Christmas chime,
We see the falling snow;
And hand in hand so close we stand,
My love of long ago.

The voices sweet of friends who greet
Are close to me, I trow;
The fire-gleams dance in radiant heat
The holly-berries glow.
I have but dreamt of days I've spent
Since fifty years ago.

. . . .

Alas, who stands demurely here,
With eyes of tender glow,
So like the eyes of you, my dear,
In days of long ago?
She smiled, I ween, at grandsire's dream
Of fifty years ago!

A LONG NAP.

Susie Godsey's Sleep of More Than Twenty Years.

For more than twenty years the extraordinary case of Susan S. Godsey, better known as the "Sleeping Beauty," has puzzled the most noted physicians of this country and Europe. She was born in Obion county, Tenn., just across the State line, and about six miles from Hickman, Ky. Her parents were extremely poor and lived in a small log house containing only two rooms. Until eight years of age the girl was strong and healthy, and seemed in no wise remarkable. At that age, however, she was stricken with fever, but was attended by an experienced physician, who soon checked the disease. The girl sank into a slumber which lasted an unusually long time and finally awoke weak but well. To the surprise of the family and physicians, she remained awake but a few minutes, when she again went to sleep. From that time forward, a period of more than twenty-[illegible] has never been awake more than [illegible] minutes at a time. [illegible] lethargic state invariably lasts a certain number of hours. She awakes at six o'clock in the morning and three o'clock and eight o'clock each night, never varying one-half minute from the regular time. She takes but very little nourishment, and that only twice in twenty-four hours. During the time in which she sleeps she does not appear to breathe, and a mirror held against her nostrils remains untarnished. Her breathing, if indeed she breathes at all, is not sufficient to stir the lightest down suspended against her nostrils by a silken thread. When her remarkable condition became known, physicians flocked from all parts of the country to see her. None were able satisfactorily to account for the phenomenon, although many theories were advanced. The true cause has never to this day been determined, although the woman may still be alternately sleeping and waking with the regularity of clock-work. One physician, who visited her continually for sixteen years, frankly confessed that he could form no opinion regarding the case.

She is described as rather under medium size, and with the exception that she is sometimes troubled while awake with neuralgic pains in her head and neck, and that one arm is slightly paralyzed, enjoys [illegible] anything, good health. One remarkable feature of the case is, that while her hair has grown to a great length, her finger-nails have not grown any since she was stricken. Far from anything repugnant in her appearance, even while animation is suspended, she would be considered a very pretty lady by those unacquainted with her condition. She retains that knowledge she possessed at eight years of age, but has not been awake enough since to learn anything more. She knows her relatives and friends, and converses with them in her conscious moments. Before falling asleep a slight hiccough or choking sound proceeds apparently from her throat. She then so quickly becomes insensible that she is sometimes unable to finish a sentence or even a word while talking. A short time since a committee of five physicians were appointed to watch the subject, and found the case was just as it had been represented to be.

During a Western journey a brakeman opened a car door and pronounced the name of the station in a tone and with a pronunciation which everyone in the car heard and understood. I arose and handed him a silver half-dollar, as a testimony of my delight in finding one conductor or brakeman who could speak English. He took it and smiled. I hope he will transmit it to his children. In attempting to send the voice out with force everyone avoids the consonants and prolongs the vowels; even worse is the change of tone, according to the form of the name—the first syllable being shouted and the second dying in a whisper, or the reverse. Some conductors emit the name with a jerk, as if it had lodged in the throat and was expelled by a violent cough. It is rare that one hears a station called out in tone and pronunciation such as one is accustomed to in ordinary conversation. Companies ought to have a glossary on the back of the ticket with names of the stations, and, opposite the sound, put into letters, belonging to each.—Christian Union.

H. M. S. "PARLIAMENT."

The libretto of the new operatic extravaganza, "H. M. S. Parliament, or the lady who loved a Government clerk," is now in print. The adapter of the piece, in his preface, disclaims any political proclivities. He says: "He has attempted, he hopes not without success, to get a little harmless fun out of political peculiarities and weaknesses, irrespective of party—in fact he has endeavoured to act as much as possible after the pattern of the Irishman at Donnybrook Fair, and wherever he has seen an available head, has tried to hit it in good-humoured fun, not out of any animosity, but simply for the fun of the thing. If any head should appear to come in for more than a fair share of taps, it must be attributed solely to the particular prominence of the said head, and not to any other cause."

The piece is in two acts. The music the same as that of "H. M. S. Pinafore." The following characters are introduced, and will be readily recognized:—

Sir Samuel Sillery, K. M. G., Chief Financier of H.M.S. Parliament.
Captain Mac A., Commander of H. M. S. Parliament.
[illegible], clerk in the [illegible] department.
Alexander [illegible], a philanthropic member.
Tom Black, a statistical member.
Ben Burr, a poetical member.
Angelina, the captain's daughter.
Mrs. Butterbun, purveyor of refreshments of H.M.S. Parliament, a monopolist.
The Chief Financier's little ring of senators, members, clerks, &c., by a full chorus.

The first act opens in the library of the Parliament Buildings; the second on the terrace in front of the Parliament Buildings, by moonlight. Appropriate scenery and costumes are being painted and prepared, and the burlesque will be presented for the first time on the 16th February at Montreal.

The following selections from the libretto will give an idea of a few of the songs and choruses introduced, and those acquainted with Pinafore—and who is not?—will have no difficulty in "placing" them.

In Act 1., scene one, there is an opening chorus by members similar to the Pinafore, commencing:—

We sail the ship of State,
Tho' our craft is rather leaky &c., &c.

A barcarolle in place of that in Pinafore commencing "Over the bright blue sea" is then sung. It is as follows:—

Up from St. John, N. B.,
Comes Sir Samuel Sillery, K.M.G.
Wherever he may show,
Up, up the price of all things go.
Shout for the great N. P.,
And Sir Samuel Sillery, K.M.G.

There is a good part of the time taken up with dialogue, and then there are two songs by Sir Samuel Sillery.

The first begins:—

Sir Samuel—I am Sir Samuel Sillery,
Inventor of the great N. P.,
Whose praise Canadians loudly sing.
Ministers—And we are the Ministers who form his little ring, &c., &c.

The second song begins:—

Sir Samuel—When I was a lad in the year '34
I was errand boy in a druggist's store;
I washed out the bottles and I rolled the pills,
And I dunned the patients for their little bills.
I washed out the bottles so carefullee
That now I am a Minister and K. M. G. &c., &c., &c.

Then comes a glee beginning:—

A Government clerk is a grasping soul,
And ought to be his country's pride.
He will always be granted, tho' perchance he want a meal,
And very many things beside,
&c., &c., &c.

Then ensemble:—

This very night
At half-past eight,
Just while the House is in debate,
From the gallery
I soft will steal
To Alban's Church
We swift shall go,
A clergyman,
For weal or woe,
Will make us one, &c., &c., &c.

Butterburn sings to the captain:—

Butterburn—Things are seldom what they seem,
Power will pass away like dreams.
Once, not [illegible] years ago,
[illegible]
Captain—[illegible]
I did so.

Later on Sir Samuel is made to say:—

Sir Samuel—For I'll teach you that the great N. P.
Must be spoken of respectfullee,
And always be regarded as a sacred thing.
Chorus—And so say the Ministers who form his little ring, &c., &c.

Of course the songs and choruses of which the above are extracts, occur only at intervals. There are many pages of dialogue, some of it of a sparkling nature, and every line amusing. The burlesque concluded with a very telling scene between Brittania and Canada on the annexation question.

Mr. Chas. Arnold, of McDowell's well-known combination, has gone to New York to superintend the preparation of the necessary costumes and the painting of the scenery. The company will produce the Parliament in Toronto near the close of February.

Presence of Mind.

Many railroad accidents are prevented by a presence of mind on the part of engineers. The Car Builder relates the following as among the recent evidences of presence of mind on the part of locomotive engineers:—

A passenger train on the C. B. & Q. road was rounding a sharp curve, just under a piece of tall timber. The watchful engineer saw a tree lying across the track 60 feet ahead of the locomotive. The train was running at a rate of 35 miles an hour, and to check its momentum before reaching the obstruction was out of the question. The engineer took in the situation at a glance. He threw the throttle wide open, the engine shot ahead with the velocity of an arrow, and with such tremendous force that the tree was picked up by the cowcatcher and flung from the track as if it had been a willow withe. A man with not so cool a head would have made the best possible use of these 60 feet in the way of checking the speed of the train. That would have caused a disaster. Bradford, an engineer, was bringing an express train over the Kankakee line from Indianapolis. As the engine shot out from the deep cut and struck a short piece of straight track leading to a bridge, a herd of colts was discovered running down the road. The distance to the river was only 100 feet. Bradford knew he could not stop the train, and also knew that if the colts beat the locomotive to the bridge they would fall between the timbers, and the obstruction would throw the train off, and probably result in a frightful loss of life. It took him only half a second to think of all this. The other half was utilized in giving his engine such a quantity of steam that it covered that 100 feet of track in about the same time that a bolt of lightning would travel from the tip of a lightning rod to the ground. The colts were struck and hurled down the embankment just as they were entering the bridge.

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. wd12-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. wd1-1m

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country highways on springless stage. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. wd1-1m

FRIDAY, JANUARY 23, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Midland Railway.

The bill to amend the Act incorporating the Midland Railway has passed through Committee.

T. V. C.

The Committee on the Trent Valley Canal met on Thursday afternoon, and made arrangements for their future course of action.

Gloves Lost.

A good pair of warm gloves were left in the Review office a few days ago, and they have not yet been claimed.

Snow and Sleighing.

Snow has been falling nearly all day, and has been melting nearly as fast as it fell. Sleighing is only fair. If we can believe probabilities, we are to have colder weather, which will make good sleighing.

An Acknowledgement.

The Committee of the Peterborough Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the receipt of $5 from Mr. S. H. Henderson, being his salary for the past two months as Captain of the Fire Department.

Good Appointments.

We notice that the Separate School Board have appointed Mr. John Corkery as their Secretary-Treasurer, having thus secured the services of a very efficient officer. Their choice of Mr. Thomas Dolan as their Chairman is also a good one.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are; Fresh to brisk south-westerly to north-westerly winds; cloudy to partly cloudy weather, with snow flurries. Slightly lower temperature. The thermometer indicated in Peterborough this morning at nine o'clock 29°, rising to 32° at noon. At 2 o'clock the temperature had fallen 3°, the thermometer marking 29°, and still falling. Snow flurries visited Peterborough in rapid succession all the morning, with clearing weather in the afternoon. Sleighing is only fair.

Challenge Curling Match.

A challenge match between the rinks of Mr. Adam Hall and Mr. A. H. Macdougal was played last evening for the Champion Belts, resulting in a victory for Macdougal's rink. The great odds thus shown was, no doubt, the result of a change of Mr. Hall's rink at the beginning of the game without previous practice, the third man having been placed first, the second man third, and the first man second. It matters little how good players they may have been in their former positions, a change on the eve of a match would naturally throw them all out of guage, and the result must prove disastrous. The following players formed the rinks :—

R. Davidson,	R. B. Mowat,
A. Mercer,	T. P. Attrell,
J. McClelland,	Geo. Dunsford,
A. Hall, skip—8.	A. H. Macdougal, skip—20

The 57th Battalion Parade.

Last evening Companies No. 1 and 3 turned out with full ranks for regimental parade. They made a fine appearance in their new uniforms, and were favourably criticised for their soldierly bearing. No. 2 turned out about thirty men in their old uniforms. The 57th Battalion band accompanied the Battalion. The route taken was through George, Hunter, Simcoe, Water and Murray streets, to the drill shed, where they were dismissed. Company No. 2 met for drill in the drill shed; they not having received their new uniforms, did not turn out with full ranks in regimental parade. Before the next street parade this company will have received their uniforms, and will be ready to take their place in line without detracting from the general appearance. The Battalion marched to Ashburnham where No. 3 had prepared a collation.

The Fire Brigade.

The Firemen are busily engaged in putting their house in order. The Hall has been thoroughly renovated, the walls have been whitened, the apparatus cleaned up, the ladders painted and the hose put in thorough repair. The whole place now has an air of neatness. The Hose Company have 2,000 feet of rubber hose upon one reel and 500 feet of leather hose upon the other reel, all in a state of readiness at the first tap of the bell. The hooks and ladders are also in condition for immediate use. There is no doubt but that the recent change from a partially paid system to the volunteer system will prove to be of advantage to the town in many ways. The steamer is being cleaned up and brightened, and begins to look like a new engine. There are many changes that ought to be made to render the department more efficient. One important one is the entrance. The doors should be so constructed that no delay need be caused when opening them. Now they open inward which is contrary to the general fire department rules. There should be no possible obstruction to egress in case of an alarm. The hose tower should be speedily erected and so constructed that the hose can be handled rapidly, and be thoroughly cared for. Much money can be saved to the town by proper care. The apparatus and every facility should be supplied by the town for that purpose.

Signor Bosco.

We notice that this celebrated magician, who will appear in Bradburn's Hall for three nights, commencing to-morrow evening, January 24th, has been receiving very flattering notices from the press of Canada. The Hamilton Spectator says :—

> "The Signor does everything indicated on his bills, and his sleight-of-hand tricks and wonderful illusions were simply marvellous, and produced feelings of the greatest interest and admiration amongst all present."

One distinguishing feature about these entertaiments is the distribution of a large number of beautiful and costly presents to fortunate ticket holders.

An incident in connection with one of Signor Bosco's performances, which may have interest for the curious in such matters. Signor Bosco spent the winter of '58 and '59 in Berlin, and was one day summoned to appear at the palace in order to exhibit his performances before the present Emperor (at that time Prince Regent) and the Court. Among other apparatus, he had a terrestrial globe, upon which Prussia was made to appear very small. Signor Bosco advanced to the Prince, who was sitting upon an arm chair in the front row, and asked him to take the globe in his hand. The Prince did so, when to his astonishment, the former little Prussian began to assume much larger dimensions. "Your Royal Highness perceives," said Bosco, "How Prussia will become aggrandized under your hands." The trick was loudly applauded at the time, but little did the spectators imagine that what was intended as a courtly jest was destined to become a political earnest within seven years from that time.—Pall Mall Gazette. 1d18

IRISH RELIEF FUND.

The General Committees Organized—Ward Committees Formed.

At a meeting of the General Committee, held in the Town Council Chamber last evening, the Mayor was appointed Chairman and Treasurer, and Mr. Garvey Secretary of the committee. Committees were appointed for each ward, who were requested to make a house-to-house collection, and to report the result of their canvass to the General Committee on Thursday, the fifth day of February. The Secretary was instructed to invite the Reeves of the different incorporated villages and townships of the county to organize committees for the same purpose, and to forward the money so collected to the Mayor. A deputation consisting of the Rev. V. Clementi, Dr. O'Sullivan, Mr. Clarton and Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald was appointed to wait upon the Town Council and appeal to them for a grant in furtherance of the same object. The following committees were appointed to canvass the Wards :—

First Ward.—The Rev. V. Clementi, Messrs. T. Cahill, J. Corkery, Wm. Martin, A. Williams, Jos. Landy, John McNaughton, George Taylor and Patrick McNamara, Jr.

Second Ward.—The Rev. M. Lynch, Mayor Landy, Messrs. G. A. Cox, Wm. Clarton, D. Hopkins, Wm. McBain, John Lynch, John Garvey, T. Cavanagh, Geo. Dunsford and P. D. Doran.

Third Ward.—The Rev. A. Bell, Dr. Boucher, Dr. O'Sullivan, Dr. Kincaid, Dr. W. H. Burritt and Mr. Wm. Yelland.

Fourth Ward.—The Hon. R. Hamilton, Messrs. D. Carlisle, J. E. Belcher, Jas. Hogan, J. W. Fitzgerald, Chas. Grant and Wm. Lee.

SCOTLAND.

There is a strong impression that no further call will be required from the shareholders of the City of Glasgow Bank, and that if the securities turn out as favourably as is expected it may be possible to return a small sum to those who have met all the calls.

"Keep a thing seven years and you will find a use for it" has found an illustration in the case of the Edinburgh fire escape, by means of which four tailors were rescued from a burning land on North Bridge, Edinburgh, a few weeks ago. It is more than a dozen years since the escape was obtained, but it has hitherto served only a decorative purpose.

A few weeks ago a gentleman who was travelling south to Greenock with a corpse to have the body taken on board of a steamer which was the only one for the place that day, took the precaution to send a telegram per the railway company that a corpse would arrive by a certain train, and to advise the captain of the steamer accordingly. The telegram was duly despatched, but instead of sending the message as handed in some of the operators took off the message that a "horse" would arrive per the train indicated. The message was communicated to the captain, but he demurred at receiving a "horse" on board. The chagrin of the gentleman in charge may be imagined when he arrived in Greenock to find that the steamer was gone, and he was left at the terminus with his cumbrous luggage.

A writer in the Edinburgh Daily Review makes the following statement :—"The other day in the ladies' room of a confectioner's in Edinburgh, I counted twelve ladies at one time each drinking spirits, porter or ale—none had wine; one, a girl not 14 years old, consumed a bottle of stout. At the counter of the same shop, while I was buying some 'sweeties,' two young ladies under 20 paid for three 'brandies and soda.' In the same place, at another time, about noon, I was shocked to see a lady order and drink a glass of raw brandy, and go away without eating anything. A friend who witnessed a similar incident said the draught was followed by a liberal application of eau de cologne, to cover the offensive smell. I am credibly informed that school-girls, with books in hand, go to the confectioners for 'nips' of cherry brandy, more than one such visit being paid by the same girl at different shops on her way home; and in one case the owner of the shop got a severe reprimand from a young girl for having entered her brandy in the family pass-book, as she intended to pay for it herself separately."

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

MAHOMED JAN'S POPULARITY—ANOTHER RISING IMMINENT.

Uncertainty of British Intentions—Ayoub Khan the Favourite of the Afghans.

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines.

ANOTHER RISING EXPECTED.

London, Jan. 22.—A Cabul despatch says :—Matters here are very unsettled. An outbreak is possible at any time, and almost certain to occur as soon as the snow melts. Mahomed Jan is very popular among the Afghans, who will willingly follow him again when called upon. They do not admit their defeat, and say they were only dispersed because they had no cannon with which to dislodge the British from Shirpur, but the next time they will bring cannons. Shirpur has been greatly strengthened, but it is too large for the present garrison of 3,000 Europeans and 4,000 natives to hold, and at the same time take the offensive against a combination of equal strength with the last.

CONTINUING TO TREAT.

The Khohistanis continue to treat, but they cannot be relied on to keep quiet when disturbances commence. Two influential Sirdars of Wardak have come in, and it is hoped others will follow. The excitement at Ghuznai and Logar continues. Mahomed Jan is actively preparing for another rising.

THE BRITISH POLICY.

The uncertainty whether the British intend to hold or abandon the country prevents influential chiefs from cordially co-operating with us, or preparing the Government to succeed us. Nothing can be done until our policy is known.

CHOICE OF AN AMEER.

It is believed if the Afghans are left to choose an Ameer, they would choose Ayoub Khan, commander at Herat, who is avowedly hostile to the British and friendly to the Russians.

ENGLAND.

The Postal Department has made a bid for scientific attention by its claim that telephones are an infringement of the Government monopoly of telegraphs, and its motion for an injunction is soon to come before the Court of Queen's Bench, where a very interesting legal point will be raised.

Great Britain has two thousand yachts, with a tonnage of 92,000 tons, whose prime cost was at least $15,400,000, and assuming a fourth of them to be in commission during the summer months, the sum expended on their maintenance would, at a rough estimate, amount to nearly $3,750,000. The money spent on yacht building and repairs is some $750,000, and 5,000 men—1-12 the number of the British naval force—are employed.

The number of deserters from the army advertized in the Police Gazette during the year 1879 was 5,840. This total is much below the average of previous years, the number of deserters in 1878 being 8,399, and considerable deduction should be made for absentees who return or are arrested.

An epidemic of measles, which broke out at Hull at the latter end of November, was reported at a meeting of the sanitary committee yesterday to be spreading. Sanitary inspectors had found the disease to be very bad in some districts. All public, many private, and several Sunday schools have been pemporarily closed.

The World is glad to hear that the rumour as to the contemplated destruction of the old buildings at the top of Middle Temple-lane is incorrect. These houses are now almost, if not actually, the oldest within the precincts of the Temple, having escaped the great fire of London; and the benchers are determined to preserve this interesting and picturesque bit of ancient London, a determination fully justified, too, by the excellent condition of the buildings in question.

"German Syrup."

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthma, Croup, severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them. The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist, and ask what they know about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. dw51-1y

The crew of the ship kept her afloat until she was docked.

LORD BEACONSFIELD'S ILLNESS.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Lord Beaconsfield's illness is pronounced not so serious as at first feared. He is organizing his Parliamentary forces to meet the anticipated onslaught of the Irish phalanx, who are expected to act as one man against the Government.

AN ORGAN OF THE JESUITS.

ASIAN DEFEAT DENIED.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 23.—The statement that news has been received from Persia announcing a second defeat of the Russians by the Turcomans, in consequence of which the Russians were compelled to evacuate Tchikislar, is unfounded. News has been received from the Russian expedition, which simply reports an attack by Turcomans on a Russian envoy.

Van Dyke avers that he diligently worked to learn where pianos made by Weber, Chickering and Hale were sent, and that he called upon Hale, and on behalf of Steinway, proposed that he shall make and sell a number of pianofortes, upon which the names of prominent manufacturers should be put.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The Times' Washington report says that in all the Southern States there are travelling to-day so-called special agents of the Treasury Department, who receive six dollars a day, and their expenses, whose sole duty seems to be to secure for Sherman voters in the national convention. During his recent visit to New York, Sherman had a long consultation with Collector Merritt and other prominent officers as to the possibility of his nomination. It is believed that the direct result of that consultation was the establishment of the so-called "Anti-Grant" Club in Albany, and the proposed establishment of similar clubs in New York city.

THE Queen has become patron of a movement promoted by a Church Sunday School Committee for commemorating the establishment of Sunday Schools a hundred years ago.

A MISSIONARY of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland in Old Calabar, writes that one of the converts, a woman, is so anxious to keep the Sabbath regularly that she has provided herself with a board with seven holes and a peg tied to a string. The peg is shifted every day. Whenever it is in the first hole, she knows that Sunday has come.

THE Presbyterian Church in Canada contains 869 pastoral charges, 1,259 congregations, 75,000 families, and about 130,000 communicants. This average stipend is $850 per annum. Its contributions for missionary and college purposes, last year reached $341,000, while for all purposes, including ministers' salaries, &c., there was raised nearly $1,250,000. Six theological colleges are connected with the church, besides the two ladies' colleges at Ottawa and Brantford. The missionary work is divided into the home, French and foreign departments, each under the care of a separate committee.

Summoned to Downing Street.

DUBLIN, Jan 23.—His Grace the Duke of Marlborough, Lord Lieutenant, has been summoned to London to confer with Sir Stafford Northcote, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord Beaconsfield on the situation in Ireland, and as to the construction of the paragraph in the Queen's speech referring to Irish affairs. The fact that the Ministry has gone somewhat out of its way to seek enlightenment upon Irish questions so close to the opening of Parliament is considered to be an indication as to the result of measures which may be introduced during the session, and an apprehension that Home Rule influence may develop greater strength in the House than was anticipated at the beginning in Parliament. The utmost confidence is expressed as to the character of the advice which his Grace the Duke will give the Ministry.

THE GREAT REACTION.

Day after day readers of the Globe are being told that the country is already heartily sick of the N. P., and would gladly return to Sir Richards' revenue tariff. In fact, that a great reaction had taken place since the 17th September, 1878, as not a single industry was satisfied with the results of protection. Well, one of those events which no man can control made a vacancy in the representation of the good old Reform constituency of North Lanark—a constituency which even in 1878 returned a gentleman with one foot in the grave to support Sir Richards' revenue tariff; and what has been the result? The return of a gentleman opposed to the N. P., it is true, but by a vote which certainly does not prove that "a great reaction" has taken place. From figures furnished by the Globe itself to prove that this election is an "emphatic condemnation of the Tilley tariff," we learn that Mr. Jameson, the N.P. candidate, polled one vote more in the town of Almonte, the seat of woollen manufacturers, than he did at the last election; and the Globe gravely informs its readers in an editorial that "such a victory in such a place is a curious defeat." We had thought that "a reaction" must show a decreased vote, but according to Globe logic it would seem that the reaction it has been making so much fuss about means that the N.P. is holding its own, if not increasing its majority—a sort of reaction which certainly pleases its supporters, and as it pleases its opponents, parties must be for once happy all round. In Lanark village again the Reform majority—we beg pardon, the revenue tariff majority—was exactly the same on this occasion as in 1878, viz: 36. Turning to the townships—to the farmers who are so horribly disgusted with the N.P., we find that Pakenham increased its N.P. majority from 61 in 1878 to 101 in 1880, while the other townships gave larger majorities for the revenue tariff in 1880 than they did in 1878—the chief gain, however, being in the northern townships of the riding where Mr. Mowat's non-political road money and overseers under the direction of Mr. Caldwell, M.P.P., would come most into play. We notice the Globe does not give the total vote on both occasions, and to arrive at anything like a fair conclusion as to the merits of the contest as bearing upon the N.P., it is necessary to consider the total vote polled as well as the majorities. Moreover, as both personal and local considerations always enter more or less into every contest, it is obvious that whatever political significance the recent election in North Lanark possesses, it indicates that the advocates of the N.P. in 1878 are perfectly satisfied with its working in 1880, and, if that be so, that is certainly all we desire, so far as the Government is concerned, as we believe they have already all the following, which it is in the interests of the country any government should have. We want a reasonably strong Opposition as well as a strong Government.

THE GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—My attention was called yesterday to the report of the railway meeting held on Tuesday evening, from which it appears that some of our citizens entertain the idea that we are likely to get the Grand Junction Railway built to Peterborough without expense to the town. On the same day, in the course of an examination of the President of the Grand Junction Railway Company, at Belleville, in a suit in which that company is applying for a mandamus to compel the County of Peterboro' to hand over debentures to the amount of $75,000, with nine years accrued interest, I saw the contract between the company and Mr. E. O. Bickford for building the road, by which the completion of the line from Hastings to Peterborough is made dependent upon the Town of Peterborough and the Townships of Otonabee and Asphodel, granting a bonus to the company of $70,000. And, if in addition they get $75,000 from the county under a by-law, which, on account of illegality and irregularity in its submission to the people, never received a third reading by the council, it can hardly be said that we shall be getting this road for nothing.

Yours, &c.,
Jan. 24th, 1880. E. B. EDWARDS.

COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The Committee of the Peterborough Branch Bible Society in presenting their annual report have nothing very special to notice in the operations of the Society during the past year. True it has kept the even tenor of its way, as will be observed by the reports of the Treasurer and Depository. It has enjoyed peace and cordiality in the meeting of its executive, and has enjoyed another year to labor in the good work of scattering around the precious seed of the Word of God. There is abundant cause for gratitude and praise to the Father of all Mercies for the blessings He has vouchsafed to us during the year just closed, and there is also suggested, by the fact of another year having passed away, matter for reflection on the flight of time on the termination of another period of labour, as well as an acclamation to be active in the cause we are engaged in, to work while it is called to-day, as the night of death is fast approaching when no man can work.

Your Committee has held four meetings during the year, marked by an earnest desire for the extension of the Society's labors.

An appeal having been made during the year by the Parent Society for additional assistance in consequence of increased demands upon her resources, your Committee at once forwarded $25 out of the funds in the hands of your Depository.

Your Committee considered it expedient and arranged for holding the Bible Society meetings in the various country districts during the month of October, instead of March as formally, the season of the year being more suitable and enabling your Committee to get in all the subscriptions previous to the annual meeting. Your Committee have pleasure in stating that the meetings held were well attended and addressed by deputations from the town, and your Committee's anticipations fairly realized.

Your Committee would recommend that the following be the office-bearers for the ensuing year:—

PRESIDENT—R. Kingan.

VICE-PRESIDENTS—All ministers of the Gospel residing in Peterborough.

TREASURER—Geo. E. Shaw.

SECRETARY—R. Fairbairn.

DEPOSITORY—P. Connal.

COMMITTEE—James Stratton, W. C. Nicholl, John Walton, Joseph Ford, Dr. Fife, Mr. Jeffers, James Stevenson, Wm. Yelland, Wm. Wand, W. H. Taylor, M.D., Col. Hauitain, Sheriff Hall, Geo. Burnham, M.D., A. P. Poussette, J. Carnegie, Dr. Bell, Richard Cowan.

The adoption of these reports was moved by the Rev. Dr. HARPER in an appropriate speech, and seconded by Mr. STRATTON, and adopted after the names of Messrs. Jas. Edwards, Wm. Aldridge and D. Pentland had been added to the committee for the current year.

Dr. O'MEARA then moved, That whereas the truth as contained in the Holy Scriptures is the only power that can give true freedom, is the only satisfying answer to man's yearnings in this world, and unfolds the only solid hope for a boundless future, and as we ourselves have freely received its blessings, we record it as our duty to use all possible means to give the Holy Scriptures both to those ignorant of the blessings they convey and those who have not the means with which to procure them. And in doing so delivered a most interesting address on the work done by the British and Foreign Bible Society in various parts of the world during the past year.

The motion was seconded by Dr. FIFE in a few appropriate remarks.

After a vote of thanks to Dr. O'Meara, and the singing of the doxology, the benediction was pronounced.

BOBCAYGEON.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.—The Independent says:—An attempt to burgle the store of Mr. Parker was made on Wednesday night. Mr. Parker had been absent from home, and returned unexpectedly late at night. The attempt was made soon after Mr. Parker's return. He saw the burglar and fired at him. The shot missed, and the burglar escaped.

MEDICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

HARMLESS PREPARATION FOR PREVENTING THE HAIR FROM TURNING GRAY.—1. Cologne water, 2 oz.; cantharides tinct., 2 drms.; oils of rosemary and lavender, each 10 drops. 2. Vinegar of cantharides, ½ oz.; cologne water, 1 oz.; rose water, 1 oz.

A NEW VEGETABLE substance has recently been discovered in France, which dissolves meat completely in a few hours, thus furnishing the first instance of perfect artificial digestion. The solution obtained can be used as an article of diet, and is at once absorbed into the system. The substances used in these experiments is extracted by a simple process from the juice of a tree, and can be procured in large quantities. Since the researches of Darwin and Hooker in insectivorous plants were published, it has been shown that certain vegetable juices were capable of dissolving animal substances; but the digestive ferment had not been isolated in any quantity, and the discovery was of little practical value. Now, however, it will not only be possible for those with weak stomachs to digest their food before eating it, but they will also be able to distinguish between those articles of food which can be readily dissolved, and those which are insoluble, and consequently indigestible.

ONE OF LIFE'S PICTURES.

The Tragical End of a Runaway Husband—Prospective Prosperity for his Deserted Wife and Children, who are Supposed to be in Peterborough.

From the Port Hope Times.

Eighteen or twenty years ago there lived a highly respectable family in Millbrook, the head of which was named Johnston Brown. At that time Mr. Brown occupied the honourable position of "Mine Host" of the village hotel, and his income was further enlarged by the products of a farm which he owned in the neighborhood. The whole family were much thought of by all the neighbors, the host being genial and his better half being a woman full of the spirit of human kindness.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown had a nephew, a smart, fine, active and handsome young man, whose appearance always prepossessed those whom he met in his favor. He was considered a little wild, but had not a single mean trait in his composition. An Adonis such as John Brown, the nephew's name, was sure to be looked upon favourably by the fair sex, and so it proved. His ability, suavity, and general good heartedness, won him a host of friends among the ladies in the neighbourhood, and in time his heart learned to beat tumultuously when in the presence of one of them, the prettiest and most winsome of the whole in his estimation. A brief courtship ended in marriage, and the young couple settled down to double life under favourable auspices. He was either a tinsmith or a carpenter, our informant is not clear which, and he received good wages. Three little lives blessed the union of the pair, and albeit all his wildness had not quite left him, Brown made a good husband and a devoted father.

But a dark day came. The father of his family circle became dissatisfied with this humdrum, work-a-day, monotonous life, and, feeling that his abilities justified him in seeking a larger field for their exercise, he left his pleasant, happy, though commonplace, place of abode on a search for work in the United States.

The next page of his history is a sad one. In Rochester he first struck work, and, in a week or so after settling there, he anounced that he was a single man. His appearance, his steadiness, and his general bonhommie soon won for him a host of friends. A fair young girl laid her heart at his feet, and he accepted the gift without accompanying it with the honor which was due so devoted a love—marriage.

Meanwhile the loving Canadian wife anxiously awaited the promised letter from her liege lord. Days lengthened into weeks, and weeks into months and months, into years, and still it never came. Fifteen years has passed, and it has never yet reached her. Her state of mind can better be imagined than described, but finally she concluded that she must not allow her grief to sap her strength for she had 3 dear little mementos of her happy married life to provide for. So she has worked on with her needle all these years, until now, when she has passed the turning point of this life, without hearing aught of her long-lost husband. The intelligence contained herein will startle her if she ever sees it, and we trust she will, for it is only written because of an earnest desire on the part of some friends here who wish her to reclaim her own. They do not know whether she is still in Peterborough or Millbrook, but they think she must be in one or the other of these places.

To return to the erring husband. After leaving Rochester he went south, and secured lucrative employment on a railroad. From the testimony of an eye witness, who worked alongside of him for years, and who knew of his leaving his family, but not the reason, we are enabled to bring some little cheer out of the otherwise cheerless history to the loving and deserted wife and children, who must now be getting up towards manhood and womanhood. The mother will remember that she wrote a letter, and enclosed in it pictures of herself and children, sent it hap-hazard in search of the husband whose whereabouts have been so long a mystery to her. The Superintendent of the railway received it, and showed it and its contents to those in employment under him. One of these was Brown, and although he denied the letter he secured the pictures and kept them continually about him until his sad and tragic end. The witness was of opinion that he loved the ones left behind too well to go back after he had fallen, and that consequently he had never discovered himself, although at times his latent love for them would break out in his rapturously kissing the pictured faces of his lost loves.

The next and closing page of his life is a sad and tragic one. Another syren had cast her spells upon him, and they lived together although she too was only a mistress. This was in Norfolk, Va., and there the guilty twain resided until about six short weeks ago. He was earning a large salary as conductor on the North Alabama Railway, and as he had been prospered all these years, he kept an establishment of more than ordinary dimensions and style for one who was simply a conductor. One day about six weeks ago his mangled bleeding body was carried home, stiff in death. In the discharge of his duty, he had met with an accident which had peremptorily closed his erring life. The cars had run over him.

The Times' informant of these facts, who has peculiarly good facilities for knowing all about the matter, thinks that Mrs. Brown, who is thought to live in Peterborough or Millbrook, should at once take steps to secure the remnants of his fortune, which is considerable. The woman spoken of above has seized what he possessed, but as she was not his wife she has no legal right to the valuable effects. We trust, therefore, that the much-wronged woman or her children will see this sketch, and that they will be successful in securing what is undoubtedly theirs by right. They have suffered enough already, and we trust that now, although the death of the husband and father will have a saddening effect, they will reap the joy which cometh after long waiting.

If Mrs. Brown or any of the children of the late John Brown wish for any further information or particulars, they will be cheerfully given by applying at the office of the Port Hope Times, or by addressing communication to Box 269, Port Hope.

HOW LONG?

BY THE REV. HORATIUS BONAR, D. D.

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand."—Rom. xiii.12.

How long shall the shadows linger,
And the sky be overcast;
How long shall the day-spring tarry,
And the reign of evil last;
How long shall the sleepless surges
Beat on this helpless shore;
And the dreary winter night-winds
Prolong the sullen roar?

How long shall the Christ be slighted
By the world to which He came;
How long from this earth be hidden
The grace of His cross and name?
How long shall the holy banner
In vain o'er the nations wave;
The love of God be rejected,
[illegible]

The years of sin, are they ending,
With their cloud, and frost, and gloom;
The day of joy, is it dawning,
In the [illegible] come;
The rain of heaven, is it nearing,
The Kingdom of truth and light;
The sun of the cloudless morning,
Is it now to end our night?

Is the silence long unbroken
About to be broken now;
The songs of the upper temple,
Shall we sing them here below;
Is the strife of passion ceasing,
The havoc, the war, the blood;
And the tumult of the ages,
All hushed by the voice of God?

Is it near, the day of order,
The ending of hate and wrong,
The close of unequal battle
Of the weak against the strong;
Is the unknown calm descending
In its grandeur from above;
With the long, long [illegible] triumph
Of righteous peace and love?

Is the unbelief now fleeing,
Is the faith, long banished, nigh;
Is the Daystar in its splendour
Lighting up our twilight sky;
When joy in its holy fullness
Shall to our world be given,
And the veil be rent for ever
That hides this earth from heaven.

THE DISTRESS IN GLASGOW.

By the Special Commissioner of the Glasgow Mail.

It is cheering to see signs of reviving prosperity in the ample preparations for the return of the "festive season," as we call it. Never were our fashionable shop windows more resplendent in their various lines than they now appear, piled up with gorgeous and costly fabrics culled from all nations, or groaning under the load of good things for Christmas cheer. They are a sight to behold, and it is pleasant to think that there is a bright side yet in spite of hard times, and that all this extravagant display is to bring into free circulation a little of the current coin that is held in reserve to brighten Christmas and lighten the last days of a sorrowful old year. But better, in some respects, as we certainly are, this Christmas, the distress of last winter is not yet a dream of the past; nay, every day it is becoming more apparent that unless a general revival of trade speedily takes place, and work opens up in some shape or another, there will yet be a darker page in the record of hard times to deplore. And, as a proof of this, I may state that during the last week I have had more applications for help from the Mail Distress Fund from ministers and missionaries than at any former period within the same time. The missionary of one of our wealthiest churches in the West End writes as follows:—"Though some have now obtained employment, I find many others in the depths of dire destitution. I could fill many pages with 'cases' of sore distress met with in my own successful experience from day to day." Another missionary, one who has had great experience in mission work, writes:—"It is impossible for me to give relief to all the distress I meet with every day in my visitations. 'Help' from the Mail fund came when I was despairing, with so many 'cases' of destitution before me." Another missionary who labors in the West End says, referring to the distress still existing from want of employment:—"It is no easy matter for a missionary to go in and out amongst them and not be able to help them. I have had to pass by many families in my daily visitations, because I could not hear their tale of distress with nothing in my hand to give for relief." Visiting with a missionary in Bridgeton district we came to the dwelling of a young couple who had been able to keep up a respectable appearance until the husband was thrown out of employment through slackness of trade. It was not until they were in extremity that the missionary was made aware of their circumstances. I believe Mrs. R—— is dying for want of proper nourishment, Mr. W—— said, as we knocked at the door of the humble dwelling to which they had removed when poverty drove them from their "cosy" little home in a better part of the district. It was a bitter cold day—raw and bleak and searching—but there was no fire, only a pale glimmer from a handful of spent out ashes that gave out no heat to the shivering children around the black hearth. Furniture or plenishing there was almost none; even the bed was stripped, and had only a thin print mat thrown over it to give it the semblance of decency. The baby's cradle also was bare, but, in blissful ignorance of his hard beginning, "Baby Jim" lay smiling in happy dreams under the slender protection of a thin woollen "cloud" too flimsy for the pawn shelves. It was painful to see the efforts, however, that had been made to keep up appearances. The husband (a painter) had, by skilful touching up, made the cold, bare walls furnished—looking, and his artistic taste had been exercised on the few articles of household plenishing that were left. Everything of value had been parted with at a great sacrifice. Blankets that cost 24s put away for 8s, chairs that were worth 24s sold for 8s, dishes that cost £2 sold for 12s. "My husband," said Mrs. R——, "is steady and industrious, and a good tradesman. He was 13 years with his master, and would never have lost his situation but for the sickness. He has been out of employment nearly six months. We were comfortable when my husband's wages were coming in. He is a Good Templar, and there was no broken pays. We have done what we could to hide our poverty, thinking aye that work would turn up. I tried to get a day's work when my man could get nothing to do; but I have been ill, and my work stopped also. When I made anything it had to go for the rent, and we had to put away all our things for food. My husband went out in the morning early without any meat to look for work, and we have often been two days without anything to eat. We would not see the children want sometimes. I had only a half-penny worth of meal to serve the day. When the children cried for a piece, we coaxed them to go to their bed; and to try to get them to sleep, we went to bed at six o'clock, and kept the house in darkness. I have got very weak since my illness, but some days we have no food to take. Since the neighbours found out we were so poor, they have given the children a share of what was going, although it could be ill spared. My illness began with a cold and rheumatism, I had put away all my clothes and my boots to keep us living, and I think that is how I got cold. I don't know what is to become of us, for I am getting weaker and weaker. I am afraid to wean the baby, for I would not get milk for him now. We never applied for relief. We would suffer anything rather. We are both young yet," added the proud-spirited wife, whilst a hot flush rose to her pale, thin cheek. But there could be no doubt she was dying on her feet for want of nourishment. It came out that neither she nor her husband (who was out looking for work) had broken their fast since the previous day, and there was nothing in the house to make a meal. Passing on to another district, we entered a tidy little dwelling, whose chief plenishing was a picture of the Virgin Mary and a crucifix, reverently preserved throughout all the vicissitudes of fortune. The father, a joiner by trade, had been out of employment many months. Was four years with his master, who parted with him only through slackness of trade. There were five children to provide for, the eldest of whom was only 13 years old; and to make matters worse another had just been added to the number. When we called, Mr. D——, the father, a respectable-looking man, in spite of his poverty-stricken appearance, had just returned from a long day's fruitless search for work. It was a sad home-coming, for the children were crying for "a piece," and the mother had nothing to give them. Little Pat, a feeble, weakly baby, who seemed to have less strength than the newly-born infant on his mother's bosom, clasping his frail arms around the father, began a lamentable wail for the drop of watery skim-milk that kept him in life, and refused to be comforted because it could not be supplied for want of funds. It was only a farthing's worth that was poor Pat's allowance, but there were so many months to fill that extras were now out of the question. "In the long famine of work everything that would fetch a farthing had to be put away for rent and food, furniture, clothing—even my tools," said Mr. D. "I couldn't see the little ones crying with the sore hunger on them. I have walked until I've dropped with fatigue looking for work," continued the poor fellow, "and nothing comes of it but bitterness and disappointment. It's hard when a man's able and willing to work that he can't get it." It was easy to see it was not of his own hardships personally he was thinking, but of the helpless ones dependent on his strong arm—Little Pat, dying for the nourishment that was needful to sustain his weakly body, and the mother lying faint and ill, without any of the comforts that her condition demanded. Never was aid more urgently required than in this case, and most gratefully was the little I was enabled to give from the Mail Fund received. "It is the first time we have taken charity," said the father in husky tones, "but, thank God, Pat will get his drop of milk and (fondly patting the waxen cheek resting on his arm) maybe he will pull through yet, poor little chap."

Passing on with Mr. Donald, missionary, we entered another poverty-stricken home in the same locality. The household consisted of a father, mother and six children. The father (a weaver) had been over two months out of employment, and previous to that had been on short time for a long period. He had tried to get work in every direction, and failed, and at length, unable to bear the sight of the starving children at home, he had gone away in pursuit of employment to a distant part of the country. * * "I was a pirn-winder, and we thought a little wark micht come in, and faither micht get a job in anither toon till times came round again." The wheel was standing in the window in working order, and a goodly array of pirns to ca' as well, but the youngest child had succumbed to the hardships of poverty, and the mother's hands were filled with her deein' bairn. "I just get a snatch of work done now and then," she said, "when Willie draps asleep, and I have to sit up and waste oil, and the pay will hardly afford it." Twenty-seven hanks to wind for 6d—that means, sixteen dozen pirns to ca', for which sixpence is paid. "Oh! but we are thankful to get the wheel going," put in Mrs. M——, "when nothing is coming in. Our only breadwinner the noo is wee Johnnie. I have to keep him every second day from the school to earn something. He is a piecer in the mill, and makes 1s 9d a week. * * I had a good well-plenished house when my man was working. We were respectable folk considered aye, and we struggled long and hard against poverty. But we couldna aye haud oot wi' so many to keep and little or nothing earning, and syne we had to take the thing we had gathered so carefully and put them awa' to keep the house and get meat. We had to put away blankets, bedding, and clothes—even the kist had to be put away after it was emptied. I had to sell my boots to buy food, and some days we had nothing in the hoose. I bought a penny worth of coals with my last penny. My man started early in the morning in the 'har' without any breakfast. He heard there was a prospect of work at D——. He had no money, so he had to travel on foot. His flannels were away, and he had no warm clothing. It was a sair heart to me to see him start on a journey hungry and bare." * * * The doctor said that Willie needed nourishing diet; but he cannot get what will keep life in now hardly." * * * * * Whilst Mrs. M'—— was telling her sad story, an infant's cry came from Willie's cradle, and a young girl who had been hiding in the shadow of a dark corner came forward and clasped to her bosom a lovely babe who had just awaked from its slumbers. The young mother was a mere girl, but she looked ill and worn, and there was a heart-broken expression on her countenance that ill accorded with its youthfulness. She was thinly clad, and her feet were bare, but she had not the appearance of abject poverty, and she was clean and tidy and interesting. She burst into tears when spoken to, but after a little persuasion she told her painful tale. She was an orphan; her name was Katie; had been brought up in the country and kept her father's house until he died. After her father's death a friend who had removed to Glasgow offered to get her into a mill to learn, and she came here. She had been four years in the mill, until the work stopped, and she had been out of employment fourteen weeks. She was to have been married to a young man who had courted her three years, but he left Glasgow when her baby was born, and forsook her. The baby was nine months old. "I paid 3s a week to a nurse when I was in work," said Katie, whose tears flowed incessantly, "but when I could get nothing to do I had to take away the child, and put away all my clothes to pay lodgings and get a little food. I had good clothes, and I was careful; but now I have nothing. I had to take off my boots and stockings to sell them for food. Then, when I had nothing to pay my way, I had to go away. I had no home and no friends, and I wandered through the streets with the baby in my arms, not knowing where to go, and thinking we would be both better dead and out of the way. I was ill and weak for want of food, and the baby was crying with the cold; then suddenly I minded on Mrs. M'——. She knew me when I was at home, and belongs to my native place; and I came to her door and knocked, and she took me in, and let me share with her what she had." "I could'nt refuse Katie a shelter when I had a roof over my head," put in Mrs. M'——, "I only wish Katie hadn't such a dreadful cough, and that I could be kinder to her in her distress." It is thus the poor help one another.

DR. J. J. MACLAGAN maintains that typhoid fever is not contagious if proper precautions are exercised to guard against its spread. The communication of the disease is not direct by contact—it is indirect by infection of drinking water, or of an atmosphere which may be remote from the person who is the source of the poison. The practical outcome of his article resolves itself into this—first, that the mother may nurse her son, the wife her husband, the sister her brother without the risk involved in the case of typhus or scarlet fever; and second, that there is little or no danger to the other inmates of the house if its sanitary arrangements are perfect.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

SATURDAY, Jan. 24.—There has been a large market to-day, the first good one this year. There was a good attendance of buyers, and sales were in many instances quickly made. Beef was again abundant, and the advance in price of last week was not maintained. Some fine beef, badly butchered, went low, while the bulk went at $3.25 to $3.75 per cwt. for the fore quarter, and $3.75 to $4.50 for the hind quarter. Mutton was scarce, and an advance of one cent a lb. was effected. We quote 6c. to 7c. per lb. The receipts of pork were light, but sold at $5.75 to $6.00 per cwt. Chickens were again plentiful at 30c. to 35c. per pair. No change. Ducks were in fair supply at 40c. to 50c. per pair. Geese 40c. each. Turkeys were plentiful at 70c. to 90c. each. Butter in fair supply, but the lower quotation was freely accepted; some very choice lots brought 20c. Eggs brought 16c. to 17c.; they are coming in more plentifully. Lard, 9c. to 10c. Potatoes plentiful, at 60c. to 65c. per bag. Turnips, 15c. per bushel, or 25c. per bag. Parsnips, 60c. per bushel. No onions in. Cabbages, small white, at 25c. per doz.; red cabbage, at 30c. per doz. Geese feathers, live, 50c. to 55c. Geese and turkey feathers, mixed, 30c. Woollen yarn, 60c. per lb. Wool socks, 25c., and wool mitts 30c., were selling freely to-day. Apples were in fair supply, and were selling at 50c. to 75c. per bag for cooking, and 70c. to $1.00 per bag for table; Northern Spies sold readily at $1.50 per bag. Hay, plenty, at $6.00 to $7.00. Several loads of straw were sold at $2.00 per load. Wood was again plenty; no change in price to note. Grain—Wheat is coming forward rapidly to-day, and some excitement was created as the farmers mostly were expecting to get $1.25 for their Spring Wheat, although they were aware of the downward tendency of prices. The reports from abroad of the continued lowering of prices caused buyers to be indifferent, and the price went off from a cent to two cents per bushel, Spring selling at $1.15 @ $1.16, and Fall Wheat at $1.17 @ $1.18. Rye was taken at 70c., very little coming forward. Oats in light supply at 32c. @ 34c. Peas 65c. and steady. Clover seed has been coming forward in abundance, and the markets everywhere have become glutted, and prices have gone off from 50c. @ 75c. per bushel. It is difficult to sell at $3.50, while $4.00 is being paid to-day for very choice seed.

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. w4d13-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless carts. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Large Numbers in Town.

The large market and the many farmers in town with wheat made the principal streets of Peterborough quite lively.

The Snow By-law

The snow by-law, which for a time produced a very beneficial effect, seems at present to be tending to become a dead letter, as the present state of George Street testifies. The town authorities should see to this.

An Appeal.

The suit, Hurdon vs. Cox, on which the personal liability of Mr. Cox, the President of the Midland Railway, on a draft drawn against the Company, is in question, and which was decided against the defendant, has been appealed to the Court of Appeal.

Stone for the Corporation.

The field stone for which tenders are asked by the town is to be delivered and corded up, where directed by the Street and Bridge Committee, in quantities of not less than ten cords, instead of two cords, as at first stated in the posters.

Court of Queen's Bench.

We find the following in the morning papers:

BEFORE CHIEF JUSTICE WILSON.

Re McDOUGALL v. POUSSETTE.—Judgment. Rule discharged with costs.

BEFORE CHIEF JUSTICE HAGARTY.

Re GRAND JUNCTION AND PETERBOROUGH.—Stands until 27th inst.

Curling.

The following rinks played an interesting game on Friday evening during the progress of the carnival to the entertainment of many lovers of the game who were spectators:—

Dr. Fraser,	B. Ostrom,
R. Innes,	R. E. Wood,
Wm. G. Ferguson,	R. B. Mowat,
J.T. Din, skip—16	A.H. Macdougall, skip—10

The game was won by Mr. J. T. Din's rink by 6 shots.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Moderate to fresh winds, mostly westerly to south-westerly; partly cloudy to clear weather; not much change in temperature. Peterborough had a continuous light fall of snow all yesterday and last night, with a slightly colder temperature. This morning the sun came out bright, but a change took place before noon, and snow flakes were seen flitting down. The thermometer indicated at 9 o'clock this morning 22°, and at noon 28°, with the wind westerly and cloudy.

Sporting.

Mr. H. B. Merrick, Mr. A. H. R. Sproule, and Mr. M. O'Brien had some good sport fox-hunting on Friday. The hounds started the fox in Cherry Orchard, on Mr. Wallis' farm, thence ran to Lily Lake, returned to James Dickson's old mill, took across the country, and ran over three miles to the Communication Road near Mrs. Dickson's, went back northwest to Mr. John Walton's farm, then returned to Mr. Jas. Dickson's, where the dogs ran him through the woods for over an hour, till he took the ground. He was unearthed by Mr. Jas. Montgomery's little fox terrier going in over fifty feet under ground. The fox was bagged alive, having afforded good sport by a run of over 30 miles in three hours, the dogs keeping close to him all the time.

Oddfellowship in Peterborough.

The following is an extract from "The History of Oddfellowship in Canada under the old Regime," a work prepared and published by order of the Grand Lodge of Ontario:—

OTONABEE, NO. 13, PETERBORO'.

Otonabee Lodge was instituted in Peterboro' on the 11th of March, 1846, by P. G's Dixon and Hardy, of Montreal. Its charter members were Geo. B. Hall, M.P., and F. Ferguson, of Queen's Lodge, Montreal; and Charles Perry, Wm. Cluxton and Henry Easton, of Victoria Lodge, Belleville. The first officers elected were Geo. B. Hall, N. G.; C. Perry, V. G.; Wm. Cluxton, Sec'y.; H. Easton, Treas. The establishment of the Lodge was under most favourable auspices. A large number of the most prominent citizens were ready to unite themselves with the Order, and the Sheriff of the County gave them full control of the Court House for the purpose of opening the Lodge. Its earliest years were bright and prosperous, but its very prosperity was the cause of its decay and death. It went into extravagant outlays in fitting up a new hall, which was dedicated with great eclat, on the 10th of February, 1848, and took upon itself burdens so heavy that it soon fell into financial difficulties and died during the year 1850.

Port Hope and Millbrook Race.

The Port Hope and Millbrook races at Bewdley on Thursday and Friday, January 22nd and 23rd, proved a partial failure, it is said on account of the bad condition of the ice on the lake. The first day was more successful than the second. A large number of persons were present, including Johnnie Gilpin and the sporting boys of Peterborough, who had a jolly time. The first named race, in three mile heats, was won by Howden's "Farmer's Friend;" J. G. Hunt's "Grey Daisy" coming in second, and Geo. Jones' "Black Squirrel" third. The running race came next, and of the horses entering Dalmadge's "Highlander" was first; O'Neil's horse "Kelley" second, and Staples' mare "Grey Sis" third. The two-fifty trot did not come off owing to the darkness. R. Pringle, of Cobourg, R. Clark, of Brighton, Joseph Hawe, of Port Hope, John Glendenning, of Newcastle, and H. C. Stapleton, of Peterborough, acted as judges. The second day's races on Friday were a failure, owing to the bad condition of the ice. A named race, one mile heat, was won by Howden's "Highlander." A green purse trot, with five entries, was carried off by Aiken's horse "Tom King." The open race, with four entries of first class trotting horses, was not started, the owners refusing to trot on account of the bad condition of the ice. The attendance on the second day was much larger than on the preceding day.

THE SKATING MASQUERADE.

A List of the Characters and those Representing them—A Full Description of the Sports, &c.

The first Masquerade Skating Carnival of this season, came off at the Peterborough Skating Rink on Friday evening. The ice was in fair condition, and the display of Chinese lanterns had a very pleasing effect. The Fire Brigade Band turned out 18 pieces and played at intervals, in their usual excellent manner, from a well selected programme. The masqueraders were not present in such numbers as was expected, or as on any previous occasions. There were a number of spectators in the promenade gallery.

THE SPORTS.

A hurdle race was the first event on the programme. There were three entries, and Morty Huston came out winner, having successfully leaped the six hurdles. There were only two entries for the barrel race, which was won by Johnnie Harvey. The barrels looked too formidable for the boys to undertake the feat. The pin race was the most exciting one. There were seven entries, and the race was won by Harry Connors, who succeeded in gathering eight pins. For the three-leged race there were three entries, the prize was won by Morty Huston and Frank Mercer; Harry Alford and James Menzies coming in second. The wheelbarrow race was not run, owing to the lack of wheelbarrows.

THE MASQUERADERS.

The masqueraders did not comply with the rule laid down by the Committee, of handing in their cards at the door, giving their names and the character they proposed to represent, so that it was very difficult to obtain a correct list. The following is the most complete list we could obtain:—

The prize for the best dressed lady was awarded to Miss Emma McGregor, of Midland City, representing Red, White and Blue.

The following named acted as judges:—Rev. Vincent Clementi, Messrs. H. H. Smith, Geo. C. Rogers and Dr. Boucher.

It was announced that the second carnival of the season would come off shortly.

At the conclusion of the sports, there being no contestants for the prize for skating, Mr. E. J. Hartley, upon invitation, gave an exhibition of his skill by performing many very difficult feats. He was loudly applauded. He was compelled to omit some new and more difficult feats on account of the poor condition of the ice.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a years since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

EARTHQUAKE IN HAVANA.

Mighty Shocks—The People Panic-Stricken—Aroused Violently from Slumber.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Our Havana correspondent telegraphs:—Last night, for the first time in the recollection of living residents, Havana was roused by an earthquake that made her massive buildings shudder like shanties in a storm. It lacked ten minutes of eleven, when the theatres were closing and the cafes full, when park and prado were brilliant with lights, equipages, beauty and music. The half moon shone from the zenith of the steel blue cloudless sky. Suddenly a sound was heard as of the rising of a mighty wind through the pines, and then an unmistakeable subterranean moan, while the earth reeled with an unsteady sickening oscillation. Struck with momentary alarm, the swarms of people in the parks paused and reeled likewise. The horses hitched to a hundred flying carriages stopped and braced themselves in dumb affright. Restaurant tables rocked and spilled their liquids, and men started up from their chairs at the Louvre with dread. Druggists' bottles were shaken from their shelves, dainty pyramids of bar glass tumbled to destruction. Senoras and Senoritas gazed aghast at the overturn of their toilet stands.

SEEKING SAFETY IN THE STREETS.

Besides the crowds at the refreshment places, whole families rushed from their houses into the streets, and the stairways of some of the hotels were crowded with guests, hurrying blindly down to the sidewalks. A place on the ground or pavement seemed preferable to most citizens who huddled in groups beyond the moonlit shadows of the buildings they had deserted and chattered of bivouacking for the night. Down in the bay, vessels rocked at their anchorages and groaned against the wharves and rusty cannon threatened to fall from their pivots on the ancient fortifications of Cabana and the Moro. Hours passed ere the apprehension caused by these shocks passed away, and the city was once more steeped in gentle slumber.

THE SECOND SHOCK.

About four in the morning, the Herald correspondent was awakened by a premonitory commotion in the atmosphere, so direful that before the head could leave the pillow, ladies were rushing through the upper corridors of the hotel. A myriad of gigantic shuttles seemed to be weaving ruin in the outer air. Men's voices, tremulous and unnatural, rose from the street beneath. Then came the words of men within cheering their wives, and those women whom, even in those first five or ten seconds, they had encountered in the halls. Then came the second earthquake. Having first sprung up, I fell back upon the pillow to enjoy or endure the motion. It continued but a few moments. One shuttle like horizontal push and pull from side to side, one lift and poise in the air, then a settling down to solid immobility, and all was over. That is to say, all was over except the wild increase of terror among the people of Havana.

Guessing from distant noises that the city was thoroughly awake, I dressed and descended into the thoroughfare. Nearly every room in the hotel showed a light. Ladies having fled to the parlors in their night dresses, were sitting with their feet drawn up under them on the chairs, looking like wraiths. The lower hall was thronged with men, some anxiously enquiring the date of sailing of the next steamer northward. The squares had now plenty of permanent tenants for the night.

IN THE SLUMS.

The narrow streets leading down through the old city to the bay, through dangerous alleyways, at this dismal hour, invited a curious traveller to inspect the behaviour of the ignorant, depraved, and superstitious who populate the dens and hell-holes of Havana. Here its crippled, maimed, diseased, and poor lined the foot wide walks. Here the most villainous rabble vied with fanatics in the constant toil of crossing themselves, telling beads and rolling their eyes heavenward. Mutterings of vulgar awe and fear intermingled with ejaculations to Saints. Here and there a young priest passed with a vessel sprinkling Holy water on eager heads that bent to the very dust in abasement. A wild burst of melody leading chants and occasional shouts of appeal and praise came from the quarter where the negroes brought forth their wretched idols, images and charms.

THE CITY AT PRAYER.

The cathedral and other churches were approached at early dawn by thousands who wished to participate in the first mass. Thither flocked women and men, bearing in place of the various images and devices and copper and German silver, which are wont to hang on the altar as propitiatory offerings to the saints, hundreds of improvised globes of wood and marble, signifying prayers that the earth might be kept whole from further quakes and eruptions. The venerable Church of the Santo Domingo, which stands in the lower part of the city, received an unusual influx of worshippers. Near by the palace of the Captain-General, placed only yesterday at the disposal of the distinguished party of Americans, of whom Gen. Sheridan is one, showed flickering lights in the upper windows. Beyond the palace a street leads down to a neighboring wharf, where, as the clock struck six, hundreds of boatmen dropped on their knees at the dismal with their faces turned towards the Bay. "Save, O God, the world," was the burden of the prayer of a priest who had come down to bless them. "Let not thy children be swallowed in fire, or be crushed beneath the ruins of their habitations." To which prayer all Havana, rising up after the night's double threat of disaster, could almost be heard to say "amen."

TIMES ARE GAUN TO MEN'.

The joyfu' news at last I hear
That trade is coming roun',
Sic news the puir folk's hearts will cheer
In kintrae and in toon.
The clouds will rise, an' fortune fair
Yince mair her smiles may len',
Then every chiel can hae his share,
For times are gaun to men'.
Chorus.—Times are gaun to men', my freens,
Times are gaun to men',
The cheerfu' soon' gangs whirling roun'
That times are gaun to men'.

The dreary scenes thro' which we pass'd
We hope are noo awa',
And whirl'd aff wi' poortith's blast,
Nae mair on us to ca'.
The bairnies they will dance and sing
When free frae misery's den,
And sune we'll hear the anvil's ring,
For times are gaun to men'.
Times are gaun to men', &c.

When blithe prosperity's bright rays
Shines roond our hearts ance mair,
May we make hay on sunny days
And keep it safe in store.
Experience may teach the fast
Nae mair to reckless spen',
But aye try something to lay past
When times they really men'.
Times are gaun to men', &c.

Daily Evening Review

MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 1880.

CANADIAN TELEGRAMS.

OSHAWA.

Special to the Review, Jan. 26.

RELIEF FOR IRELAND.—Ward committees have been formed for the purpose of soliciting subscriptions for the aid of the distressed people of Ireland. The cause is meeting with deserved success.

TORONTO.

Special to the Review, Jan. 26.

HANLAN WILLING.—Hanlan has received a letter from the Hop Bitters man, stating his willingness to include Riley in the race for the $6,000 purse. Like Barkes, Hanlan "is willing," and if need be, will row on the Potomac, but he thinks that a more northerly water could be found to answer just as well so late as May 20th.

MONTREAL.

Special to the Review, Jan. 26.

IMMIGRANTS.—Thirty-five immigrants from Liverpool arrived here this morning en route for the west.

WELCOMING PARNELL.—A committee of Irish citizens waited upon the Mayor this morning and requested him to read an address of welcome to Mr. Parnell on his arrival here. His Worship consented, it being understood that Mr. Parnell's mission is simply to raise funds to relieve the existing distress in Ireland. Eight hundred dollars have been raised already by the committees appointed by St. Patrick's Church congregation yesterday. The money will be forwarded direct to the Roman Catholic Bishops in the distressed districts.

ANNIVERSARY OF BURNS.—The anniversary of Burns' birthday will be observed here this evening by a public banquet at the St. Lawrence Hall.

TORONTO.

LIBEL CASE.—The case of Patrick Boyle vs. the Globe was called on Friday, and postponed till Monday on account of the absence of James Cotton, an important witness. This is an action for libel, on the grounds that the Globe accused Boyle of withdrawing his tender for the contract for printing on receiving a consideration.

HALIFAX.

GOLD MINING.—A bar of gold weighing two hundred and thirty-five ounces, and valued at about $4,600, was brought to town on Saturday morning from Skerry & Kennedy's ledge at Montague. It is the result of three weeks' work of fourteen men. The Rose Lead Company at Montague are erecting a building that will accommodate gold miners, and if all goes well this year, the work will add considerably to the gold crop of the world.

SUNK BY THE "SARDINIAN."—The steamer Sardinian, Dutton, master, from Baltimore, just arrived, reports that on the 23rd January, at 4 a. m., eight miles south of George's Shoal, she collided with the barque Sarah E. Fraser, Capt. Joseph Sheppard, of and from Portland, Me., with box shooks, bound to Matanzas. The captain's wife and one seaman were drowned. The captain was discovered half a mile from the scene of the accident, rescued and taken on board the steamer. At the time of the accident the captain and wife were in their berth asleep. The barque was struck on the port quarter and sunk immediately. She had no sails set except the jib and no light astern, and being very dark the accident was unavoidable. No blame is attached to the officers of the Sardinian.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

PROPOSED SCHEME—THE BRITISH TROOPS TO WITHDRAW TO JELLALABAD.

The Afghans to Choose Their Ruler—Ayoob Khan on the Way to Join Mahomed Jan—a Feeler.

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines.

TERMS OF PEACE.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A Cabul correspondent reports that Ayoob Khan has left Herat for Ghuznee. Another despatch gives the following scheme, which the correspondent thinks will probably receive consideration at London and Calcutta. The British troops will immediately withdraw to Jellalabad, a proclamation being issued stating that vengeance for the massacre of the British Embassy at Cabul being satisfied, the army withdraws to Jellalabad, leaving the Afghans to live under such sovereign as they may select. Until such sovereign be firmly established, the Queen forces the right under the treaty of Gundamuk to place an envoy at Cabul, all the communications with the Cabul Government being in the meantime conducted by the Queen's special agent. Pending a peaceful settlement of the country, Jellalabad and Candahar will be occupied by British troops. The Queen will insist that communications of the Afghan ruler with foreign Governments shall be held subject to her approval.

By Telegraph to the Review.

A FEELER.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A despatch from Cabul, referring to the scheme for the withdrawal of the British troops to Jellalabad, was probably inspired by the Indian Government as a feller, with a view to observe its effect.

"German Syrup."

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthma, Croup, severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them. The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist, and ask what they know about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. dw51-1y

MIDNIGHT TELEGRAMS

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines

CABLE.

AN IMPERIAL DISAGREEMENT.

VIENNA, Jan. 24.—It is reported in court circles at St. Petersburg that the visit of the Russian Imperial Minister of the Household to Cannes is caused by the assiduous efforts of the Czarewitch to restore harmony between the Czar and the Czarina, which has been disturbed by family affairs. The Minister is ordered to invite the Czarina to be present at the 25th anniversary of the Czar's accession to the throne.

SUICIDE OF AN OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—M. Fournier, a high functionary of the War Ministry for 25 years, upon being summoned to produce his accounts, blew out his brains.

TURKISH BONDHOLDERS.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—At a meeting of the Turkish bondholders held in Paris, a petition was adopted requesting the French Government to demand an International Commission to protect their interests if the Porte continues to refuse justice.

TURCOMANS MENACING.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A Teheran despatch states that a very large force of Tekke Turcomans has arrived at Dasheberdi, menacing the communications between Chatte and Tchikislar, and a battle is imminent.

FAMINE IN ADRIANOPLE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 24.—Terrible distress prevails in Adrianople. Fifteen persons have been found dead from hunger in one day. In some cases pieces of wood were found in the mouths of the corpses.

THE O'DONOHUE'S ATTITUDE.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The summoning of Davitt and Brennan to plead has excited little comment, but the O'Donohue has enlivened matters by a violent attack on the Government, in which he formally recognizes Mr. Parnell as the leader of Ireland, ranges himself among the extreme Nationalists, and offers himself as a candidate for Tralee, and his son for Kerry. The Times comments sharply on the O'Donohue's accession.

THE RIGHT OF PUBLIC MEETING.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day, while the bill relating to public meetings was under discussion, M. Louis Blanc insisted that the right of meeting and of forming associations should be absolutely unrestricted, as in England and the United States.

SHORT CROPS IN RUSSIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 24.—The St. Petersburg Golos reports that the crops in 1879 were unsatisfactory, and this fact is causing apprehensions of distress in several provinces. The newspapers now discuss the probability of the necessity of arranging for the importation of American grain into Russia in the spring.

ON THE KULDJA FRONTIER.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 24.—The Golos states that 44 lians of Chinese troops have arrived at the Kuldja frontier. Twenty Englishmen are reported to be with the command.

THE TELEGRAPH SERVICE.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Referring to a recent complaint at the closing of the telegraph offices from eight o'clock in the evening to the same hour next morning, a Tory paper publishes a letter explaining the superiority of the American system. The English postal telegraph management is growing unpopular.

PRESSURE ON THE PORTE.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A St. Petersburg correspondent reports that intelligence has been received from a well-informed source in Vienna that Austro-Hungary, England, and France have agreed to make joint representations to the Porte for a speedy execution of the provisions of the Berlin Treaty, respecting Montenegro, Greece, and the question of reforms. Germany and Italy, it is said, promised co-operation. There is reason to believe Russia will act with the rest of Europe.

GERMANY'S INCREASED ARMY.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—The German military bill has produced some uneasiness there. A correspondent at Berlin asserts that the bill has caused much surprise in all political circles, and from the opinions of the press it can be gathered that the Government will be best supported by the National Liberals. A Vienna correspondent reports a strong conviction in Austria that a military measure intended to take effect four months hence, can hardly be connected with any immediate apprehensions of political complications.

AMERICAN.

UNCLE AND NEPHEW.

DETROIT, Jan. 24.—Two men named Raschen, uncle and nephew, who have been on a drinking bout together for some days, quarrelled last night. Both drew revolvers and exchanged five or six shots. The elder Raschen killed his nephew and was arrested.

THE UTES AT WASHINGTON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The Post's Washington special says the part of the Ute conference which Secretary Schurz desired withheld from publication related to the second attempt, which will be made by Adams and Ouray, to capture the murderers. Adams and Ouray will return to Los Pinos at once for that purpose. Colorado people in Washington deride the plan as impracticable. They say the guilty Indians know their capture is equivalent to ignominious death, and that a second attempt to catch them will fail as completely as the first.

GRAIN SPECULATIONS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—A party intimate with James R. Keene states that the latter sold out all the grain held by him, amounting to 6,000,000 bushels, before the recent decline, and when the market fell, bought 2,000,000 bushels, which he now holds. It is claimed Keene operates independently of all other capitalists, and had nothing to do with the Chicago blockade. It is reported Keene's profit on stocks, provisions, wheat, corn, oats, and cotton were upwards of $6,500,000 last year. It is believed Keene has doubled his fortune since he came to New York two years ago.

FAREWELL TO THE PRINCESS.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A farewell reception offered to the Princess Louise by Lady Lindsay, at the Grosvenor Gallery, on Tuesday evening, was attended by the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, and all the fashionable world now in London. She lately visited the students of two American ladies living in London, whose art work interested her.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—The Government intends to levy a tax on advertisements in newspapers.

A POWERFUL WAR VESSEL.

ROME, Jan. 26.—The Italian double turreted iron-clad Duilio, the most powerful war vessel in the world, on Saturday gave fourteen miles per hour, working at six-sevenths of her full capacity. It is expected that she will attain fifteen miles per hour. Her performances greatly exceeds the recent estimates. Her armament consists of four 100 ton Armstrong guns, 33 feet long, firing a projectile of 2,500 pounds weight, with charges of 350 pounds of powder. She has also a powerful ram and a torpedo boat.

IRISH LAND.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—John Bright, at Birmingham on Saturday, suggested that Parliament should appoint a Commission to go to Dublin with power to sell the farms of the landlords to tenants who were willing to buy, and to advance three-fourths of the purchase money; the principal and interest to be repaid in thirty-five years. Such a measure, Bright believed, would meet the desires of the Irish people. The Commission should assist the tenant to purchase whenever the landlord was willing to sell. He recommended a compulsory sale only where the land is owned by London Companies, as is the case with large tracts near Londonderry. He expressed his conviction that if his plan was ever adopted self-interest or public opinion would soon compel the individual landlord to sell to the tenants.

A FACTORY ON FIRE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The factory of the Western Electric Light Company at Newark was damaged by fire this morning. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

A RUNAWAY TRAIN.

FRANKLIN, Mass., Jan. 24.—As a gravel train was backing into a pit yesterday, the connecting rod parted. Eleven cars started down a steep grade, and plunging down an embankment 75 feet deep, were completely demolished. One brakeman was injured.

FATAL QUARREL.

ELIZABETH, N.J., Jan. 24.—In a quarrel over the pay for some liquor last night, Casper Rhodes, a saloon keeper, fatally shot James Milland. Rhodes was arrested.

CIVIL WAR CLAIMS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—A treaty with France was laid before the Senate last week. It provides for a commission to decide all claims of the citizens of either country arising out of the civil war. The claims are chiefly those of French citizens residing in the South for property destroyed or taken by our troops, and they amount to several million dollars.

GRANT'S INTENTIONS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—A Washington special report to the Herald says that it is reported on trustworthy authority that the personal friends of the ex-President in Philadelphia state that before the meeting of the Pennsylvania Convention, ten days hence, an authoritative declaration will be made on behalf of the ex-President, conclusively taking him from the field as a contestant for the Presidential nomination. It is given out that he proposes to engage in an important business enterprise, which he prefers to any attempt to re-enter political life.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—A Washington report to the Sun says it is said that at the Pennsylvania Convention next week some of Grant's intimate friends will by authority decline to permit his name to be used.

MRS. SPRAGUE'S DINNER PARTY.

WASHINGTON, Jan 26.—Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague gave a dinner party last week to a few gentlemen and ladies, among whom were several members of the Supreme Court. Conkling and Mrs. Conkling were present. It is said that immediately after the affair at Canonchet last summer, Mrs. Conkling wrote a letter to Mrs. Sprague inviting her to accept hospitalities of the Conkling House at Utica.

A SENSATION.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 26.—A sensation has been caused here by a letter of the Rev. Johann Hodge, a Roman Catholic priest, to Archbishop Gibbons, resigning his pastorate, and stating that he renounced the Roman Catholic faith and embraced the Protestant religion.

CONFESSION OF MURDER.

NORFOLK, Va., Jan. 26.—It now appears probable that Nottingham, who recently confessed at Milwaukee to having murdered a man in this city in 1875, cannot be brought here for trial. The district attorney states that the Governor will not sign a requisition without further evidence than the man's confession.

WHOLESALE SEWAGE POISONING.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The defective sewers in the upper part of the city are causing much annoyance and sickness. Several deaths followed the entrance of sewer gas into houses. The cross streets between Fifth and Sixth Avenues in the neighborhood of Fifty-fifth street, are reported to be in a dangerous condition from defective drainage. The sewer pipes were hastily laid under the Tweed regime by shoddy contractors. The pipes under the fashionable uptown streets are cheap, half-rotten clay tubes, 18 inches in diameter. Many of them have been broken by the weight of earth above them. The sewage has soaked into the soil and the gases were forced back into the houses. The many fatal cases of diptheria and typhoid fever in the past few months are ascribed to these causes.

THE PACIFIC RAILROADS FUSION.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The World says the fusion of the Pacific railroads creates a sensation in Washington, and it is stated that the bona fide holders of Union Pacific stock will contest the fusion as being unjust to their property, and that the so-called unanimous consent of the Directors lacks the confirmation of James R. Keene, who neither approved of these proceedings nor resigned his position as a Director. Keene is a large holder in the Union Pacific stock, and has only an inconsiderable quantity of Kansas Pacific, which was selling a year ago at from 12½ to 21, and which those contriving the manipulations raised above par.

THE DUAL GOVERNMENT.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—The Herald's Augusta report says that the Supreme Court will assemble in Bangor to decide upon the advisability of considering the Fusionists statement. The Fusion Senate met with seven members this morning. The Republican programme is, after hearing what the Supreme Court has to say regarding the Fusionist statement, to have the Governor issue a proclamation commanding the depression of Fusionist Government. It is expected that Wednesday will see the last of the dual government.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA.

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—Among the private bills introduced to-day was one "to consolidate and amend the acts relating to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company," by Mr. Scott. Since the charter for this road was first obtained so many acts amending the same have been passed that a consolidation of them has certainly become desirable.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

The House was for some time in committee on this bill to-day. During the discussion of its details, while the unanimous opinion was that something should be done to prevent the holding of unnecessary inquests, a great variety of opinions were expressed as to how it should be done. The Attorney-General proposes to limit them, by requiring the coroner to make an affidavit that the inquest was necessary, and that the county attorney shall certify that the evidence showed it to be necessary before the account is paid. Some honorable gentlemen, however, thought this latter clause would be so "humiliating" to coroners that it would be difficult to get them to act. For our part, if properly carried out, it would have the effect of making the coroner have "some evidence" that something was wrong before proceeding to hold an inquest, instead of as now, holding them frequently without the slightest cause. The clause relating to the certificate of the county attorney was, however, expunged.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. MOWAT announced that the Treasurer expected to make his financial statement on Tuesday next.

ANOTHER CANAL.

A correspondent of the Port Hope Times writes as follows:—

"I believe in encouraging to this town all the factories, foundries, blast furnaces, etc., that is possible, as well as our City Fathers; but, I think there is better means of attaining this end than by offering inducements, (alias bonuses) viz., what was brought to my consideration by an article in your excellent Daily Times of Saturday last, in regard to the Port Hope and Rice Lake Canal.

Why will Port Hopers stand in their own light? Why will they not exert themselves to bring a great and really incalculable good to their beautiful and brisk town, by a hand in hand movement to secure this canal. And there is no time to be lost—Parliament soon meets. Can they not be awakened to the desirability of this. I will try and explain some of the benefits to be derived from it. Port Hope with this canal would be the primary recipient of nearly every ounce of grain from Chicago and all the great West for points East and even to points West for a considerable distance.

The number of barges employed on such an extensive trade would simply be astonishing to our (for year) stagnated eyes. And what a piece of great good luck; astounding it would be to our ship carpenters and boat builders, astounding as well to the people of Port Hope dry docks—boat building and rebuilding, a constant hurricane of work. The trade and business thus called into operation would build up a second El Dorado in an astonishingly short space of time. Some may laugh at this as a "phantasmagoria," or one of those "air built castles," but any thinking man will see with one instant's thought that it is no such phantom with a canal, as proposed, at our doors.

Now, I would have a word with Peterborough. I ask them to look at this project in its true light, and they will see the vast distance of canal that can be saved—the greater speed of the Port Hope route owing to the few locks, and a saving in distance of 45 miles—tolls also to be considered; also the fine harbor we have, the easy exit into the broad lake, the facilities our harbor affords for a tremendous trade, its close proximity to all the large cities of western Canada as well as of eastern Canada, and the chief cities east of Buffalo on the other side of the lake. Compare with Trenton on the Bay of Quinte—poor harbor and poor exit."

HALIBURTON.

DROWNED.—A correspondent of the Post says: A team of horses owned by Mr. Jos. Dummott were drowned on Saturday while driving across a bay of lake Kushog. Mr. Dummott was removing his household goods across the lake when the ice gave way; the horses and the principal part of the load disappeared beneath the water. Mrs. Dummott, who occupied a seat on the sleigh, had a narrow escape, but succeeded in scrambling to the solid ice.

DYSART AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—At the annual meeting held Saturday week the auditors' report was adopted. The following officers were elected:—Mr. John Stothart, President; T. Gould, Vice-President; Mr. Priest, Secretary-Treasurer; Messrs. F. Dover, A. Quarry, W. Duggan, T. Neate, A. Paterson, H. Bain, W. Clinkscale, S. McKivers and T. Pascoe, Directors; Messrs. A. McDonald and R. Groom, Auditors.

MILLBROOK.

SHOOTING MATCH.—The Omemee Herald says: A friendly pigeon shooting match between teams from Millbrook and Omemee took place in the former village on Wednesday last. The teams were as follows:—Millbrook, Messrs. J. N. Kirchoffer and Fallis, and Capt. Howden; Omemee, Capt. Cottingham and Messrs. Jas. Bryans and S. Grandy. Seven birds were allowed each man; and the result of the contest was a victory for Omemee by five birds. The following is the score:—Millbrook—Kirchoffer, 4; Fallis, 1; Howden, 2—7. Omemee—Cottingham, 6; Bryans, 2; Grandy, 4—12. At the conclusion of the pigeon match the same teams engaged in a rabbit hunt in the vicinity of Millbrook, resulting in a tie. The visitors were well entertained during their stay. A return match will take place in Omemee before long.

LINDSAY.

A LINDSAYITE IN COLORADO.—The Post says: From our Rocky Mountain exchanges we find that the Republicans of Colorado are talking up Mr. John Dormer, brother of the late George Dormer, for Lieutenant-Governor of that State. From the Golden (Col.) Transcript we clip the following:—"The Georgetown Miner, an independent journal of far-seeing perspicuity, calls upon the Republicans to tender the Lieutenant-Governorship to Col. J. Dormer, editor of the Register-Call. The colonel is a stalwart of the strictest sect, a gentleman of rare ability, and one with the capacity to fill any office in the gift of his party, and none will deny that such a reward is due to him. The Miner has the honor of starting this Dormer "boom," and from our Democratic standpoint we are shouting with all the power of a pretty good pair of lungs, 'Let 'er boom.'"

IRISH MISSION AND RELIEF MOVEMENT.—Rev. Mr. Roe, of Dublin, delivered a lecture in Bell's hall on the Church of England missions in Ireland. Col. Deacon presided, and Mr. J. H. Knight acted as secretary. The meeting afterwards resolved itself into a relief committee for the poor of Ireland. The following resolutions were passed:—"That an appeal be made to the pastors of the several churches to make collections on Sunday, 18th or 25th inst., in aid of the Duchess of Marlborough relief fund for the suffering Irish." "That Messrs. Deacon, Dobson, Dundas, McDonnell, sr., McLennan, George Matthews, A. O'Leary and A. P. Devlin, together with the Mayor-elect, be constituted a relief committee to secure contributions in aid of the Duchess of Marlborough relief fund."

A COMMENDABLE ACT.—Through the exertions of Col. Deacon and Mr. R. Leary about $50 have been subscribed by the people in town towards assisting Mr. Robert Douglass to rebuild his dwelling destroyed by fire last week. Mr. Douglass was a heavy loser by the fire and we are pleased to see an effort made to lighten his loss. The building was commenced immediately after the fire and will be ready for occupation in a very short time.

PETERBOROUGH BONSPIEL.—At the Peterborough bonspiel the Lindsay Club will be represented by the following gentlemen:—

W. Milne, J. Cameron,
D. C. Trew, Wm. Needler,
G. H. Bertram, Wm. McBurney,
S. A. McMurtry, skip. J. D. Flavelle, skip.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.—At the last meeting of the Town Council, a petition to the Governor-General-in-Council urging the construction of the Trent Valley Canal was read in the usual form and passed.

A STARTLING DRAMA.

The quiet and usually tame and dull suburb of Vlanga (says the Levant Herald) was recently the scene of a shocking domestic drama, resulting in the murder of three members of an Armenian family, the momentary escape of the murderer, and his subsequent suicide two days later in a railway carriage. Vlanga is an outlying quarter of Stamboul, closely adjoining the Sea of Marmora, and not far from the railway stations at Yedi-koule and Koum-capou, and is in great part inhabited by Armenians and Greeks chiefly the former. Some two or three years ago a Georgian Armenian, named Kevork Takvorian, about 35 years of age, who had been settled for several years in Constantinople as a general trader and commission agent in the smaller walks of commerce, married an Armenian girl belonging to a respectable family of somewhat the same class as himself, and resident at Vlanga. During and after the war Kevork, who was a Russian subject, was engaged in business dealings in matters connected with the supply of the Russian troops, and travelled a good deal between the capital and Adrianople, to which latter place he took his wife and established his abode there. He had also been with his wife for a short time in Russia. There was one child of the marriage, a little boy, but, for some reason not already known except perhaps to the members of the family themselves, the married life of the Armenian couple did not prove a happy one. Some say that the wife found life in the provinces distasteful to her; others that the husband was distrustful and unkind to the verge of ill-treatment; anyhow, she left him and went to Vlanga with the infant, and took up her residence with her family in the part of Vlanga called Balispasha. The husband, on coming from the provinces afterwards, claimed his wife and child, but she was unwilling to return to him, and her family sustained her in this course. One evening, shortly after sunset, Kevork presented himself again at the house in Vlanga, but was not admitted. On this refusal he went to his wife's uncle, who lived near at hand, and the latter returned with him to the house. He was admitted, spoke with his wife and her family, and all seems to have gone fairly well until he insisted on taking his boy away with him. The wife refused to part with the child, and her family, including the uncle, who appeared to be the most favorably disposed towards the husband, also opposed the removal of the infant. High words and a prolonged scene of quarrel ensued, when suddenly Kevork stooped down, and, drawing a revolver from his boot, fired several shots at those present. A young girl of 14 or 15, the wife's sister, was killed on the spot, and Kevork's wife and her father were severely wounded, so severely that they have since died from the effects of their wounds. The uncle, too, who had somewhat favoured Kevork Takvorian, received a pistol shot in the thigh. A heart-rending spectacle presented itself when the terrified neighbours crowded in, close upon midnight, to the blood-stained dwelling. Medical aid was at once summoned; the innocent young girl was beyond assistance, and professional skill, as already stated, was powerless to save the lives of the two others. The uncle's wound proved not so dangerous. The sequel is scarcely less dramatic than the sad scene narrated above. In the confusion of the moment Kevork made his escape, but the police were put on the alert, and the Minister of Police in person displayed the most anxious interest that their efforts should not be in vain. They found traces of the murderer here and there, and it came at length to their knowledge that he would make for Ismidt. A few days afterwards, on the arrival of the afternoon train from Scutari to Ismidt at about two o'clock at Kartal, the police were on the watch at that suburban station. The officer in command of the zaptiehs at Kartal, Hadji Hussein Agha, had the train surrounded with police, and on entering one of the carriages a detective officer who knew Kevork recognized him and pointed him out. The wretched man then offered resistance, drew his revolver—the same, doubtless, with which he had murdered his sister-in-law and his wife and her father—and fired at Hadji Hussein Agha, wounding the police-officer in the arm. Perceiving, probably, that escape was hopeless, he then quickly turned the weapon upon himself, and in another moment lay weltering in his blood on the floor of the railway carriage, a dead man. Mehemet Salih Effendi, the caimakam of Kartal, immediately telegraphed the particulars to Hafiz Pasha, the Minister of Police. The body of the murderer and suicide and all his effects were taken to Constantinople, and the courageous officer of zaptiehs was also taken to the capital to have his wound duly attended to.

Hatred of England.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A correspondent at Constantinople says the people and press of that city are virulent against England on account of the German missionary incident. A despatch says, in further correspondence between the Porte and Sir Austin Layard respecting the Koeller incident, the Porte reiterates that Koeller was merely released out of courtesy to England.

SCOTLAND.

A COMPANY is being formed in Hawick for the purpose of taking up the subject of aerial navigation.

A REPORT presented to the Edinburgh Established Presbytery recommends the abolition of Fast-days.

AN Edinburgh gentleman has by his will given £2400 to the Town Council and Magistrates of Aberdeen for the erection of a statue of Sir William Wallace in the Granite City.

COMPLAINT has been made to the Established Presbytery concerning the Sunday evening discourses which have lately been delivered by lay lecturers in St. David's Church, Edinburgh.

SINCE the decision of the Town Council to decline Mr. Carnegie's offer to provide a free library for Dunfermline has become known much dissatisfaction is expressed by many of the inhabitants.

THE London creditors have been paid nearly £400,000 by the City of Glasgow Bank liquidators, and it is estimated that between £200,000 and £300,000 has to be dealt with in order to satisfy the remaining creditors.

THE Finance Committee of the Free Church have agreed to accept the offer made of payment in full, without interest, of the sum due to the Free Church by the City of Glasgow Bank. The Free Church are large creditors.

THE timber trade of Greenock and Port-Glasgow has been for the past two or three years in a state of lethargy, but towards the close of the past year it showed a decided tendency to recover. Some classes of timber have risen within the past three months from 50 to 100 per cent., and the average rise may be given at 30 per cent.

IN Dumbarton on the 28th December the streets from one end to the other were strewn with chimney-cans, slates, and other debris, the memorials of the storm. Trees were drawn up by the roots, fences were blown down, and other mischief had been wrought. A number of people on the streets were blown over and more or less injured.

PROFESSOR GEDDES, Aberdeen, has received a letter from one of the "Gordon Highlanders," the 92nd, at Cabul, in which he says:—I observe in the columns of the English press that a movement is on the tapis to erect a monument to the late Mr. Jenkyns in his native city of Bon-Accord. I trust you will afford those in Cabul an opportunity of adding their mite in memory of their distinguished townsman, who was foully murdered at his post.

THE gale on the 28th December was very severe in Inveraray. The roofs of houses were stripped off, corn and hay stacks blown about, trees uprooted, fences damaged, and roads blocked. A large ash tree at the entrance of the avenue, behind the town, fell with a crash upon the arches of the gateway, and snapping in the middle, several tons weight of the timber was precipitated into the front street, close to the door of Dr. Macdonald's house. Several of the old beeches in the avenue have also fallen before the gale.

IRELAND.

ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH, Ballymena, which was erected at a cost of £8,000, was, on Dec. 13, totally destroyed by fire.

DEATHS FROM STARVATION are reported in several places in Ireland. There is a dearth of food and fuel also, and the relief which has been eagerly sought for is now being received.

THIRTY-ONE of the persons who attacked the ejectment servers in the recent affair at Tabbercury have been examined and committed for trial.

THE Empress of Austria, says a London correspondent, will arrive with you about Valentine' Day, and will remain in Ireland for the season, as Her Majesty would have done last season, but that the catastrophe at Szegedin interrupted the programme.

ANOTHER SHOCKING MURDER.—An old man named McGrorey, 70 years of age, was murdered by his son with an adze on Sunday, the 4th inst. Soon after the murderer went for the priest and informed the neighbors. He said "it was afore him and he had to do it." He talked in a very irrelevant manner, always using language of a sacred nature in an unconnected manner, such as "The Blessed Virgin," "The Holy Mother of God," &c., &c.

Mr. ARCHIBALD FORBES (the special correspondent of the Daily News) was hooted while attempting to deliver a lecture in Cork on the Zulu war. The audience, which was a pretty large one, cried "Forbes, the slanderer of Tipperary," and cheered the Zulus and Cetewayo. Mr. Forbes remained perfectly cool, sat down and took a drink of water. As he was drinking an egg was thrown at him. The disturbers made clamorous demands for their money, but were cleared out by the police. Cheers were given for Mitchell, and songs such as "Let Erin Remember" were sung.

AT a meeting of landlords and other ratepayers held in Macroom on December 13th, Sir Augustus Warren announced that he would grant leases for fifty years, or renew old leases at present running out for the same term, so as to place his tenants in a position to borrow money from the Board of Works, and improve their farms, and that for the first few years, while the outlay was not productive, he would make a reduction of the rents of those who availed of the offer equivalent to the amount of interest payable on the loan. These he considered to be fair terms on an entailed property with only a life interest. He also said he would borrow £1,000 to be expended in improving his own place. A resolution was passed, unanimously calling on the landlords of the union to avail of the facilities offered by the Government, and institute works of a reproductive nature.

A HORRIBLE tragedy occurred near Cushendall, County Antrim, recently. Widow McCormick and her daughter, Jane, who is a cripple, lived together in a small cabin. They received money from Australia some time ago, which, it is supposed, the murderers tried to obtain by brutally murdering the mother, and afterwards cut and hacked at the daughter, until they supposed she was dead. To cover their guilt they locked the door on the inside and left by a small window. Two days after the murder was committed, a neighbor woman had occasion to go to the house, and with considerable difficulty gained an entrance. She found Mrs. McCormick dreadfully mutilated, and her daughter also, but the latter, although supposed to be killed, was able to tell the name of the murderer, a man named McLoughlin, who has been arrested. The unfortunate girl's deposition was taken, and she died soon after.

THE OLD FAIR STORY—A SONG.

A mother kissed her baby,
Rocking it to rest,
And gently clasped within her arms,
It [illegible] to her breast.
The old fair story,
Set round in glory,
Wherever life is found;
For oh! it's love, it's love, they say,
That makes the world go round.

A fair faced boy and maiden
Passed through the yellow wheat;
And their hands were clasped together,
And the flowers grew at their feet,
The old fair story,
Set round in glory,
Wherever life is found;
For oh! it's love, it's love, they say,
That makes the world go round.

BATHING IN VIENNA.

The Trials of a Modest Man not Accustomed to the Ways of Austria.

Mr. Prentice Mulford thus writes the San Francisco Chronicle from Vienna:—After awhile I discovered that the Viennese who did wash themselves washed themselves all over at the great public baths, and not in the little pint pitchers of water they kept in their bed rooms. So I went to a public bath. I did not know what to ask for, but I knew German enough for water. I went in and said, "Wasser." They took my meaning immediately, or they might have seen that I needed washing. I declare the ridiculous amount of water they furnish leads to dreadful results.

There were two passages leading into the great five-storied bath barrack—one for males, the other for females. Of course I took the wrong one, and I was shoved back by a woman with a towel. I didn't see that it made much difference, for the attendants on both sides were females. Marie showed me to my bath-room. Marie was a big, brown, black-eyed, Austrian maid, in round short skirts. She went ahead of me with an armful of towels. She opened my bath-room door. I went in. She came in after me. I was quite unprepared for this. But she wasn't. She seemed used to it, and went to work. She spread a sheet on the bottom of the bath tub. I don't know what it was for, but they always do it. At all events it takes off the rough edge of the zinc for ones skin. I waited also. Out of regard for the proprieties I removed only my hat. I would not even take of my collar before Marie. The water seemed a long time running in. It generated a cloud of steam, which gradually filled the small bathing room, and through which vaporish atmosphere Marie and I saw each other dimly. Finally she gave me all the hot water I was entitled to and left. Relieved, I sprang to the door. There was no lock upon it. I hunted in vain for some kind of a fastening. I sat down uneasy. Then I removed my coat and collar. Then Marie burst in again with another towel. Then she went out. How was I to bathe in peace with that confounded girl intruding on me!

Then I tried to turn on some cold water and couldn't. By this time I had removed many of my garments and barricaded the door with my jacknife. Instead of having sensible faucets, by which a man could regulate his own flow of water, these require the use of a wrench to turn them. The wrench I suppose was kept by the attendant outside. I did not know any German for wrench, and if I had, dared not call for one with the prospect of the young lady's bringing it. So I sat down on the chair, which I had backed up against the door as an additional security against Marie and waited for the water to cool. It takes hot water a long time to cool in Austria. Finally I got into the tub. I think it could not have been much below boiling temperature. I got out again pretty quickly, blushing all over and sympathizing more heartily than ever with boiled lobster. It was an uncomfortable bath. I suffered externally from the water, and internally from fear of that possible Marie. But she never came again. She left a large pile of linen for me. I examined it. There was one towel about as large as a napkin, and two large aprons, which reached from my head to my heels. The aprons puzzled me. I utilized them for towels. A friend afterward told me their use. They are to put on, the one before and the other behind, on getting out of the hot bath, and you sit in them and ring the bell for the attendant to enter, turn off the hot water and let on the cold. Marie all this time was waiting for my bell to ring to come in and turn on cold water. She never heard that bell. I put on but one of these aprons, the forward one. It fitted me perfectly. It would fit anybody. It was a splendid dress for hot weather; so easy to put on and off; so loose, cool and comfortable; so easy to slip out of, and, if need be, fan yourself with the skirt.

EXTRAORDINARY STORY.

An aged couple in Medway, Mass., had a merry thanksgiving. At the outbreak of the war their only son ran away to sea, and served under Farragut at New Orleans and with Cushing in the Albemarle exploit. Here all trace of the sailor was lost, and it was supposed that he was drowned in the river when the torpedo exploded. His sister died a few years ago, and his parents have been living in retirement and poverty. Late on Wednesday night a man with a scar on his face knocked at the door and requested lodging. He was admitted by the old lady, who asked her aged husband to entertain the stranger while she was making a cup of tea for him. The stranger kept his hat on, and the old lady noticed that his eyes followed her every movement. To the old man he represented that he had formerly lived in the neighborhood. When asked his name he gave an evasive answer, but asked if James Merrick lived there yet. "I am James Merrick," answered the old man. The old lady had been watching the stranger closely. Before he could utter another word she stepped quickly to his side, lifted the hat from his head, gazed a moment into his face, and sank into the arms outstretched to receive her, loudly screaming, "Jim! Our Jim!" "Yes, your Jim; come home for thanksgiving," exclaimed the stranger, as he kissed the aged face with joy and turned to his father, whose frame was trembling with gratitude. After a while he related the eventful history of his wanderings. He had been severely wounded by the explosion of the torpedo, as the scar on his face testified. He was pulled from the river by one of the boats which came to the relief of the crew of the Albemarle. He lost his senses by the concussion and wound, but after the latter healed he was permitted to go at large as harmless, knowing nothing of himself, not even his name. Finally he fell into the employ of a former surgeon of the rebel army, and with him went to a plantation outside of Raleigh, N.C. One day, however, the surgeon examined his wound and determined to try an experiment. He opened the wound in the head, and found the skull fractured and pressing in the brain. With the aid of another surgeon the skull was lifted or trepanned, and the wound again closed gradually. Merrick's condition improved, but it was fully a year before his memory returned. —Philadelphia Ledger.

A WEATHER TALKER WHO GOT LEFT.

There is one Detroiter who will never refer to the state of the weather again as long as he lives. The condition of the weather has been a hobby of his for years, and he has fairly reveled in the rains and fogs which have been ours since the New Year. On meeting an acquaintance he has invariably said:—

"Ever see such a winter before? Curious country, this. Who'd have looked for spring in January? Have you any idea it will change? This mud is killing business, but we can't help it. Ever know of such a succession of fogs?"

Yesterday morning he was coming up town by the Fort street line. His umbrella fell from his hand as he entered the car. A stranger picked it up, moved along, and the citizen sat down [illegible]

"Thankee. Terrible weather, isn't it? Ever see such weather before? We'll all be sick unless there's a change. Can you account for this mild weather at this season?"

"I'd like to speak a few words to you in private," replied the stranger, in a guarded voice. "Please get off the car with me."

They got off together, the citizen greatly puzzled, and when they reached the walk the stranger continued:—

"You remarked that this was terrible weather. I quite agree with you. You seem to be a well educated and very observing man, and I am glad to have met you. I hadn't taken any notice at all of the weather until you spoke, but I quite agree with you—quite."

The citizen cleared his throat, but did not reply, and presently the man went on:—

"You asked me if I had ever seen such weather before. I am satisfied that I have at some time in my life, but I cannot just now recall the date. Let's see, let's see. Was it in 1857? No. Let's see. Well, I cannot recall it now, but on reaching home I will look up my old diaries. If I can do anything to oblige you I shall be only too glad."

They walked a block in silence, the citizen amazed and astounded, and then the stranger suddenly said:—

"You said we would all be sick unless there was a change. That remark shows your interest in your fellow men. I quite agree with you—quite. Yes, we shall be ill, and many of us may never recover. I hope you are prepared to die."

The citizen now began to get mad, and, after hoofing it for another long block, he growled:—

"What did you want to say to me in private?"

"You asked me," replied the other, as he gestured with his clenched hand, "if I could account for this mild weather at this season of the year? Yes sir, I can; but I didn't want to give it away to all in the car. My theory regarding this warm spell can be explained in just two hours, and I'll go to your office and do it."

"No you won't," was the blunt answer.

"But I will! When I set out to oblige a man I'm willing to spare four hours if necessary."

The citizen crossed the street hoping to shake the man off, but he also crossed and went on:—

"Having been appealed to by you to explain the cause of this mild—"

"See here!" said the other as he halted, "I don't want any more of you!"

"But you asked me to explain."

"I didn't!"

"You are a liar—you did!"

"What!"

"Don't bristle up to me with any of your whats!" warned the stranger, "or I'll knock your nose off! I never allow anybody to trifle with me! We will either go to your office and devote two hours to an explanation of my theory, or I'll lick you for asking me useless questions and taking up my valuable time!"

The citizen turned pale, looked all around and then made a rush into the nearest house. The stranger waited around a while and then started off with the remark:—

"Never you mind, sir? I'll hunt this whole city over but I'll find your office! No man can get me all worked up on a mild spell of weather and then snub me like a heathen!"—Detroit Free Press.

VACCINATION vs. SMALL-POX.

The following very pretty instances of the power which vaccination possesses of modifying the severity of small-pox have been recorded by Dr. Ashby, medical officer of health for part of Nottinghamshire. An unvaccinated girl died from very severe confluent small-pox during an outbreak of the disease at Newark. Her brother, aged 14, had been vaccinated, and was with his sister a great deal during her illness. However, he was persuaded to be vaccinated, and this was done in four places on July 17th. All the places "took" excellently; it was a typical case of primary vaccination. On July 25th he began to be ill with small-pox, the eruption appearing on July 28th. But, instead of his having the severe confluent form, as his sister had, his was a typical case of discrete small-pox, all the pustules being isolated, and not confluent in any part of his body. Now, the period of incubation of small-pox being twelve days, the boy must have taken the infection about July 13, or about four days before he was vaccinated. Although the vaccination was too late to prevent the disease altogether, yet vaccinia ran its course in his system concurrently with small-pox, and had the effect of very greatly moderating its severity. If he had not been vaccinated when he was, the chances were that he would have died, judging from the rate of mortality in unvaccinated cases which ruled in the outbreak in question; so that, in all probability, his life was saved by his having been vaccinated just in time—at any rate, there is no doubt that the severity of the disease was very much mitigated thereby. In another case a man and his wife were engaged to take charge of a cottage that had been hired for the isolation of a case of small-pox in a rural village, and to nurse the patient. They had to close their own house, so they took their son (a lad about 12 years of age) with them to the cottage hospital. The man and the boy bore evidence of having been vaccinated, but no trace of any marks could be found on the woman. However, they were all three vaccinated on the morning of August 14th, before the case of small-pox was sent in. As the woman had never been done before, she was vaccinated very thoroughly in four places, using a separate point for each place, and four typical vesicles formed. The vaccination of the man and boy also took. About August 24 or 25 the woman began to be ill (i.e., about eleven days after she was vaccinated), and had a very slight attack of small-pox. She had only a few scattered pustules, and soon recovered. Thus it was evident that she took the infection of the disease at nearly the same time as she was vaccinated. Vaccinia and small-pox ran their course together in her system, the disease being extremely modified by the vaccination.—British Medical Journal.

Benzoate of Soda for Diptheria.

Professor Klebs, of Prague, announces that the benzoate of soda is the best antiseptic in all infectious diseases. It acts, as the experiments of the author show very powerfully. It is claimed that a daily dose of from 30 to 50 grammes to a full grown man will render the poison of diptheria inoperative. The benzoate is prepared by dissolving crystallized benzoic acid in water, neutralizing at a slight heat with a solution of caustic soda, drying, and then allowing the solution to crystallize sulphuric acid under a bell-glass. Large doses do not appear to be absolutely necessary. Good results may be obtained by the daily administration of about twelve grammes.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

MONDAY, Jan. 26.—The wheat market this morning was dull, only a few parcels coming in, and continued lower prices being offered. The news from Liverpool and Chicago is unfavorable for a rise, and it is thought that prices may continue to drop. $1.16 was paid to-day. Peas are steady at 65c. Hay went slowly at lowest quotations. There was more offered than was required, making sales difficult. Wood was abundant and prices ruled low. The low price for [illegible] offerings.

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. w4d13-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

MONDAY, JANUARY 26, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

County Council.

The County Council will meet on Tuesday, January 27th.

Town Council.

There will be a meeting of the Town Council this evening, when, among other business, the appointment of Assessors has to be made.

Municipal Act.

The different bills to amend the Municipal Act have, on motion of Mr. Mowat, been referred to a special committee, upon which appears the name of our member, Mr. W. H. Scott.

A Charming Sunday.

Yesterday was a delightful day. The clear sky and the genial sun called forth a vast throng of church goers, and the several churches were unusually full. It was the first really delightful Sunday we have had this winter.

The Streets Thronged.

A vast number of people were upon the streets on Saturday afternoon and evening. The stores seemed to be well patronized, and no doubt a fairly good business was done. It was observed that a large number of the younger portion of the country people remained in town quite late, thus helping to make things lively.

Broken Sidewalk in Ashburnham.

A very ugly looking hole has been made in the sidewalk opposite Rogers' saw mill in Ashburnham, by a broken plank, which may on some cloudy or dark night catch someone's foot and a broken limb may follow. There are also noticeable two or three good sized holes nearer the bridge on the edge of the walk on the same side of the river, where either a horse or a man might get a broken leg.

Runners and Wheels.

Wheeled vehicles are coming into demand again. The past few days of moderate weather, together with the bright sun of yesterday and to-day, has so far melted the snow and ice that the sleighing is rapidly disappearing, and by another twenty-four hours, unless there is a fresh fall of snow, wheels must come into general use again. Several sleighs, which came from a great distance to-day, will, it is feared, have some difficulty in returning home.

Business at the Station.

The business of the Midland Railway keeps good, and much freight is being moved, both in and out. There are a large number of cars at the Peterborough station for this season of the year, loading for the front. There were seven cars attached to the 3 o'clock train this afternoon, three of them loaded with wheat, three with wood, and one with sundries, all bound for the front.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh to brisk southerly to westerly winds; partly cloudy to cloudy warmer weather, with rain in some localities. Peterborough has enjoyed moderately fresh south westerly winds, with clear to partly cloudy weather. The thermometer at 9 o'clock indicated 26°, rising rapidly towards noon; at 2 o'clock the thermometer indicated 46° in the sun through a hazy atmosphere.

Signor Bosco.

On Saturday evening Signor Bosco gave the first of his three nights' entertainments in Bradburn's Hall before a crowded house of well pleased spectators. His sleight of hand is marvellous, and his feats were novel and interesting. The substantial, and in many cases valuable, gifts distributed by him at the close of the entertainment aid him to draw full houses, and are also very acceptable to the recipients. For this evening, the Signor stated that he will give away a great many useful and costly presents, including a gold watch, a silver ice pitcher and a set of furniture. Nothing small about the Signor!

Lecture.

The Rev. T. W. Jeffry arrived by the noon train with a satchel full of lecture—or something else. Don't fail to hear his lecture in the Charlotte Street Church to-night. "Subject:—How to rise in the World." Chair to be taken at eight o'clock. d21-1t

Anniversary of Charlotte Street Church.

The anniversary services at the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, held yesterday, were attended by large congregations both morning and evening. The Rev. Mr. Starr preached in the morning, and the Rev. Dr. Harper in the evening. The Rev. T. W. Jeffry was expected to be present and take part in the exercises, but that gentleman failed to reach Peterborough till this morning.

The Gatling Gold Mine.

The Globe's mining correspondent says, with reference to the above mine, in which several Peterborough gentlemen are interested, that "the Gatling location has been bonded to a company represented by Richard P. Rothwell, for $200,000, payable as follows:—$75,000 on April 1st and $125,000 on August 1st, 1880. This offer remains open for three months from the 1st of this month, and in the meantime the property is being worked under a joint management made up of the two parties to the contract, the buyers having the option of assuming or declining the property at the price named within the time limit mentioned."

POLICE COURT.

ASSAULT.

MONDAY, Jan. 26.—Edward Tutten laid a complaint against Cornelius Halpin, charging him with having committed an assault upon him with a neckyoke on the 22nd instant. The defendant pleaded guilty to the charge of assault under provocation. The Magistrate found the defendant guilty and imposed a fine of $10 and 40cts. Clerk's fees.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

Election of a President—The Treasurer's Report—Neglected Lots—A Requisition.

A meeting of the newly elected Directors of the Company was held in the Town Council Chamber this (Monday) morning, Jas. Wallis, Esq., in the chair.

It was moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Lundy,—That Mr. Clementi be re-elected President of the Company.

Mr. Clementi said that after due consideration he had made up his mind to positively decline re-election, and concluded by moving,—That Mayor Lundy be elected President, which motion was seconded by Mr. Carnegie.

Mr. Lundy, Mr. Stevenson and others urged Mr. Clementi to reconsider his determination, but without avail, and at his earnest request the original motion was withdrawn, and Mr. Lundy was unanimously elected.

Mr. Lundy having taken the chair, Mr. Stevenson moved, seconded by Mr. Edwards,—That this Board cannot allow the Rev. Mr. Clementi to retire from the position of President of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, which he has held for the last five years, without recording their regret that he has deemed it advisable to retire from a position which he has filled with so much advantage to the Company, credit to himself, and satisfaction to the individual members of the Board.

Mr. Edwards, in seconding the motion, said that he knew perhaps better than any one of them the time and attention which Mr. Clementi had devoted to the affairs of the Company during the past five years, and he had no hesitation in saying that it would be impossible to find a better President.

The motion was passed unanimously.

In returning thanks for the compliment paid him, Mr. Clementi contrasted the present condition of the Company with that which it occupied when he first took office. At that time the Treasurer at the annual meeting reported a balance in hand of $70, with a debt of $700 due to the Bank. Now, after the erection of the beautiful Mortuary Chapel, the purchase of an outside lot, with cribwork and fencing, and considerable improvement in the roads and paths, and in the general appearance of the grounds, the Company is not only out of debt, but the Treasurer reported last week a balance to its credit of $840.

Mr. James Edwards was re-elected Secretary-Treasurer.

The auditors, Messrs. E. Pearse and J. J. Hall, submitted their report, which was adopted.

It was resolved, in compliance with a suggestion made by Mr. Kingan at the annual meeting, that in future an abstract of the Treasurer's report, audited if practicable, be printed for circulation among the stockholders, one week before the annual meeting in each year.

It was also resolved that in future no charge be made for deeds of lots purchased in the Cemetery.

A suggestion made by Mr. Stratton, at the annual meeting, with regard to the keeping in order of neglected lots, was discussed and approved of, and will doubtless be adopted when the Company has sufficient funds in hand for the purpose. At present, seeing that in all probability a large sum of money will have to be expended this year in fencing, no definite action could be taken.

A requisition with respect to the appointment of a caretaker, signed by over a hundred persons, many, if not most of whom, however, are not stockholders, was referred to a sub-committee to report upon at the next meeting of the Board.

The Board then adjourned.

BANK RETURNS

A correspondent of the Canadian Spectator says:—"Apart altogether from those Consolidated Bank prosecutions there is one feature in the monthly bank statements which has not been discussed with sufficient force nor clearly enough brought out. I mean the gross inconsistencies to be found in the statements themselves. The law says that those "monthly returns shall exhibit the conditions of the bank on the last juridicial day of the month preceding." It provides columns for "assets" and columns for "liabilities," one of which on the credit side reads "Balances due from other banks in Canada," the corresponding one on the debtor side reading "Due to other banks in Canada." To an ordinary mortal no language could be simpler or more explicit than this, and yet here is the aggregate result from a late Canada Gazette:—

Balances due from other banks in Canada	$4,653,138
Due to other banks in Canada (only)	2,708,172
Unaccountable difference	$1,944,966

That is to say, that the creditor banks make oath that there is some two million dollars more due to them than the debtor banks admit to be owing by them. I would commend some of these bank officials who claim such enormous and seemingly false balances to be due to them, to the attention of the Crown Prosecutor. 'Tis no more than even-handed justice that they too should have their turn."

☞TIME EXTENDED TO FIRST FEBRUARY.

Not a few of our old subscribers have sent us the names of one or two new subscribers along with their own for 1880, and thus have made one dollar go as far as one and a half did last year. Finding that those who have tried it, fully realize that "a penny saved is two earned," and that others are still anxious to reap the same advantage, we have determined to receive new subscriptions from old subscribers up to the first of February upon the following terms, viz:—

THE WEEKLY REVIEW.

Any person now, and for the last twelve months a subscriber to the Weekly Review, who sends us his renewal subscription with that of another person not now or for the last twelve months a subscriber to it, will have the TWO sent to any separate address for $2.50! Or if accompanied with the names of two other such, such persons may have the THREE sent to separate addresses for $3.00!

THE DAILY REVIEW.

Any person now a subscriber to the Daily Evening Review who sends us his renewal subscription with that of another person not now on our subscription list, may have the TWO delivered or sent to any separate address for six months for $3.50, or for twelve months for $6.00!

Any one is at liberty to get up a club. Each club paper may be addressed separately. Parties making up clubs may send in the names (accompanied by the money) as they receive them, and credit will be given for the whole number sent in when the club is completed.

OUR CLUB LIST.

We are also enabled to announce that the very liberal advantages offered in our Club List will be kept open until the first of February. Parties who may yet be desirous of subscribing for the Review along with any one or more of the leading papers or magazines contained in our Club List, can therefore avail themselves of the opportunity offered all through the month of January. We would again direct attention to our "Entirely New Feature"—"How to Obtain the Leading Papers and Save Money." See advertisement in another column of this paper. ENGLAND.

At Northampton Assizes, a very heavy sentence has been imposed on a solicitor for breach of trust. The solicitor had embezzled £500, and the judge said that breach of trust committed by a man in the confidential position of an attorney was a grave crime, and forthwith sentenced the prisoner to five years' penal servitude.

Freethinkers in general, and Mr. Bradlaugh in particular, have to thank a Scotch Radical—the late Mr. Wm. Thomson, of Montrose—for a nice little windfall. Under that gentleman's will, £3,000 was bequeathed to Mr. Bradlaugh, to be applied at his discretion to the propagation of anti-theological and advanced political views. The money has just been paid over. The National Secular Society, of which Mr. Bradlaugh is President, receives £1,500, and the fund for securing Mr. Bradlaugh's election for Northampton awarded £100.

The Times comments on the great impetus recently received by commerce, and notably by the iron trade, in which connection complaints are being made that orders are not being supplied as rapidly as the demand arises. Meantime the cotton weavers of John Bright's factory are striking for an advance of 10 per cent. At Burnley, too, there is a grave crisis, and the masters threaten a lockout.

The Sunday Stone.

In an Oxford Museum may be seen a strange stone. It is composed of carbonate of lime and was taken from a pipe which carries off drain water in a colliery. The stone consists of alternate layers of black and white, so that it has a striped appearance. This was caused in the following way:—When the mines were at work the water which ran through the pipe contained a good deal of coal dust, and so left a black deposit in the pipe. But when no work was going on—as, for instance, in the night—the water was clean, and so a white layer was formed. In time these deposits quite filled the pipe, and so it was taken up. Then it was found that the black and white layers formed quite a calendar. Small streaks, alternately black and white, showed a week, and then came a white streak of twice the usual size. This was Sunday, during which there was, of course, no work for twenty-four hours. For this reason it was called the Sunday Stone.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

VICEROY AND LORD MAYOR.

DUBLIN, Jan. 27.—Much feeling has been aroused by the Duke of Marlborough's refusal to attend the Lord Mayor's banquet. During forty years there has been no occasion when the Viceroy failed to attend. Even when O'Connell was Lord Mayor and was antagonistic to the Government the Viceroy attended.

EGYPTIAN MASONRY.

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 27.—Dr. Fanton, a highly instructed Mason, confirms the discovery of Masonic emblems under the obelisk, and declares that the Hiram version of Masonry, as having originated with the construction of Solomon's Temple is disproved, and that it is now shown that Masonry originated with the construction of the Pyramids, or at least with a far remoter period than the construction of the foundation of the obelisk. The number of blocks composing the foundation, as well as their position and arrangements, indicate that the ancients were familiar with the degrees of Masonry at least as high as the 18th. This discovery furnishes a clue to other important discoveries, rendering probable a solution of the mystery of the construction of the Pyramids.

A STORMY SESSION.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The approaching session of Parliament is regarded with much anxiety. It will certainly be stormy. It is understood that Signor Cairoli will introduce a bill for the total abolition of the tax on the reassembling of Parliament in its February session.

GERMANY'S INCREASED ARMY.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Advices from the different European capitals leave no doubt that the increase of the German army is attracting universal attention, and creating apprehensions, notwithstanding the pacific assurances of the German Government, and the plausible pretext upon which the increase is based. The Austrian, French, and Prussian armies are being actively inspected, reorganized, and re-equipped.

The Sultan, having been informed that his favorite wife was unfaithful, charged her with crime, and in a private room of the Harem beat her to death. Before dying she sent a message to Hassein Aoui, the Grand Vizier and Minister of War, her paramour, asking him to revenge her death. The latter conspired with others of the Cabinet, marched to the palace with the troops, deposed the Sultan and proclaimed Murad, the Sultan's nephew, his successor.

Preaching Other People's Sermons.

The Rev. Samuel Massey, pastor of Salem Church, Panet Street, Montreal, has made a departure in the matter of preaching sermons, which is attracting attention not only here but all over the Dominion, and, judging from the comments of the press as far as they have come under the writer's observation, Mr. Massey's course has been applauded. Mr. Massey took the initiative last Sunday morning preaching the Rev. Fredrick Robertson's sermon on "Prayer." It was "Robertson in the morning and Massey at night," he remarked to a Witness reporter. "If the people are willing why not preach the sermons of these great preachers?" he continued. "Why keep them on my shelf, I only obtaining the benefit from them?"

"Next Sunday," he added, "we shall have the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon on "Prayer and Revivals" in the morning and the Rev. Fredrick Robertson at night."

The reverend gentleman stated that a Church of England clergyman in England was preaching the sermons of eminent clergymen as he (the speaker) intended doing. It was impossible, he said, for a minister to prepare two good sermons a week and do his pastoral duties properly as well. This was an honest method of obviating the difficulty, and one which he found was well received by his congregation.—Witness.

The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist, and ask what they know about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. dw61-1y

PATRONAGE! PATRONAGE!

IF not checked with a firm and steady hand it is to be feared that patronage will prove here, as it has already done in the neighboring states, the curse of our system of party Government. The demands of "party" are unfortunately so great and so pressing upon the leaders of all parties that it becomes more and more difficult for them to resist the importunity of needy followers, but that makes it none the less an evil to be deplored or ignored. Since the advent to office some eight years ago of the party now in power in this province no opportunity has been lost to centralize in themselves every possible bit of patronage and its distribution with a single eye to party advantage, and to political effect. To particularize is, however, unnecessary, as we now only direct attention to the subject, in the hope that by so doing we may be the means of averting the entire destruction of our County Councils, and the converting of all county officials into the political agents of any party. Taking singly the patronage now vested in the hands of our County Councils, it may seem insignificant, but when taken in the aggregate it would form no mean pasture field for those who had done yeoman service in our political camps. It is true that the Government, as a Government, have as yet announced no definite policy with reference to the abolishment of County Councils or the transfer of the appointments of Division Court Clerks and Bailiffs to themselves, but those who have followed the debates in the local House will have observed that there is a strong current running in the direction we have indicated, on the Government side of the House, with the apparent object of placing numerous "offices" at the disposal of the powers that be. Now we need scarcely say that while we are in favour of greater economy in the management of our county affairs, and are firmly convinced that in very many counties in the Province a substantial reduction in the number of Reeves is not only possible but desirable, we are equally convinced that "some joint authority" elected by those who have to foot the bills is absolutely necessary for the management of purely county matters, and that instead of still further centralizing power and patronage in the hands of the Local Government, whatever changes are made should be in the direction of de-centralization in this respect.

What we believe is bringing County Councils into disfavour, where they are coming into disfavour, is the great number of deputy-reeves which the present law necessitates in the more densely populated districts of the country, thereby causing unnecessary expense both for numbers and on account of the lengthened time which it takes the larger number to perform certain duties which a smaller number could perform better and more expeditiously. But if this be the cause of complaint, a remedy may easily be found by reducing the number of deputy-reeves, either on a sliding scale, or by increasing the number of ratepayers necessary to have a deputy. The only difficulty which we see about the adoption of such a proposition as this is in counties like our own, where we have some very small townships, with others too large to be placed on a level with the smallest, and yet too small to be entitled to a deputy were the number of ratepayers required materially increased—as, for instance, placing Galway and Otonabee on the same footing in the County Council. But this difficulty is by no means insurmountable, and might be obviated by even so simple a provision in the Municipal Act as one framed on the same principal as that already to be found in it, authorizing Councils to reduce the number of days' statute labor to be performed for a given assessment. No hardship could be inflicted by authorizing County Councils, either directly or indirectly, by submitting a by-law to the people, to reduce the number of their representatives in certain ratios, and it would enable each county to meet its own requirements without interfering with those of other counties differently situated. In conclusion, we do not think it would be amiss for our County Council to consider this very matter during their present session. Of one thing we feel certain, namely, that our County Council neither deserves to be, nor would their constituents desire to see them legislated out of existence altogether, and their duties transferred to either the Ontario Government or any non-elective political board, and the Clerk, Treasurer, Jail Surgeon, County Engineer, Auditors, Inspector of Schools and members of High School boards appointed by either party on political grounds, and in the interests of the party which happens to be in the ascendant for the time being.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

THE APPOINTMENT OF ASSESSORS AFTER MUCH DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

The Auditors Decline to Accept the Salary Offered—New Election for the Fourth Ward—Stone for the Streets.

The Council met on Monday evening, January 26th, pursuant to adjournment. Present:—The Mayor, and Councillors Smith, McNaughton, Paterson, Dunsford, Yelland, Cahill, Douglas, Menzies, Toole, Denne and Taylor.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Messrs. Edg. Pearse and A. H. MacDougall, the auditors elect, as follows:—

GENTLEMEN,—We learn from your Clerk that you have appointed us auditors of the town accounts, and that we are expected to perform the following duties, viz: Audit the books and accounts of the Treasurer of the Town of Peterborough, of the Town Trust, the Treasurer of the School Board, and the Police Court books, reporting on the said books and accounts in detail and abstract form as usual; also to examine and compare the Assessment and Collector's Rolls for the year 1879, and report on errors that have occurred in copying or otherwise, and verify all extensions, additions, calculations or other work of the Clerk in making out and producing such Collector's Roll, in fact remake the Collector's Roll, a work which must have occupied your Clerk's time for two months; further that you make it our duty to prepare and complete a statement of each and every debenture issued by the corporation of the Town of Peterborough since the year 1861, giving the number of each, date of issue, amount of each, date of disposal, when maturing if returned how, for what purpose issued, the authority for issuing the same, the name of party or parties, corporation or corporations, to whom the same were disposed; what each realized, and a complete list of outstanding debentures on 1st January, 1880, to be regularly and correctly entered in a book by the said auditors, to be prepared for the purpose.

We have now before us the report of the auditors for the year 1876, which, we find, has 128 pages. We select the report of the year 1876 because we have been informed that, by request of members of the Council, in order to reduce the bulk of printed matter, many payments and receipts, when made, whether to one man, or for one special purpose, or from one source, in the reports of subsequent years, were added together, and we learn that to some extent this was done in the report of 1878, especially in the school and police court accounts. The report on the accounts of 1876, therefore, conveys a better idea of the actual work to be performed by town auditors than those of a more recent date. After making an allowance for the condensation of receipts and payments referred to above, we think we are warranted in estimating the items to be examined into, and their correctness or incorrectness ascertained, may be averaged at at least 30 per page. This will give nearly 4,000 items of accounts to be audited. An average of two minutes per item (some items may occupy two hours), the examination alone will require 20 days, and after the accounts are examined, the reports in detail have to be engrossed, a work of some days; the additional work which you this year require the auditors to perform, viz.:—the verifying the Collector's Roll, necessitates, besides the comparing of the entries from the Assessment Roll to the Collector's Roll, about 10,000 separate calculations. We find it impossible, without considerable labour, to estimate the amount of time that may be required in order to enable us to comply with your instructions in relation to the audit, &c. of the debenture accounts. Under these circumstances, while thanking you for the confidence implied by you in making the appointment, we feel that we cannot, with credit to ourselves and justice to the town, undertake the duties which you this year require for the remuneration provided for in your by-law, but are willing to make the ordinary audit and reports, and also to examine the Assessment and Collector's Rolls, and make the calculations as we deem necessary to satisfy ourselves that the total amount of the Collector's Roll is the sum which should be properly raised under the several rates of this year's levy.

We have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servants,
EDG. PEARSE,
A. H. MACDOUGALL.

From John Sawers, resigning his position as Town Councillor, as he found he could not take the declaration of qualification.

From John Corkery, Secretary-Treasurer of the Separate School Board, asking the town to collect their school rate.

The petitions for appointments to office, except those for assessor, were referred to the Committee on Appointments.

ACCOUNTS.

Referred to the Finance Committee.

THE AUDIT.

Councillor DUNSFORD suggested that the Finance Committee, or some special Committee should undertake the work of investigating the Debenture account.

Councillor TOOLE moved that the communication should be referred to the Finance Committee, who might consult with the auditors, and see what arrangements could be made.

Councillor DUNSFORD said he would second this, and the motion was carried.

NEW COUNCILLOR.

Councillor DENNE asked if Mr. Sawers had sent a cheque for a new election with his resignation.

Councillor TOOLE said such a suggestion was unprecedented, and ought not to be made.

Mr. SAWERS said he was quite ready to pay the expenses, if Mr. Mills would do likewise.

Councillor DENNE said he only made the suggestion because he heard that Mr. Sawers had said he would send the cheque.

TOWN AND COUNTY.

The MAYOR read the following report as to a dispute between the Town and County as to cedars:—

In the matter of the claim for bill of cedar in dispute between the County and Town, referred to me as Mayor, for settlement, I beg to report that, from the enquiries I have made, I find that the whole matter rests on the question of veracity between the County and Town officials. This being the case, the Warden and myself do not feel in a position to deal with it in a satisfactory manner. We both wish the dispute settled without any recourse to law, and propose that Mr. John Carnegie shall act as referee, hear the evidence and give such a judgment as he may consider just, his finding to be acceptable to both parties.

JOHN J. LUNDY.

The report was received and adopted.

FOURTH WARD VACANCY.

Councillor SMITH moved, seconded by Mr. MCNAUGHTON,—That the resignation of Mr. Sawers be accepted, and that the Clerk take the necessary steps to elect a Councillor for the Fourth Ward.—Carried.

ASSESSORS.

Councillor TOOLE brought in the report of the Committee on Appointments, as follows;—

We have had under consideration the appointment of assessors for the present year, and recommend that Messrs. Robert Roe, William Helm, Cornelius McGrath and Joseph Lundy be appointed assessors for the year 1880; Messrs. Roe and Helm for numbers One and Two Wards, and Messrs. McGrath and Lundy for numbers Three and Four Wards, and that the salary of each assessor be $75.

The amount had been fixed under the impression that $75 was the sum voted last year. All the applications that had been read that night had been considered. He moved the adoption of the report.

Councillor DENNE moved that the report be referred back to the committee to wait till the Fourth Ward be fully represented.

Councillor CAHILL objected to such a delay. They might as well suspend all their business.

Councillor MENZIES thought they should wait till the vacancy in their ward was filled. He had an offer from two gentlemen to assess the whole town for $200.

Councillor TOOLE thought it was well to adhere to competent and experienced assessors. He thought the Fourth Ward would not suffer, as it was represented on the committee.

Councillor DENNE urged the claims of Messrs. Hogan and Baptie.

Councillor YELLAND objected to four assessors, preferring two as more likely to assess equally.

Councillor PATERSON preferred the four assessors. He thought, however, it was worth while to save $100.

The report was received in the meantime.

FINANCE REPORT.

Councillor SMITH brought in a report of the Finance Committee recommending payment of two gas accounts, that for the Council Chamber (one quarter) $8.60, and for the Fire Hall (two quarters) $23.50, or a total of $32.10.

The report was adopted.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The MAYOR said he had received from Mr. Scott the bill to amend the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Act.

Councillor DUNSFORD said the bill would not alter their position as far as he had seen from a brief examination, but would bind them to it whatever it was.

The matter was referred to the Finance Committee with instructions to consult Mr. Dennistoun.

THE ASSESSORS.

Councillor SMITH moved the first reading of the by-law appointing assessors.

Councillor DENNE moved that it be postponed till after the Fourth Ward election. He thought they should save money if possible.

The first reading was carried.

Councillor DENNE again appealed for delay till his ward was fully represented, and urged the appointment of his nominees.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON said many of the Fourth Ward ratepayers had expressed great satisfaction with the last assessors.

Councillor CAHILL spoke of the absurdity of twelve of them having to postpone their business till a thirteenth man was elected.

The motion for the second reading was carried, and Councillor Paterson took the chair in committee of the whole.

Councillor DUNSFORD proposed to fill up the blank with two names as being more likely to produce an equitable assessment.

Councillor DENNE would second this.

Councillor TOOLE argued in favour of the report of the committee.

The vote was in favor of two assessors.

Councillor TAYLOR moved, seconded by Councillor YELLAND,—That Messrs. Helm and McGrath be assessors.

Councillor DENNE moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That Messrs. Aldridge and Gamble be assessors.

Councillor DUNSFORD moved, seconded by Councillor YELLAND,—That Messrs. R. Rowe and Joseph Lundy be assessors.

The MAYOR suggested that the Committee should rise, as he did not like to vote with the names thus coupled. He moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That the Committee rise.

Councillor SMITH thought they could get over the difficulty by taking the names singly. He moved that Mr. McGrath be one of the assessors.

Councillor DENNE moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That Mr. Aldridge be the man.

Councillor DUNSFORD moved that Joseph Lundy be one of the assessors.

He had no seconder.

The vote was in favour of Mr. McGrath.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor DUNSFORD,—That Mr. Jos. Lundy be an assessor.

Councillor DOUGLAS moved, seconded by Councillor SMITH,—That Mr Rowe be assessor.

Councillor DENNE moved, that Mr. Aldridge be assessor. Having no seconder, he moved that Mr. Hogan be assessor, but again had no seconder.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON criticised Mr. Rowe's assessments, giving details.

The vote was in favor of Mr. Lundy.

The salary was fixed at $160 each.

The by-law was passed through its remaining stages.

STONE FOR THE STREETS.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor SMITH,—That the Street and Bridge Committee be authorized to award the contract for the stones now advertised for, for street purposes, the cost not to exceed $200.

Councillor DUNSFORD objected to purchasing stone when they had good gravel in town, which made better roads.

Councillor SMITH said he was informed that broken stone made the best streets. They also had in view the opportunity of affording work to some of the ratepayers who were in need of it.

Councillor PATERSON also spoke in favour of the stone.

Councillor CAHILL said the gravel Mr. Dunsford spoke of at Lindsay, was washed gravel from Scugog Lake. Our gravel was not equal to it or to broken stone.

The motion was carried.

A TAX QUESTION.

Mr. HAZLITT addressed the Council on the subject of the building occupied by Mr. Rombough, on the Dickson raceway, and which was burned down. The taxes were collected from Mr. Rombough, which were claimed by him from the estate. He thought it was a hardship that they should pay it. It was usual to remit taxes when a building was burned.

Councillor SMITH moved that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee.

Councillor DENNE said the application of Mr. Rombough had been refused by the Finance Committee, because he had received the insurance money.

The motion was carried.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

CANADIAN VESPER BELLS.

It is vesper hour, and a stillness deep
  Doth fall with the evening dew,
And the sunset gleam, with its golden beam,
  Is tinging the mountains blue;
And the mild moon's ray, o'er the dying day,
  On the silver clouded [illegible]—
She [illegible] remain, with her starry train,
  To list to the vesper bells.

O'er the [illegible] and the blue sea-bay
  The harmony sweetly rings—
To the flowery mead and the forest fair
  A mystical peace it brings,
And the moss-grown oaks and the birches thrill,
  While the liquid measure tells
The holy [illegible]
  Of Canada's vesper bells.

They ring far away o'er the cavern cliffs,
  And on the Atlantic fall,
And fishermen bold, while they ply for gold,
  Await for the vesper call;
O'er [illegible] and lake, through valley and brake—
  Through all the Laurentian dells—
Where the Saguenay sweeps, and the Ottawa leaps,
  [illegible]

O'er Red River's pass, Saskatchewan's vale,
  They blend on the evening air,
And Assiniboine hears, with straining ears,
  The voice of their chimings rare;
And, sweeping along, with the torrents strong,
  Through the Cascades' granite cells,
They die on the breast of Pacific blue—
  Our rhythmical vesper bells.

—James Joseph [illegible]

STRANGE DUPLICITY.

A Female Impostor of the Worst Description—How She was Exposed.

The Montreal Witness of the 24th says:—On Wednesday evening we published a letter over the signature "S.M.," the initials of a well-known philanthropic gentleman of very great experience in this city, referring to a case of distress at 146 Murray street, Griffintown. Yesterday we were informed that the family referred to were impostors of the worst description, and a Witness reporter accompanied "S.M." to Murray street to investigate the matter. On the way there the gentleman referred to explain to our representative that one of the family, a daughter about eighteen years old, had called on him, and stated that her mother was a widow with eleven children, and that the whole family were absolutely destitute. He called at the house the following day, and the mother corroborated the daughter's statement in every particular. The question of fraud having been raised, our representative took down the woman's replies to the questions put to her. She stated that she had been a widow for two and a half years, her husband having died in Toronto; that she was an Irish Protestant, and that her husband had been one also. Her name she gave as Mrs. Fisher, and she told a lamentable tale of want and distress. Both the mother and the daughter adhered closely to the tale they had already told. The place presented a most wretched appearance, and the appearance of the family was quite in keeping. This morning Sergeant Knowles called at the house and saw Mrs. Fisher, who, however, recognised him and told him she was not the woman he wanted; that the woman who was receiving so many gifts from visitors was a lodger there. Sergeant Knowles then called at the Witness office and returned with the reporter, who had been there the previous day. She was nonplussed at seeing her two former visitors together, and became excited, threatening to throw the sergeant into the street, but thought better of it. She sullenly opened the door of a third room, hitherto kept locked from all visitors. This room presented a very different appearance from the others and contained articles of furniture, ornaments and provisions, the value of which would keep the family from starving for some time. The woman then admitted that she had been guilty of deception, but pleaded poverty and the illness of her daughter. Her name was now Lucy and her husband was not only alive, but in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway. He had not been working for a few days through sickness. One of her sons came in while this conversation was going on, and looked very stout and hearty, considering all the privations he was said to have endured. She either was or pretended to be in bodily fear of the male members of the family. She was recommended to refuse any further supplies that might be brought to the door. The most painful aspect of the affair is about the daughter, who still states that she is very ill, dying in fact, and who appears to be ill. A money contribution sent to "S.M." for this case has been returned to the donor.

Professor Blackie on His Land Sermon.

Writing to the Daily Review, in reply to a correspondent who had charged him with profaning the Sabbath day by preaching a sermon on the Land Laws on the evening of Sabbath, the 21st inst., in St. David's Church, Edinburgh, Professor Blackie says that he deserves thanks instead of blame for "drawing the attention of the Christian public to the striking contrast between the law of landed property as it would be shaped by the spirit of Christian love were this dominant in our legislation, and the existing land laws, as they have been moulded in great measure by the landlords from motives of empty vanity, patrician pride, or purely mercantile greed, and as they are justified unhappily in many quarters by a political economy which looks on money rather than men as the end of society, and by a worldly morality ever ready to sacrifice the greatest happiness of the many to the selfish indulgence and monetary aggrandisement of the few." When dealing, in conclusion, with the charge that applause in church had been evoked by his sermon, the Professor says:—"For my own part, and without any regard to the rigidity of local notions, I am inclined to think that the practical issues of our sermons would be more likely to be increased than diminished if, in the first place, there were fewer of them—if, in the second place, only those should preach whom God meant to be preachers; and in the third place, if the grave, inexpressive composure with which Scottish pulpit addresses are canonically received, should be interrupted once a year or so either by rounds of suppressed applause, or (what I should like much better) by a rain of penitential tears spotting the paragraphs of a well-conned Bible."

The Physical Cause of Intermittent Fever.

The July number of the [illegible], edited by Professor Klebs, contains some particulars of an investigation into the physical cause or poison to which marsh or intermittent fever is due. The inquiry was conducted by Professor Klebs, of Prague, in conjunction with Signor Tommasi, Professor of Pathological Anatomy at Rome. The two investigators spent several weeks during the spring season in Agro Romano, which is notorious for the prevalence of this particular kind of fever. They examined minutely the lower strata of the atmosphere of the district in question, as well as its soil and stagnant waters, and in the two former they discovered a microscopic fungus consisting of numerous movable shining spores of a longish oval shape. This fungus was found to be artificially generated in various kinds of soil. The fluid matter obtained was filtrated and repeatedly washed, and the residuum left after filtration was introduced under the skin of healthy dogs. The animals experimented on all had the fever with the regular typical course. After examining minutely the results of their various investigations and experiments, these gentlemen are of opinion that they have discovered the real cause of the disease in question. As the fungus grows into the shape of small rods, Tommasi and Klebs have given it the name of Bacillus malariæ.—Medical [illegible]

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

FRIED ONIONS.—Peel, wash, cut crossways so as to form undivided rings, flour well and fry in drippings for about ten minutes; drain, sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve.

CRACKER PUDDING.—Boil one quart of milk, add seven milk crackers rolled fine, three beaten eggs, a few seeded raisins or bits of citron; flavor and bake one-half hour. Serve with liquid sauce.

TO REMOVE SPOTS OF GREASE FROM PRINTED BOOKS.—The spot should be moistened with a camelhair pencil dipped in rectified spirits of turpentine; when it is dry, moisten it with a little spirits of wine, which will effectually remove any stain the turpentine may have left.

STRENGTHENING THE VOICE.—You may strengthen your voices by reading or reciting for a short time daily, in the highest speaking tone which you can comfortably maintain; in singing, exercise the highest notes of the voice, but do not dwell on those which you can only reach with difficulty. Avoid taking pastry, cakes, nuts, [illegible], or sweets when about to sing.

GRAVY FOR POTATOES.—Put a spoonful or more of butter, according to the quantity of potatoes you have, into a frying-pan and set over the fire until brown, being careful not to scorch it. Mix a spoonful of flour in a cup of thin sweet cream—or milk, if one has no cream—pour into the browned butter, boil up, season with pepper and a little salt if necessary, and turn over the boiled potatoes. This is a very nice way to serve small potatoes.

JAM PUDDINGS (roly-polys) may be made (the paste) with one pound and a half of flour and an ounce or two of suet or marrow; roll out thin and spread all over with jam of any kind. Keep away from the edge, so that it may be clear of the jam. Roll up neatly and firmly, fasten the ends, tie the pudding in a floured cloth, and let it boil for a period of two hours. Treacle may be used in place of jam, or an ounce or two of cleanly washed currants mixed with a little sugar.

COLLEGE PUDDING.—Take six ounces of the following ingredients, which mix as directed, namely:—Suet, sugar, bread crumbs, and currants; add a small quantity of chopped rind of lemon, and a sniff of nutmeg. Beat up three eggs in two tablespoonfuls of brandy, which will serve to liquify the mixture, which stir with pains. Form into little pieces about the size of eggs, and fry them in lard or butter till they are lightly browned. Drain off the fat, and serve on a napkin.

PARADISE PUDDING.—Mix the following ingredients dry:—Four ounces each of beef suet and bread crumbs, four tablespoonfuls of moist sugar, a pinch each of salt and grated nutmeg, six large apples chopped small, the grated rind of a fresh lemon; two tablespoonfuls of cherry wine, flavour with the juice of a lemon. Mix well together, and place in a buttered mould, and boil three hours. Serve it with pudding sauce. If baked, it will take an hour and a-half.

WINTER COSTUMES FOR DOGS.—The following are the fashionable winter costumes for pet dogs:—For toy terrier, aged one year, Carmen velvet coat, richly embroidered in crewels, bound with silver cord; crest and initials on the front in raised silver; hair on forehead caught up and tied with red ribbon, falling over the back; collar to match, with a dozen silver bells. Small Italian greyhound, coat of navy blue, stamped velvet, embroidered in gold with name and crest, lined with squirrel's fur, and bound with swan's down; gilt collar and bells.

More Light.

The Oshawa Vindicator says:—"Last year Mr. Mallory put up a street lamp and kept it lighted at his own expense; at the last municipal election he received the highest vote of any candidate in the field." There is something suggestive in this, and we hope that aspirants to a place at our Council board will lay it to heart. The annual cost of keeping a street lamp lit is only a merely nominal sum to any one wealthy enough to qualify as Councillor, and far cheaper than any method of canvassing heretofore practiced or dreamt of. This year there were 13 candidates for the Council, and probably there will be as many at the next election. If each of them were to do as Mr. Mallory did, with our present street service, we should have the best illuminated town in Ontario. There were six candidates in Ward Three. Six more lamps—what a brilliant boom.

THE extent to which the Afghan Ameer was guilty of the murder of Major Cavagnari has never been accurately stated. The Pall Mall Gazette of Dec. 26th, quotes from a private letter as follows:—"Some time back, as we were about to hang one of Yakoob's generals, [illegible] he had something to confess. He was brought before General Roberts and said that the Ameer, Yakoob Khan, signed the death warrant of the British Envoy and ordered the murdered men to be dragged through the streets of Cabul. General Roberts asked him whether he would say this to the Ameer's face. He answered 'Yes,' and when brought face to face did so; and since then the Ameer has been confined to his tent with a strong guard on him."

PARNELL is cold as an iceberg. He evidently commits his speeches to memory, and he has no animation, no style. His voice is thin, and his manner awkward. He does not seem to be in earnest; he does not warm with his theme. He seems the politician, not the pleader. He does not sway his audience. He cools rather than fires its ardor. No one could help noticing the difference when Phillips took the stand. Parnell left the audience unmoved. Phillips took it, held it, swayed it as the Irishman could not. The mission does not seem to have been any more of a success here than in other cities. The feeling is here, as elsewhere, that there is too much of a mixture of philantrophy and politics in it.—Boston Cor. Springfield Republican.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read it in another column. d146-1y

Hagyard's Yellow Oil combines in such an eminent degree all the healing, curative and extracting qualities known to medical science, that it is truly a family medicine that cannot be dispensed with. When applied to any Swelling, Sore, Burn, Chilblain, Frostbite, Skin Eruption, etc., its effects are magical. It is highly esteemed wherever known, and its enormous sale annually is the best certificate of its merits. w4d13-2w

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving the respiration free. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. w4d13-2m

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

Daily Evening Review

TUESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Toronto & Ottawa Railway.

The committee appointed at the railway meeting last Tuesday not being yet ready to report, there will be no meeting this evening.

The Peterborough Rangers.

Saturday's Canada Gazette contains the following :—

57th Battalion of Infantry, "Peterborough Rangers"—No. 1 Company, Peterborough—To be 2nd Lieutenant, provisionally, Sergeant William P. Shaw, vice Thomas Evans Bradburn, left limits.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are : Partly cloudy to cloudy weather, with rain areas, possibly to snow and cold weather to-morrow. In Peterborough; moderate easterly to southerly winds, clear to partly cloudy weather. The thermometer indicated this morning at 8 o'clock 30°, rising to 46 at noon, and reaching 46° at 2 o'clock, with indications of rain.

The Champion Skater.

We learn that the Directors of the Peterborough Skating Rink Company have secured the services of Prof. Williams, of New York, the champion skater, who will give two exhibitions of skating in the rink on Friday, Feb. 6th, both in the afternoon and evening. It will be remembered that Prof. Williams gave some astonishing exhibitions on skates at the rink last winter, and we have no doubt the public will be glad of an opportunity of again witnessing his wonderful feats on the ice.

Literary Association.

The regular weekly meeting of the Peterborough Literary Association was held last evening in the class room of the Mechanics' Institute. In consequence of the smallness of the attendance, the meeting adjourned after readings had been given by Messrs. Beck and Haultain. The same subject, "Canadian Independence," will come up for discussion at the next meeting, when it is hoped all the members will testify their interest in the Association by being present, and as many as possible taking part in the discussion, which will be open to the meeting.

Charlotte St. Church Anniversary.

The seventh anniversary services of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church was held last evening in that Church. A large congregation was present, Mr. Geo. A. Cox presiding. The Rev. T. W. Jeffery delivered a lecture on "How to rise in the world," which was interesting as well as instructive. Mr. James Stevenson read the Finance Committee's report, which shows that the Church has been prosperous; it has paid all current expenses, given largely to mission purposes, and has reduced a debt of $6,000 to $2,500. This was a pleasing showing, and the congregation will endeavor to make greater efforts than heretofore to reduce the indebtedness, if not to wipe it out altogether, during the present year. The choir sang several hymns, and the Rev. Mr. Roberts, of the Bible Christian Church, closed with the benediction. The Rev. Messrs. Starr, Harper and others were present.

The Magical Bower.

Signor Bosco again appeared at Bradburn's Hall last evening in his clever magical tricks and spiritual manifestation exposure. The hall was well filled, but was not crowded. There were a large number of boys present who were disposed to be noisy in their mirthfulness, but the Signor has a happy faculty of quieting them and at the same time keeping his audience in good humor. He performed some card tricks differing from those shown on Saturday night, but equally clever. Among his other feats were the handkerchief knot trick, top spinning to the ceiling and upon a thread, the inexhaustible hat, plate and washbowl spinning, the boy swallowing a ring and the magical production of half dollars from the boy's mouth, mesmerising, and the exposure of the Davenport brothers' tying trick. The entertainment concluded with the giving away of some fifty prizes. The gold watch was drawn by ticket number 99, held by Mr. Joseph Picard, and the silver pitcher was drawn by ticket number 60, held by Miss Annie Riordan.

Moved by Mr. MOLONEY, seconded by M. SANDERSON,—That Mr. John Burnham, Reeve of Ashburnham, be elected Warden for the current year.

Mr. BURNHAM said he wished before the motion was put to repeat the declaration which he had already made to several members of the Council, viz: that he did not desire re-election. He had already occupied the Warden's chair, and he thought it would be better to appoint some one else on the present occasion.

The motion was, however, carried unanimously.

On taking the chair, Mr. BURNHAM said while he adhered to the opinion he had already expressed, he could not refuse to accede to the unanimous desire of the Council which he would not deny was personally gratifying to him, and that he would endeavor to continue to discharge the duties of the position to the best of his ability.

On motion of Mr. GOLBORNE, seconded by Mr. COLLINS, Mr. John J. Hall was appointed one of the auditors of County accounts.

The WARDEN appointed Mr. W. C. Saunders the other auditor.

HUNGER AND COLD.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—An arctic wave prevails throughout Ireland, and the cold is intense. Much suffering is experienced by the poorer people, especially on the north-west and south-west coasts, where the greatest amount of destitution exists. It is feared that many people will perish, as the local charities are not able to care for them. The danger from the cold is increased by lack of food, hunger rendering the peasantry more susceptible to change in the weather. The cold is also very sharp in England.

GARIBALDI MARRIED AGAIN.

All the German regiments of which the Czar is honorary commander will send deputations to St. Petersburg.

EMIGRATION TO ABYSSINIA.

ROME, Jan. 26.—An Italian Government steamer has left Aden for Assab bay, Abyssinia, with artificers and laborers. The Italian Consul invites traders to settle there.

THE BANQUET ABANDONED.

DUBLIN, Jan. 26.—To-day the Lord Mayor informed the Town Council of the Lord Lieutenant's rejection of the invitation to attend the banquet on February 3rd. He asserted that no illegal resolution was passed at the meeting of Home Rulers, which would warrant the action of the Lord Lieutenant. A resolution to abandon the banquet and give $2,500 to the poor was adopted. The Lord Mayor said he believed the Lord Lieutenant had done his utmost to impress upon the Government the fearful condition of Ireland.

ATROCITIES IN AFRICA.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Daily News accuses British native auxiliaries in Africa of committing frightful atrocities.

ANTI-SLAVERY CONVENTION.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 26.—A convention has been signed by the Turkish Minister of Foreign Affairs and Sir Austin Layard for the suppression of the slave trade in all the Sultan's dominions.

FUNDS FOR A STRIKE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—There is likely to be a lively row in the Butchers' Union over the funds collected to carry on the recent strike. Of $12,000 which were collected, the officers of the Union can only account for less than $5,000. They charge that Frank O'Meara, of the Relief Committee, has absconded with the remainder. Patrick Welch, Chairman of the Committee, says that O'Meara has been made the scapegoat of Dan O'Connell, President of the Union, Dick Powers, United States orator, and Sullivan, its Financial Secretary, who really have stolen the seven thousand dollars.

The Committee threw the bill out on the ground that they did not approve of granting charters for railways that could or would never be built.

KINGSTON.

A Daring Robbery was committed here on Saturday night. Shortly after ten o'clock W. Rigney, who keeps a grocery and liquor store on Princess street, was preparing to close his shop, and had deposited his money in the cash box, which he had placed on the counter preparatory to depositing it in his safe, which stands near the front door. At this time two men entered, and one went forward to ask for a bottle of brandy, when the second stood by the counter, near the cash box. Finding the brandy could not be had they departed. About twenty minutes later Mr. Rigney missed his box, which contained about $700 in cash and cheques amounting to about $150, and notes representing several hundred dollars. Next morning the cash box was found in the yard rear of Muckleston's hardware store. It had been broken open and all the money and cheques taken. The notes were left. On Sunday afternoon the police arrested John Deroche and Tom Gough on suspicion. None of the money, however, was found in their possession.

A FATAL NAME.

London, Jan. 27.—The foundation for a report of a great disaster to the steamer Princess Alice off the Isle of Wight is in the fact that the steamer collided with a wherry containing sailors of the British navy. Two sailors were drowned.

PARNELL AGAIN CONTRADICTED.

Dublin, Jan 27.—The Committee of the Mansion House Fund deny the statement by Mr. Parnell at Buffalo on Sunday, that defaulters in payment of rent are excluded from the relief. The Committee have already dispensed over $500,000 for the relief of urgent cases of distress only.

THE PURSUIT OF VICTORIA.

Washington, Jan. 27.—A telegram dated Santa Fe, New Mexico, Jan. 25th, states that Major Morrow, who is pursuing Victoria's band of Apaches, was forced to go into Ojo Caliente from the Sacramento Mountains for rations. The command had been in the mountains without rations two days, and were fighting daily. In the last two days of the fight, Morrow captured 100 horses and mules. The Indians abandoned large quantities of property stolen in Mexico, bolts of calico, cotton cloths, &c. Morrow is reported as having punished the Indians severely. It is thought, judging from the number, that the band is composed of all the Indians who have been living in Mexico. The mountains are spoken of as very rough, with scarcely any morass. The loss of troops by horses becoming disabled has been quite severe. General Sherman has not received official information regarding the alleged killing of Chief Victoria, but has no doubt it is a fact.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—The National Zeitung, discussing the proposed increased army, says the German nation is almost unanimous in its approval of Bismarck's resolution to resist Panslavism as soon as it shows itself becoming an aggressive power. As yet Germany preserves friendly relations with official Russia, but Europe can only be thoroughly quieted by exertions in the place whence the causes of agitation have proceeded. Assurances of peace from the Russian press ought to be received with great satisfaction, but it must not be forgotten that it is more easy to excite fears than pacify them.

AMERICAN.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Herald's Washington special report says there is no ground for the exciting reports about the war-like attitude of the administration toward the French canal project on the Isthmus. The Committee on the Inter-Oceanic canal have had an informal conversation with the Secretary of the Navy. He has never concealed his belief that the canal ought to be built and must be under American control. Thompson and the President are the only members of the administration who take a lively interest in the question. Both of them are known to hold that the canal ought to be constructed by an American company. Members of the committee think the proposed sale of the Panama Railway by an American corporation to the French Company is a grave matter demanding investigation.

BIGAMY IN THE FAMILY.

TILDEN AND THE PRESIDENCY.

New York, Jan. 28.—The Sun's Albany report says it seems to have got into the air there that the State Committee have some kind of creditable assurances that Tilden does not expect the Presidential nomination. A STEAMER BURNED.

THE REACTION AGAIN.

THE election in Cornwall on Tuesday for a representative in the House of Commons resulted in the re-election of Dr. Bergin by the greatly increased majority of 180. His majority in 1878 was only 38, showing a gain of 142. Yet we are told by Opposition journals that there is a reaction against the present Government and the National Policy. Fortunately the people, whenever called upon, endorse both by their votes.

FRITTERING AWAY THE TIME.

WHILE we have had no hesitation in pointing out and condemning the manner in which time is unnecessarily wasted during the first part of the sessions of the Ontario Legislature, we must say that we not only have no sympathy with, but that we must condemn the manner in which the Mail day after day draws attention to this subject in a way calculated to create the impression that when the House is not sitting members have nothing whatever to do, and particularly that in so doing it throws the whole blame upon the Mowat Government, instead of pointing out that in addition to their culpability in not having their measures more advanced, the rules of the House are largely chargeable with this loss of time. The brief sittings of the House which have taken place since its assembling, would not be so censurable had the members been reasonably well occupied in the earlier part of the day with committee work, but that they have not been so engaged is chiefly because rules prepared for an entirely different set of circumstances are clung to with a tenacity which must rejoice the hearts of ancient red-tapism and old toryism. The unsuitableness of these rules in their entirety to the circumstances of the Ontario Legislature, it is the business of the Mail, in common with all those who disapprove of this waste of time, to point out, and of Mr. Mowat, as leader and dictator of the House, to remedy, and for the not remedying of them both he and his colleagues are to be condemned.

That we may not lay ourselves open to the strictures which we have just passed upon the Mail, we may be permitted to point out how we think the work of the session might be both facilitated and more evenly distributed. The numerous private bills brought before the House every session do not really engage the attention of either the members of the House or Government until they come before either the Private Bill or Railway Committees, and no real opposition is offered to them until they reach them. At present, however, before they come before these committees a lot of, to our mind, unnecessary red-tapism has got to be gone through. For instance, the first step to getting the bill before either of these committees is the presentation of the petition asking for it, then it has got to be formally received on a following day, after which it goes to the Committee on Standing Orders to ascertain whether the proper notices have been given of the application and things prayed for in the petition; after this the committee has to report it back to the House, after which the bill may be introduced and referred to the proper committee. Having arrived at this stage notice has then to hang eight days in the lobby before the committee to which it is referred can consider it. Now all these proceedings, it will be seen, involve time—time which we think might be shortened without injury to any public or private interest, by abolishing the Standing Orders Committee altogether, and transferring the duties now performed by it to a committee composed of (say) the Clerk of the House, the Clerk of Private Bills, and the Law Clerk. Were this done, and were all petitions for private bills submitted to them before the House met, and their report thereon as to whether the rules of the House respecting these bills had been complied with or not, presented to the House on the first day of the session, and upon its reception and adoption, say on the following day after all the members interested had an opportunity of seeing it, these bills were, as a matter of course, sent to the committees charged with the real duty of passing upon their merits, the Private Bill and Railway Committees would get to work in one instead of three or four weeks after the opening of the session. And the private bill legislation might thus be disposed of in the early part of the session, and thus allow members to give their whole attention to those public measures which it seems well nigh impossible, judging by past experience, to get under consideration before the last days of each session, when the active member would require to divide himself into several parts to properly perform the duties devolving upon him—particularly those of them on the opposition side of the House when it is numerically weak. This is one way in which we think time might be economized; there are others, but we need not refer to them now.

The DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents a week.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

THE GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.

The WARDEN read the following telegram from Mr. Scott:—

"Grand Junction bill proposes to extend time for completion, and thereby will extend the time under the County By-law. Would it not be prudent to employ Bethune to argue the case before the Committee."

The WARDEN explained the position of the Grand Junction with regard to this country at the present time, and recommended that Mr. Bethune be employed, as suggested by Mr. Scott.

The Council then rose in order to allow the Committees to go to work.

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

The Institute in its New Rooms—Greatly Improved Arrangements.

The Peterborough Mechanics' Institute has steadily thriven and progressed till it grew too large for its old quarters, the very inconvenience caused by its crowded arrangements deterring many from joining it.

After some difficulty the Directors succeeded in obtaining suitable premises in the building on Water street, formerly occupied by the Ontario Bank, being the two flats over the offices of Messrs. Poussette & Roger and the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company, the entrance to the Institute being by a stairway between these offices.

On the first floor a spacious room facing on Water street is devoted to the reading room, having tables in the centre covered with magazines, pamphlets, periodicals, &c., and desks for newspapers along the walls. Opposite to this in another large room is the library, where about 3,300 volumes are arranged in book-cases, being properly classified and catalogued so that the Librarian or members can at once find the work that is sought. This orderly arrangement, so satisfactory to those who were acquainted with the confused crowding for want of space of the old library, has been brought about by the exertions of Mr. Bryson, the very efficient Librarian, Mr. Lewis, the Chairman of the Library Committee, Mr. Shaw and others of the Directors. The library contains an excellent collection of books, which is thus made thoroughly accessible for the first time. The engagement of a permanent and thoroughly competent Librarian will also be found greatly to the convenience of those using the library. On the same floor is a room fitted up as a smoking room and for chess and drafts. The room that was intended for a Board room has been given up to the Law Society for their library, the Real Estate Investment Company having kindly allowed the use of their Board room for Directors' meetings.

On the upper flat is a spacious lecture room and several class rooms, so that ample accommodation is provided for that branch of the work of the Institute.

We hope that in its new and far more commodious premises, the Mechanics' Institute will continue to flourish and to make even more rapid progress than in the past, and may sustain its reputation of being a credit to Peterborough.

Ticket Holders

are reminded that the raffle for Harry Winch's horse "Dick Dead-eye," will come off in the Huffman House to-morrow evening, at eight o'clock. 1d23

NORWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MUNICIPAL.—By order of the Village Clerk, W. H. Mullins, Esq., the Village Council will meet for general business on Monday, February 2nd, 1880. A full attendance of members is requested. J. B. Pearce, Esq., Reeve, left here on Monday morning to attend the County Council now in session in Peterborough.

RELIGIOUS.—Great interest is still taken in the meetings held nightly in the Methodist Church by the Rev. Mr. Thom. It is to be hoped that even greater interest will be manifested in the prayer meetings. In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Fotheringham, Mr. Roxburgh read a sermon to the congregation of the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning. There was no service in the evening, which largely increased the congregation of the Methodist Church.

UNUSUAL SIGHT.—A gentleman passed through the village last week with a tame deer, which he offered for sale. He effected no sale, and was advised to take it to Peterborough—a tame deer being quite safe inside the corporation now, as the veteran sportsmen have departed for pastures new. So it is said.

AND YET ANOTHER.—If Vennor is obliging, and the weather clerk agreeable, one of the events of the season will take place in the Lorne Skating Rink on Friday, Feb. [illegible], 1880, in the shape of a huge carnival, which promises to eclipse all former attempts. A prize is offered of a silver cup, value $8, for the best lady's costume, and a pickle caster to the best gentleman's costume, and as each one is making an effort to obtain the prizes something gorgeous may be expected. The proceeds are to be in aid of the Norwood Cornet Band, and it is hoped the citizens will turn out in full force and give them a bumper house, as they have purchased several instruments lately, and are trying to make the band a credit to the village. By all means see the carnival on Friday night.

DENTISTRY.—We see by poster your enterprising dentists, Messrs. D. & J. Pentland, intend making periodical visits to our village—the first visit being made on Monday and Tuesday by the senior partner, D. Pentland. He will be as welcome as the flowers in May, and will be a boon to the citizens in this district. We wish him success. He did a good business on Tuesday.

FOR HIS GUESTS.—Mr. Hugh Beckett, the obliging proprietor of the Beckett House, has added a handsome new melodeon to his parlour for the benefit and pleasure of his guests. Our musical lady friends have favoured us with a few selections on the new instrument, and pronounce it A No. 1.

THE LOVER AND THE LOVED.—The fourteenth of February (St. Valentine's Day) is approaching, and J. A. Butterfield has stocked his shelves with a large and varied assortment of valentines from the two cent hideous chromo for a jealous rival, to the expensive love missive for an adored friend. The post office officials will have their hands full in a few weeks.

GRAND JUNCTION.—Mr. Thomas Buck has made arrangements with the Grand Junction to carry his lumber from Hastings to Belleville. As he has manufactured a considerable quantity this season it will be quite an item for the line. We hear that Connor & Garrett intend re-building their saw mill consumed by fire about two weeks ago. A saw mill can be made a success at the Trent bridge.

BREVITIES.—The dentist and Tom Fraser' dog were out for a hunt on Monday....A robin was seen in Mr. E. Roxburgh's garden this morning....Spring will soon be with us....Elections are things of the past....New suits and hats appear on our streets....One of our citizens took a spree on Monday....Brennan's Hotel accommodated four commercials last week....The villagers sigh for a new tin-shop....Where are our capitalists....Rev. T. F. Fotheringham returned from Toronto Monday evening; his father is improving....H. SMOKE IN THE WEST WARD.—A chimney caught fire in the western part of the village the other day, and one of the inmates made it interesting for a while exclaiming, "A man! A man! O send for a man of some kind!" A professional man stepped in and assured her that there was no danger, and she was then happy.

BAD ROADS.—The bad state of the roads has caused business to slacken a little, and there is no grain moving of any account. Prices remain about the same.

PERSONAL.—Mr. James S. Meikle attended the meeting of the Presbytery and Sunday School Convention held in Peterborough last week. The Rev. T. F. Fotheringham intended to be present, but was called away to Toronto, his father being seriously ill.

NEW ENGLAND AND CANADA PACIFIC.

The Dominion Government has decided to subsidize a railroad from Lake Nipissing, which lies about midway between Ottawa and Sault Ste. Marie, and a railroad is already constructed from Ottawa to Pembroke, about one-third the way to Lake Nipissing. The strait of Ste. Marie is the outlet of Lake Superior, and when the road crosses it connects with the Canadian Pacific, already chartered, the route of which lies across the Michigan peninsula, south of Duluth, which is the eastern terminus to the Northern Pacific Railroad. When this road and the one just subsidized are built, there will be a continuous, straight, short line from the immense wheat fields of Minnesota, Dakota and Manitoba to Montreal. The direction of this road will be straight north-west. Nearly all that Western traffic, which, though immense, is but in its infancy, now comes by way of Chicago.

The export trade of the new North-west has already become great. Its possibilities are beyond estimate. The Northern Pacific, even without a good eastern connection, has suddenly risen from bankruptcy to prosperity. Now look at the distance with reference to this export trade. From St. Paul to Liverpool by the way of Chicago and New York the distance is 4413 miles, while from St. Paul to Liverpool by the way of this new route and Montreal it is only 3836 miles, a difference of 600 miles. This difference is enough to enable Boston, Portland and Montreal to secure the great bulk of that traffic if they build the road.

The people of Minnesota are wide awake to their interest in this matter. Immigration has poured in so rapidly, and the development of the wheat growing interest is now on such an immense scale that a direct line east seems to them a necessity. Then, too, the whole Dominion of Canada is interested in the wonderful growth of Manitoba. The fertility of the province has just begun to be understood. The country along the proposed new route is one of great capabilities. And as the new line, when built, will shorten hours of ordinary railroad travel, the immigration and trade it would invite can only be imagined. There is country enough north-west of Montreal, as habitable as Scotland, to support a population of twenty millions and make that city a second New York.—St. Alban's Messenger.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wondrous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dec6-1y

A SHOCKING STORY.

A young woman who lately had to go for help and shelter to the lying-in-ward of a certain workhouse in the western district of London tells a story which seems to us to deserve notice. The person who communicates the story to us (Pall Mall Gazette) does so, he says, in the very words of its original narrator, and he has furnished us with the names of nurse, doctor, sufferer—everybody concerned, in short:—"A girl (a tradesman's daughter) in our ward, disturbed us for several nights by strange conduct. She asked the doctor's permission to get up on the ninth day, and he said, 'Yes, I suppose so,' and up she got; the result being, that becoming feverish, she used to run about the ward from twelve at night, changing the babies (one five times) and otherwise acting in a manner only to be accounted for by the existence of fever. The next morning after being allowed up, at 3 a.m. she came to my bedside, and, waking me, asked for paper and stamps. I said (while only half awake), 'You can take what there is,' and fell off to sleep again. It appears she obtained enough material to write, enclose, and stamp five letters, telling outside friends that she should be home the next day. This was one morning, but the next day her movements were those unmistakably of high fever. Getting up at 2 a.m., she stoked into the fire with a poker and made a great disturbance. Being sent back to bed by the matron, she merely lay down in her clothes and was soon up again. Beginning to work again with the grate, she then got leave from the nurse to bathe a child. Partly completing this, and leaving the helpless babe in its bath, she went back to finish the grate, covering her face meanwhile with black dust. Not having any breakfast herself, she took her own baby out into the kitchen and laid it on the floor half under the sink, with the cold water running on it, then going back to complete the bathing of the first child. After this she took her own child from the sink puddle, soaking with wet as it was, to suckle it; but after such treatment the babe cried so that it would not take the breast; this ending with her refusing it to the child altogether, and then hastily attempting to force some large handfuls of soaked bread down its tiny throat. The nurse now had to interfere, saying 'Do you know what you are doing? You are killing your baby,' and took it from her. One of our number (a married woman) complaining of this nightly disturbance, the night superintendent spoke to the doctor, who at once took action in the matter. Calling up the girl, he said, 'What is all this disturbance about?' To which the girl's reply was, 'I will not stay here any longer to put up with insults.' On which the doctor rejoined, 'Yes, you shall go, and go at once.' This was at 12 (noon), and the girl then said, 'No, I do not want to go at once;' evidently wishing to stay until two o'clock, the hour at which her friends (according to the request made in her letters) were to meet her on this day. But these letters had never been posted, the girl herself having in a change of mood torn them up and thrown them beneath the grate, where their fragments had been found by the nurse. So, dinnerless and utterly unprepared, she had yet to face the outside world. Even while the doctor spoke her eyes were almost starting from her head, and she was most obviously in a high fever. But still she had to follow the doctor downstairs then and there with her helpless babe, and was turned out on foot (the twelfth day after confinement) into the bitter cold, frost and snow of our first week of this bitter winter. Her aunt shutting the door upon the girl, she wandered about the streets and parks with her infant in her arms for two whole days and nights; then, smashing some window-glass where the father of her babe lived, she was given in charge and brought back to the work-house between two policemen raving mad! Placed in the padded room, she exclaimed against those who had turned her out in the cold, saying to the doctor, 'It is all through you and Mrs. —— that I am here as I am.' She threatened, if she could only get at her, to put the knife into the woman who reported her, and swore as well as spat at the doctor who made out her discharge. Sent off to a lunatic asylum in a strait-jacket, under the joint charge of the relieving officer and a nurse, we know not her fate, but the child (owing to its frightful exposure) has since died in the nursery of the work-house. Misfortune, indeed, seems to have followed this poor babe; for the doctor only arrived in the nursery in time to see it die, and loudly complained before the entire ward at not having been called earlier by the nurse."

Over the Border.

Mr. Gladstone is making a good thing out of his visit to Midlothian. Besides the maunds, plaids, rugs, tweed suits, table covers, albums, and caskets which have been duly recorded in the daily papers, numberless other articles, chiefly of a domestic and useful character, have been presented to him, but, most unaccountably, without finding a chronicler. The following may be relied on as a tolerably accurate list of the many additional gifts from his friends and supporters, with which Mr. Gladstone will return across the border richly laden:—Several gallons of the very best Usquebaugh. A hamper full of Dundee marmalade, each pot authenticated with the signature of "E. Jenkins, M. P." Finnan haddies enough to supply the family breakfast table until the meeting of Parliament. Bannocks, oatcakes, scones, shortbread, and other trophies of the Land o' Cakes, in reckless profusion. Potted grouse, muir fowl, ptarmigan, and capercailzie. Brose, cockaleekie, haggis, and collops, in tins. A dozen sacks of best rough-ground Scotch oatmeal (for porridge). "A peck o' maut" for Willie to brew. Boxes of kippered salmon. A set of bag-pipes beautifully mounted in electro-plate. A Scotch cap. A complete Highlander's suit. Cairngorm brooches, buttons, sleeve links, and studs to ditto. Several Scotch terriers, Skye terriers, and Dandie Dinmonts. A Shetland pony. A team of Clydesdales. Photographs of Burns' birthplace, farm, monument, pipe, and punch bowl; a lock of Adam Smith's wig; Dugald Stewart's umbrella; the Ettrick Shepherd's crook; and the original covers of the first number of the Edinburgh Review. Various editions of The Heart of Midlothian, appropriately bound in boards enamelled with all the Scotch tartans; and last, but not least, a tireless set of Scotch ears, and a countless number of Scotch hearts.—Punch.

Fate and the Bridge.

The haphazard of life and death was illustrated in many ways by the Tay bridge calamity. One lady who travelled with her maid, had ordered a cab for the morning train, which reached its destination in safety, but the cabman overslept, and they were obliged to take the next train—the one which was hurled into the quicksands at the bottom of the river. Another instance of train missing turned out more happily. A gentleman was determined to go to Dundee, notwithstanding his wife's entreaties, and that prudent lady took pains to have the cabman behind time, so that her husband lost the ill-fated train. He was angry at the time, but is reconciled to the situation now, and entertains a favorable opinion of his wife's weather wisdom. Another man lost his life through the business shrewdness of the girl to whom he was engaged. He was visiting at her house in Edinburgh, and was anxious to remain until Monday, but she persuaded him to return rather than incur the displeasure of his employers by breaking faith with them.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY, Jan 28.—There was a poor general market to-day. Buyers were scarce and little can be said about prices. Beef was abundant and slow of sale at $3.50 to $4.50. Mutton dropped to 5c. to 6c., and was dull at these prices. Pork found few purchasers at $5.50 to $5.75, the shipping demand having ceased. Tallow 5c. to 5½c. Lard found few purchasers at 9c. Chickens were scarce, and what few came in were readily taken at 30c. per pair. Two or three lots of roll butter sold freely at 20c. Eggs were in supply, fully up to the demand at 15c. per dozen. Potatoes were plentiful at 60c. per bag, while some lots went at 65cts. There were a few lots of apples at quotations. Hay was again in abundant supply, but although slow of sale, prices were maintained, and we continue to quote $6.00 to $7.00 per ton. Straw found few purchasers at quotations. Wheat is coming forward in considerable quantities. The late downward tendency in price was somewhat checked yesterday, and $1.17 became the ruling figure for both spring and fall wheat, $1.17 is freely paid to-day for spring and $1.18 for choice winter wheat. Peas have made a drop in price and are now selling at 60c. There have been many loads of peas in to-day. Oats were more plentiful, but found ready takers at 32c. to 32½c. Wood still continues abundant with no change in price to note.

The Ameer in Captivity.

He was taken great care of on his way through the camp at Gundamuk. He was surrounded with cavalry and the nearest mounted men on his right and left had drawn swords. He appeared to be unconcerned. Though his ride of twenty-eight miles from Jugdulluk must have been a tedious one, he appeared glad to get out of the country, and casually remarked that he was "looking forward to the day when he should get to England and live like Duleep Singh, as he was very fond of shooting and riding." At Jugdulluk (where Colonel Jenkins, C.B., of the Guides, commanded) the officer in charge of the escort introduced the Colonel, whereupon he walked up and offered his hand, but Col. Jenkins drew himself up very stiffly and declined the honor, from which bystanders deduced that he had not acquitted him with regard to the Cabul massacre. At night he had four soldiers marching up and down in front of his tent; all his food was carefully examined both going in and coming out by the officer of the guard; in fact, the strictest surveillance was kept over him. He left Safed Sung for Jellalabad under a strong escort of the Eighteenth Bengal Cavalry. Officers who have come in contact with Yakub Khan say that his remarks in conversation are generally of the most childish kind and his intellect apparently of the lowest type. A good deal of trouble might have been saved if this had been found out sooner.—Bombay Pioneer.

MacKerras Memorial.

The Alma Mater Society of Queen's University met in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening. The Vice-President, Mr. A. B. McCallum, occupied the chair. After routine business the Memorial Committee, appointed at a previous meeting, presented their report. It was to the effect that some memorial was desirable to perpetuate the high character of the late Professor J. H. MacKerras. The Committee was not prepared to state what form the memorial should take, without consultation with the deceased's friends and the graduates of the University. This they reported could be accomplished by issuing circulars to all the friends and graduates, asking their opinions as to whether a scholarship, fellowship, or the endowment of a classical chair would be most desirable, circulars to be returned by the first of March. On Convocation Day a public meeting of the Alumni will be held to put the matter into shape. The report was unanimously adopted.—Kingston Whig.

Sending a Christmas Goose by Post.

One of the denizens of the Black Isle, resident in the neighborhood of Munlochy, had, we hear, reason to know that Christmas was at hand. It was on Friday week that a friend of his from the heights of Strathnairn or Strathdear entered the Inverness Post-Office and asked if that was the place "where you'll send parcels to the Black Isle?" The answer proving satisfactory, the enquirer deposited a goose, duly labelled, on the counter, remarking: "I'll be paying the present, he can pay the carriage," and then marched out of the office with all the dignity of a man who had discharged a duty and delivered himself of a burden. A burden it truly was—the weight of the goose was 24lbs. The postal clerks looked aghast; one of them, however, is said to have smiled—and no wonder, for the goose in question had evidently been hatched and reared in some of the foundries in town. If the truth must be told, it was—a tailor's goose. The postage of that goose amounted to exactly £3 4s sterling!

Hagyard's Yellow Oil combines in such an eminent degree all the healing, curative and extracting qualities known to medical science, that it is truly a family medicine that cannot be dispensed with. When applied to any Swelling, Sore, Burn, Chilblain, Frostbites, Skin Eruption, etc., its effects are magical. It is highly esteemed wherever known, and its enormous sale annually is the best certificate of its merits. w4d12-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

Time never sets so heavily on the aged as when they are ill and depressed. A heavy percentage of old people suffer from kidney complaints, etc., brought on by derangements of the secretory organs, who will hail with joy the great remedy prepared expressly to meet their cases—Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. It can be recommended with confidence. For sale by all dealers. w4d12-2w

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

What is Expectoration?

"Expectorants," as Dr. Good says, "true Expectorants are those medicines which rather promote the separation of the viscid phlegm with which the bronchial tubes are loaded." Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is manufactured with this object in view, and when used according to directions will separate or break up the phlegm and remove it from the bronchial tubes, leaving free respiration. It is also a valuable medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Croup, Hoarseness and complaints leading to Consumption. w4d12-2w

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Sidewalk Accident.

Last evening Mr. J. I. Davidson slipped and fell upon the icy sidewalk spraining his ankle badly, but not breaking his leg as has been reported. It is hoped he will not be detained from his business beyond a few days.

The Grand Junction.

The application of the Grand Junction Railway Company for a mandamus to compel the County of Peterborough to hand over to the trustees debentures for $75,000, came up before Judge Armour yesterday and was by him referred to the fall Court of the Queen's Bench.

Signor Bosco.

The third performance of Signor Bosco, at Bradburn's Hall last evening, was scarcely so well attended as on the preceding evening. His magical and sleight of hand feats were cleverly executed and did not fail to call forth loud applause. His skill in sleight of hand, together with the distribution of gifts to ticket holders, make these entertainments attractive.

Irish Relief Fund.

The committee for No. 3 Ward have met and divided the ward into districts, as follows:—That portion east of Water street has been assigned to Drs. A. Bell and W. H. Burritt; that portion west of Water street and east of Reid to Drs. Boucher and Kincaid; and all west of Reid street to Dr. O'Sullivan and Councillor Yelland. The work of canvassing has already begun.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh westerly to north-westerly winds, partly cloudy, decidedly colder weather, with snow-flurries in some localities. The heavy fog of last evening in Peterborough has been followed by cloudy, colder weather to-day. The thermometer indicated at 9 o'clock this morning 34°, and gradually falling to 31° at noon, with a north-westerly wind, and threatening snow.

The Volunteers.

To-day an application was made to the County Council on behalf of the 57th Peterborough Rangers, and of the Peterborough Troop of Cavalry, asking for a donation to aid them in paying for their new helmets. Other counties we notice have made such a grant, and our own Council might well consider the claims of a body of men, who voluntarily prepare themselves at the cost of much time and trouble to defend their country if called upon.

Fire in Ennismore.

The residence of Mr. Daniel Costello, late Reeve of Ennismore, was destroyed by fire this morning with all its contents. It is not known how the fire originated, but is supposed to have occurred through derangement of the stove pipes. Mr. Costello left home early this morning, and only learned of his loss at noon, by a messenger from his house. The building was valued at $1,000, and the furniture from $400 to $500. He is insured in the Royal for $500 on the house and $200 on the furniture.

The Miller Sale.

The sale of farm stock, implements and produce of the late Mr. James Miller was carried out by Mr. Charles Stapleton, at the Miller homestead in Otonabee on Monday. The sale was a very extensive one, being one of the largest that has ever taken place in the county, and was attended by about 600 people, many of whom were liberal purchasers. The prices were very satisfactory, and every lot was sold, the sale being completed about dark in spite of the great number of articles offered, but Mr. Stapleton knows how to obtain good prices without wasting time.

Good Templar Election.

Friendship Lodge, No. 146, I. O. G. T., met last evening at their Hall on George Street, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing quarter:—

R. W. Kelso	W.C.T.
Miss Charlotte McKell	W.V.T.
Geo. Stevenson	W. Secretary.
Miss A. Lumsden	Financial Secretary.
D. Pentland	Treasurer.
Mrs. S. G. Owens	Chaplain.
Robert Hamilton	W.M.
Miss J. Butler	W.I.G.
Cole Barrett	W.O.G.

The following were elected representatives to the County Lodge:—Messrs. Jas. Stratton, D. Pentland, W. A. Kelsey, Mrs. M. A. Heather, Mrs. S. G. Owens, and Miss M. A. Duncan.

The Bonspeil.

This grand curlians event promises to be an unqualified success. The present decided change for colder weather, should it continue till next Tuesday and Wednesday, will render the programme complete. The spot laid out by the committee for the contest is on the bay near McDonald's mill, and great care will be taken to keep the ice clean between now and the date of the contest. A committee of Peterborough curlers has been appointed to meet the contesting curlers at the depot on Monday evening to take charge of their curling stones, and escort them to their different billets. The rinks and the curlers' room are being tastefully decorated for the occasion, and a supper will be given to the visitors on the evening of the first day. Should they not be supplied with their favorite dish, viz., "beef and greens," we have no doubt they will enjoy themselves nevertheless.

THE BREAD RIOT IN CORK

A Lazy and Dissipated Mob, who Like to Eat but Prefer the Bread of Idleness.

The Cork Constitution of the 12th January gives the following account of the recent "Bread or Work" robberies in that city:—

The mob of idlers who on Friday inaugurated a new system of living easy in this city resumed their labour on Saturday with renewed vigour, being encouraged by the success of their first day's plunder. Their action on Friday was so quick and unexpected that the police were powerless in checking their career of terrorism before they had entered the shops in the principal streets. That they reaped a plentiful harvest there can be no doubt, and that the police were tricked is equally certain, for assaults and robberies were committed, and no one was held responsible for them before any tribunal. It does look strange that such a thing could be possible in broad daylight in the streets of Cork, where life and property are generally so secure in the keeping of an efficient and valuable force like the Royal Irish Constabulary, backed by a large reserve force, but such was the case. However,

THE RAID WAS SO QUICK

and unexpected that the inactivity of the police may be partially excused, and on Saturday their vigilance was praiseworthy. The mob contained few—not more than two or three—country labourers, and was made up of corner boys, who seem never to be engaged in any employment even in more prosperous times, and rollicking tradesmen who value drink more than bread. The first impulse of the humane and charitable when a multitude carrying a banner calling for "bread or work?" confronts them, is to administer to their wants, for there is nothing touches so acutely the public hearts as the wail for bread or the cry of starvation, and cruel is he who by word or deed would withhold the administration of relief in such a case; but very different it is when an idle mob assume a misery they do not possess. And it is much to be deplored that such was the character of the mob which paraded through this city on Saturday. Yet they conducted themselves in such a manner that any one watching their movements would soon see that they were enacting or were at least playing a game that would do themselves no harm, and might possibly do some good. That they were starving or apprehended such a melancholy state of affairs could scarcely be supposed, and their conduct only went to show that they are not ashamed to beg if they are unable to work. They commenced their march as early as noon, and carried, as on the previous day, a banner supported by two poles, on the top of which were two loaves of bread. On the oilcloth banner was written "Bread or work? bread or work?" and a rude form of a harp without a crown; on the obverse side was printed the words "Distress—work." The procession took a route similar to that taken on the previous day, but was joined immediately on the South Mall by a dozen of policemen, fully armed, under the command of Head-Constable Dunne. Having crossed Parliament Bridge Head-Constable Meehan and another dozen of armed police joined the march. The first halt was made at Mr. Davidson's bakery by the banner bearers, and the Royal Irish halted at the same place. A bread cart was being loaded at the door, but this was soon closed up as the marauders approached. The head-constables named took good care that no demand for bread was made in their presence, but of course they had no power to prevent voluntary contributions. Seeing that the police were determined to put a stop to any exhibition of terrorism the ringleaders moved on in the direction of Buckingham-place police station, being closely followed by the police, who, in fact, were in the centre of the [illegible].

A PITIABLE FARCE,

[illegible]

Between the station and Douglas street the banner got disarranged, and a halt was made to adjust it, and again the police waited their movement. There was no further delay along Douglas street, Abbey street, Sullivan's quay, or, in fact, until South Main street was reached, and the police kept slow and quick pace with them all the way. The shops in Prince's street and along the Main street, which contributed the previous day, were re-visited, and again charity was extended. Where members of the mob escaped the police they darted into the houses and got bread, but in many cases, parties seeing them approach, either threw out some loaves on the street or closed their doors. In more than one case comfortably clad tradesmen, who could get employment, darted into houses and asked bread, their object being to have it to sell for drink, as was done on Friday. And, by the way, not far from the North Main street, there is a store of meat which was secured on Friday, waiting to be disposed of by the plunderers. No doubt there is great distress in parts of this city—real distress, and not that too common distress which is purely the result of intemperance—distress which requires timely relief—and the charitable and those who can afford it should see to contributing the required supplies and extending the sympathy which often does more to brighten prospects than the actual substance given. But to demand the bakers' substance to transfer to the publicans' till. Donors should guard against such malappropriations of their charity by investigating the real wants of their protegees. The only damage the crowd did along the route was to obstruct the traffic on the streets. The leaders frequently relieved each other, and those relieved retired to the rear and dropped into convenient public houses to refresh themselves after the fatigue consequent on such a campaign. As the mob entered Shandon street the police force halted and were returning to their stations when a second mob claimed their services. The second party was formed on the Western road, and the leadership was confined to a more juvenile portion of the community. They also had a flag and a loaf emblem. Constable Carroll observing the movements drew out his men in a body to watch the proceedings. Evidently the party did not like to be encumbered with the police, and started off at a galloping pace leaving the peace officers considerably in the rear, but Head Constables Dunne and Meehan's men opportunely arrived and took up the pursuit. Soon it was found impossible to keep pace with the young [illegible], and a military manoeuvre by which half of the entire body of police fell in with the mob at convenient corners was resorted to, thus they ran zig-zag until Patrick's street was reached. The first halt in Patrick's street was made at Mr. Harvey's bakery establishment, where Sub-Inspector Mayne met the youths and helped them to bread.

IT IS AN OUTRAGE ON THE NAME OF CHARITY

THE ACT OF KINDNESS

seemed to put them in thorough good humour, and they ran off in the direction of Patrick's bridge leaving the armed police at the fountain. They were about to cross into Bridge street when Head Constable Castillon and a few of his men met them and told them that he would not allow such blackguards into his territory; that it was [illegible] they required, and they would not impose on the people in his district. The leaders at once rushed off along Merchant's-quay instead of invading Bridge-street; but when they had gone below Warren's-place they returned, and finding Head Constable Castillon still resolute, they scampered along Patrick-street again. Their day's spoils must have amounted to something considerable, but, thanks to the exertions of the constabulary, who were kept in active service during the day, no outrages were committed as on the previous day. The "rioters" have settled down to work it out in a "constitutional" manner—we wonder how long it will last.

SERIOUS DISTURBANCES AT CLAREMORRIS.

There have been further serious disturbances in the Claremorris district, owing to an attempt to serve ejectments on the estate of Mr. Hans Brown. A process-server named Langley, proceeded on the estate with a number of processes, but he was attacked and severely beaten. He was deprived of all his clothes, and left a mile from any place where he could get any clothing or shelter. He reported the outrage at the nearest police station, and on the following day he returned with fresh ejectments, accompanied by 100 armed police, but he incautiously went into a house to light his pipe, and some one stole the ejectment notices. This caused further delay, and when on the road the police were met by a mob of women, numbering several hundred, who refused to allow them to pass, and a scene of violence followed, during which

SEVERAL WOMEN WERE BAYONETTED.

They acted with great fierceness, but the police forced their way through. They had great difficulty in saving Langley from their violence. The mob had greatly increased, but the men did not interfere except to encourage the women to resist. They were addressed by a tenant farmer named Hughes, who counselled them not to use violence with the constabulary, but to resist the accursed Langley. The resident magistrate told the people they were acting foolishly, and that they would only get themselves injured, but the women replied by cries of that they would die but would never permit Langley to serve processes. The proceedings were of the most turbulent character, and it was feared that it would be necessary to adopt very rigorous measures. At length a double line of police were formed, and the women who had gathered around the door of the first house where an ejectment was to be served were with difficulty driven back at the point of the bayonet.

SOME OF THEM WERE STABBED

and others received ugly wounds on the head from the rifles. Langley succeeded in nailing the process to the door, but no sooner had it been posted than the women broke through the ranks of the police and tore it down, amid yells and curses. The crowd followed the police about, and several attempts were made to get at Langley, who at length drove away escorted by twelve policemen. A tenant farmer addressed the people, and told them they must fight for their land now, that the landlords must go peaceably if possible, but by violence if necessary.

TOBACCO SMOKING.

Mr. William Pratt, of Newton, Montgomeryshire, has forwarded to the Lancet the following interesting letter from the late Professor Parkes:

"MY DEAR MR. PRATT,—I think my state of mind as regards tobacco is very much what yours seems to be. I have honestly tried to collect evidence from moderate smokers, both medical and others, and when tolerance has been established, I have never been able to make out any symptoms which implied to injury. In the case of many medical men whom I have asked to study their own condition, the answer has always been the same—viz., they could see no harm or disturbance of any function. Even in some cases of enormous smokers—i.e., men who rarely were without a pipe or cigar—I could learn of no injury. On the other hand, I have seen, like all of us, men complaining of dyspepsia, nervousness, palpitation, &c., and who were much better for leaving off smoking; in fact, in these cases there could be no doubt of an injurious effect. In boys of 14 or 15 who begin to smoke, I think I have observed that tolerance is slowly attained; that appetite is less, and I presume digestion and nutrition less good, and that the complexion becomes pasty and less florid and clear. There was a striking case of this kind in the son of a medical friend, who watched his son naturally very carefully, and who told me that the effect of the tobacco (a good deal was smoked) was quite unmistakable. I persuaded the son to lessen his tobacco one-half, and his health certainly improved, but he was then a young man. That some injury, therefore, is sometimes produced, and especially on young people, seems to me quite clear; but it is curious in other cases, how difficult it is to find ill effects, even in the young, when the quantity is not excessive. As to the effect on the young even, it is curious in Burmah to see children smoking in their mothers' arms, and yet when I was serving in Burmah, many years ago, I often saw a woman walking along smoking her cigar of tobacco rolled up in a plantain leaf, and carrying on her hip her child of two or three years old, who also had his or her little cigar, which was smoked with the greatest gravity. On talking to the Burmese (who smoke constantly), they would never allow that even young children were in the least damaged. When I was in Turkey I tried to make inquiries of some of the intelligent Turkish gentlemen; one or two of them said they thought the Turks had learned to smoke from the Europeans, and had been growing apathetic and dull ever since. But others laughed at this, and the rural Turk, who smokes a good deal, is a fine, active, energetic fellow. I have talked with many Germans, who all stand out manfully for tobacco. In conclusion, I confess myself quite uncertain. I can find nothing like good evidence in books; too often a foregone conclusion, without any evidence to back it, is given. I think we must decidedly admit injury to excess; from moderate use I can see no harm, except it may be in youth. My opinions are, you will see, very indefinite, and I would gladly see some really good evidence collected. If at any time you can send me any facts I shall be very grateful.

"Believe me, very sincerely yours,

"E. A. PARKES.

RAILWAY STATION BURNED.—At about half-past ten this morning the Victoria Railway station at Fenelon Falls was burned. The fire was caused through a defective stove-pipe.

PROTECTING RAILWAY SERVANTS.—A meeting of the Legislative Committee on accidents to brakesmen was held this morning. Mr. F. Broughton, Managing Director of the Great Western Railway, was present. He expressed his entire approval of the work the committee had in hand, and said that he had given instructions to all the officials along the line to attend at once if summoned by the committee. He had ideas of his own of the manner in which many accidents might be avoided or rendered less liable, but his ideas were not quite matured yet. Mr. Aymong, a conductor of the Northern Railway, said the frogs on that road were protected, and that since that had been so they had caused no loss of life.

SERGEANT GRAYBURN'S MURDERER.—The Department of the Interior expects in a few days to capture the murderer of young Grayburn, the mounted policeman, at Fort Walsh. An American detective, it is said, has supplied the necessary information, and will claim the reward.

BURIED ALIVE.—A small-pox patient had a narrow escape from being buried alive yesterday. It appears that he was coffined and placed in the grave before it was discovered that he was not dead. The grave digger fancied he heard a noise, when the coffin was immediately raised, and on the cover being removed it was found that he still lived. He was taken back to the hospital. It was a clear case of suspended animation.

GOLD MINING.—The search for gold in the County of Beauce last season was actively prosecuted by fourteen different associations. Of these eleven conducted their operations on the Gilbertin, Rigaud and Vaudreuil, and three worked on the Desplantes. The indications justify the belief that next summer is likely to be one of the busiest on record in our gold districts. Mr. Goldring erected last fall large works. A rumour is current that he has disposed of a share in the prospective profits of these works for $20,000 to a New York Company. Near these works occurs one of the falls of the Chaudiere some fifty or sixty feet in height, and it is said that the American Company proposes to construct an immense dam above the cataract, with the aid of which they expect to obtain access to, and the necessary hydraulic power to work the bed itself of the Chaudiere for a considerable distance. It is the avowed intention on the part of many people to make their fortunes at the mines next season. Altogether the foreshadowings of a busy future is in store for the gold fields of the Beauce district, and the prospects which they hold out of profitable employment to our idle labourers is most marked and gratifying.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.—Earl Grosvenor arrived here this morning from Ottawa.

A SUDDEN CHANGE.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—The Crown Prince of Germany unexpectedly postponed his departure for Italy to-day. Count Von Moltke and other principal dignitaries had assembled at the railway station to say farewell, but were disappointed at his non-arrival. This sudden change in the programme of the Crown Prince has caused a great sensation. Rumors refer it to Prince Bismarck's resignation, the Vatican negotiations, etc. Bismarck had a long interview with the Emperor and Crown Prince to-day. The Reichstag has been summoned to meet on the 10th of February.

A THUNDERBOLT.

A St. Petersburg letter states that the increase of the German army has fallen like a thunderbolt upon the Russian people.

TROUBLE IN BENGAL.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 28.—Intelligence from the northern portion of the presidency of Bengal states that a considerable force of Hindoos, inhabitating the district of the Naga Hills, raided into the territory of Cachar, laying waste and destroying numerous tea gardens, and killing the managers. The onslaught here is believed to have been the result of nothing more serious than native jealousy of the English owners of the tea fields, although certain residents of this city assume to regard it as the result of influence brought to bear by particular malcontents in British Burmah, possibly from the neighborhood of Rangoon. Full details of the affair have not yet been received.

OBSTRUCTIONISTS IN THE HOUSE.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Right Hon. W. H. Smith, First Lord of the Admiralty, in a speech at Westminister to-night, referring to the obstructive policy of the Irish members of Parliament at the last session, said it behooved all to concern themselves deeply in securing decorous procedure in the business of the House.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Appeals are in wide circulation in London for subscriptions to the Duchess of Marlborough's fund for the relief of Ireland. The response is general and generous.

A BROKEN SHAFT.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—A Queenstown telegram says:—The steamship Holland, from London to New York, carrying seventy-five passengers, broke her main shaft on the 25th, when 300 miles south of the Scilly Islands, and arrived at Queenstown, yesterday evening, under sail. She will proceed to New York when repaired. The wind was blowing a strong gale from the south.

GARIBALDI'S GRATITUDE.

ROME, Jan. 28.—General Garibaldi, in a recent communication, thanked King Humbert that the laws of Italy had enabled him to obtain a divorce from his wife, with whom he had never lived, and to marry a woman with whom he had been living in concubinage, who is the mother of his children. The King is said to have acknowledged Garibaldi's letter and made a cordial reply.

OIL IN HANOVER.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—The borings in the Hanover petroleum region are now 60 feet deep. The existence of a basin as large and rich as the one in Pennsylvania is regarded as beyond doubt by experts. The deepest borings already yield 400 weight of oil per well daily. As the oil is becoming more inflammable as the bore approaches the basin, the discovery of a European Pennsylvania may be pronounced as impending. The borings are exclusively in the hands of Hamburg and Bremen firms engaged in the American trade.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN CUBA.

HAVANA, Jan. 29.—The inhabitants of western Cuba are alarmed at the constantly recurring earthquakes. From San Diego, Santiago, De Las Vegas, Pinar Del Rio, Cienfugos, Mariel and elsewhere come accounts of earthquakes and of the public terror. San Cristobal was the apparent centre of the disturbance. The concussion there on Thursday nearly tumbled the place to ruins. The church stands tottering, and the priest escaped from his house while the walls were falling. The telegraph office is half demolished; the Government and municipal buildings are untenable. The jail filled with prisoners was dismantled; one convict was shot dead while emerging through a crevice made by the earthquake. The guards were wounded in the melee, and fourteen other inmates are in the hospital with injuries from falling beams.

STRANGE MARRIAGE CASE.

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Jan. 29.—The motion for a new trial in the case of McKeehan against Moose was denied yesterday. Allison McKeehan last June was invited to the residence of Hattie Moose, a beautiful country girl, aged 18, and was there compelled by her father, who was armed, to marry her. McKeehan had the marriage declared void, and now a new trial has been refused. McKeehan will be prosecuted for seduction.

THE INDIAN TROUBLES.

DENVER, Jan. 29.—General Adams and the Ute delegation who are returning from Washington arrived at Pueblo yesterday, and proceeded at once to Los Pinos. Adams says that he will capture the guilty Indians at all hazard, but he does not divulge his plans. Later despatches from the South do not indicate that Victoria is dead. Victoria sent two messengers to Major Morrow to negotiate for surrender, but Morrow will only treat with the chief in person, and accept an unconditional surrender.

A SERIOUS QUARREL.

COLUMBIA, S.C., Jan. 29.—As a sequel to the Hampton-Garry controversy, Colonel Haskell, Hampton's son-in-law, yesterday published a letter charging Garry with bribery, fraud and falsehood. The letter will undoubtedly lead to serious results.

CONFIRMATORY EVIDENCE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says the Senate Committee, which is investigating the accusations against Commissioner Hoyt, is said to have obtained confirmatory evidence of a circumstantial and documentary character.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—A Washington special report to the Herald says there is a unanimous sentiment in Congress against European interference with the Inter-Oceanic Canal project. There is a strong disposition to aid the Monroe doctrine. In the Senate the Panama and other canal projects have assumed such importance that the Committee on Commerce desire to be relieved of them, and Gordon will ask that they be handed over to a special committee.

A PASTOR EXPELLED.

The Rev. Wm. Paul, pastor of the Second German Baptist Church, was expelled on Monday for alleged improper intimacy with a young girl. Paul is a married man and has six children.

AN INDIAN COMMISSIONER.

The Sun says Commissioner Hoyt will have to go. General Fisk has made a strong case against him, and Senator Kirkwood has a report ready in regard to the Cheyenne Indians which is very damaging.

TIRED OF LIFE.

Joseph Wolf, of Elizabeth, who claimed to have been shot and robbed by an unknown man, now acknowledges that he shot himself because he was tired of life. He will die.

A PRIZE FIGHT ARRANGED.

Michael Donovan and Geo. Rooke were matched yesterday to fight for the middle weight championship of America on May 11th.

AIDING RAILWAYS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The House Railroad Committee is considering a singular proposition of the Washington, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railway that it shall be allowed to import rails for its road and to pay duties with its bonds, which the Secretary of the Treasury is to hold until the road has earned their face value by serving the Government. The same committee intends to report favourably on a bill compelling the Government to guarantee the bonds of the Sanbalcois and Mexican Border Railway to the tune of $15,000 per mile for 160 miles. It will be observed that there is nothing mean about this committee.

DeLESSEPS DEFIANT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The World says that Gordon stated that the Inter-Oceanic Canal matter could soon be the most important one before the American people. Daily despatches are received from our Minister to Columbia that the agents and friends of DeLesseps ridicule the probable efforts of this Government to interfere with his canal project in any way, and defiantly boasts that France, either alone or conjointly with other European Governments, is determined to construct and own the canal.

LUNATICS UNCONTROLLED.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—It is disclosed that in the ward on Blackwell's Island, where Maria Otner was fatally beaten on Saturday by two other crazy women, two hundred unruly lunatics have been confined with only one nurse in charge. A searching investigation will be made.

A FAITHLESS SHEPHERD.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—The counsel for the Rev. Edmund Cowley, of the Shepherd's Fold, yesterday offered to surrender the children under his charge, but the prosecution refused to suspend proceedings, and the investigation continues. Cowley's counsel in court yesterday stated that in view of the disclosures already made he would withdraw from the case. Criminal proceedings against Cowley are threatened.

AUSTRIAN TRADE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The Consul-General at Vienna reports that the new tariff has diminished the importations from the United States to some extent. The exports to the United States increased last year. The premium on gold over silver is 15 per cent.; paper is at par with silver.

A GOOD SPECULATION.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—At the stock exchange this morning the syndicate which purchased the large block of Central Pacific stock placed it upon the open market. It is said that the entire 50,000 shares taken by the syndicate at 75, was sold between 81 and 88.

Daily Evening Review

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1880.

BOYLE vs. THE GLOBE.

It may be quite true, as Mr. Patrick Boyle, of the Irish Canadian, states in his own evidence in his action against the Toronto Globe for libel, that he neither received nor knew anything of the $5,000 paid by Messrs. Maclean, Rogers & Co., for the withdrawal of his tender for the Parliamentary printing at Ottawa last April, but it is safe to say that at least nine out of ten of those reading the evidence given before the jury will, as they did, render a verdict for the defendants. It may be, and it is the only solution possible consistent with the evidence of Messrs. Starrs, Cotton, Rogers and his own, that Cotton and Starrs made the money out of the transaction, and never intended that Mr. Boyle should benefit to the extent of a single dollar by the withdrawal of his tender, but if so it exhibits them as wanting in that sense of honor which is said to prevail even among a certain dishonest class of the community, and Mr. Boyle cannot be freed from blame for having transactions and carrying on negotiations with men of their character. Moreover, it must be borne in mind that Mr. Boyle admits himself that he was willing to do practically the same thing in another form. If the little matter could be arranged, although he was not prepared to accept a sum of money for the withdrawal of his tender, he was quite ready to fall into line if Messrs. Maclean and Roger would take him in as a partner. The first course, Mr. Boyle says, he thought would be a crooked one, the latter a straight one. We must confess we fail to see much difference. But the points fully elicited by this trial, and which require the serious attention of both the Government and Parliament is the "crooked" ways of tenderers for public contracts which it exhibits. The only way that we can see of putting a stop to such bogus tenders as were evidently offered in this instance, is to require a substantial deposit to be put in with each tender, that shall be invariably forfeited if the tenderer fails to carry out the contract if awarded to him. From the evidence given in this suit it is clear that bona-fide contractors have a way of putting in bogus tenders below their real one, so that if they happen to be higher than any other bona-fide tenders, they may use these bogus ones for the purpose of the more easily inducing those below them to withdraw theirs, and thus clear the way for their getting the contract at higher prices than they would otherwise do. For instance, in the present case there were five tenders put in below that of Maclean, Rogers & Co., and four of these five were in the interest of the old contractors and all below that of Mr. Boyle. With these tenders before him, and ignorant of their true character, Mr. Boyle or any other contractor would in such a position be much more easily dealt with than if there was nobody below him, and he was entitled to the contract—thus the way is made easy for getting a good contract. Now if each of these tenders, before they were opened, had to be accompanied by a deposit of say $5,000 apiece, which on their withdrawal would have been forfeited to the country, the number of bogus tenders put in for the purpose of scaring off bona-fide tenders would certainly be decreased, and the country would, in some measure, be recouped for the loss sustained through such crookedness.

Another point worthy of consideration in connection with this matter, is the injustice which the tendering system does in the letting of such contracts as the one under consideration. Here was a firm which had a valuable plant all in order for the performance of this particular work, which would be rendered comparatively valueless if they did not get this particular contract. They were thus placed at the mercy of a number of "sharks" by having it thrown open to public competition, and consequently, in very self-defence, they were compelled to resort to crooked ways in order to save themselves from perhaps ruin. How much better would it have been for the Printing Committee charged with the letting of this contract had they been able to go to Maclean, Roger & Co., and say:—"After proper enquiry we have arrived at the conclusion that a certain tariff of rates would be a fair price for the work we want; if you like to take it at these rates you can have it, if not we will ask for tenders?" Does any one suppose they would not have snapped at the offer at lower rates than they are getting to-day, and that the country might have benefitted proportionately? Of course we know had this been done we would have the cry raised from one end of the Province to the other that "a job" had been perpetrated, but the powers that be, from the Dominion Parliament down to our township councils, should have nerve enough to transact the public business in the same way they would do their own, instead of listening to "cries" which in nine cases out of ten are only raised in the interests of those gentlemen who are always ready to tender at any price for any work simply because they have nothing to lose, and may make something by inducing somebody to buy them off at the expense of the people, either through increased prices or scrimpped work.

PAPER MONEY.

We are quite ready, as the Examiner anticipates, to agree with it that the vote of approval of Mr. Griffin, when he lectured here on the National Currency, would not have been passed if it had been thought that the resolution would have been used as evidence that the citizens of Peterborough endorsed the "irredeemable currency." Indeed, in commenting on the resolution at the time, we protested against its being considered as a verdict of the people of this town in favor of irredeemable paper.

LOCAL NOTICES.

From the Examiner.

Our readers will have noticed the announcement, elsewhere, over the signatures of the Publishers of Peterborough, that henceforth the abuse of dead-head advertising, which has for a long time been extensively carried on at the expense of the proprietors of the newspapers of this town, will no longer be permitted. This step has been made necessary by the extent to which the practice has been carried, and a recognition of the fact that, under the great advance which has lately taken place in every line of publishers' stock and material, without any corresponding advance in the charges of the publisher, the latter cannot afford to throw his news columns open to the free use of the public, in competition with his legitimate business columns. Any person who takes the trouble to give the subject a moment's consideration, will see both the reasonableness and justice of this step. The space in a newspaper devoted to business announcements represents the capital of the publisher. To have that space available for legitimate business, costs the publisher the investment, in the case of the Examiner, of some $10,000 of cash for material, machinery and stock, as well as an annual outlay of many hundreds of dollars to replace deteriorating material and to meet the requirements of business—to say nothing of the labor and expense of carrying on the business of publication after that capital has been invested. To derive a fair interest upon his capital and return for his labor, and to meet the very heavy cash outlay involved in carrying on business, he has to depend entirely upon the return afforded by the few columns of his paper set apart for the business of advertising. Every inch of that space stand to him in the same relation exactly, both as to cash invested and the necessity of a return therefrom, as every acre of a farmer's land does to the farmer. He can no more afford, and ought no more to be expected to give away that space without a consideration, than a farmer to give the use of a portion of his property to any person who might choose to ask it. People come into a newspaper office and request the use of a dollar's worth of advertising space free of charge, who would never dream of going to a grocer and asking to be made a present of a pound of tea. They will ask to be donated $4 worth of advertising on the ground of having spent $1.50 in a printing job on which perhaps the publisher has perhaps 25 cents profit, but would never think of asking the butcher from whom they had purchased two pounds of suet to throw in a quarter of beef—yet the two transactions would be strictly identical. A newspaper is a public convenience, it is true; but it is in precisely the same way as a railway or a telegraph line—it cannot be conducted in the public interest without a very heavy expense, and to meet that expense certain charges must be made. No person who buys a ticket from Peterborough to Port Hope expects to get half-a-carload of freight carried free on that account, nor should any reasonable man expect that the payment of a dollar for an advertisement or a job gives him the right to expect the publisher to make him a present of two dollars, which supposition is based on a very modest estimate, indeed, of the average assurance of the dead-head local advertiser. We take the trouble to direct the attention of the public to these considerations, that they may understand how reasonable and just it is that they should be compelled, as they will in the future be, to pay a fair rate for advertising in any shape whatever.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

It is particularly requested that subscribers not receiving the Review regularly will at once make the fact known at this Office, in order that all cause of complaint may be removed as speedily as possible.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw81-1y

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

STATUTE LABOR IN VILLAGES.

On [illegible] the [illegible], in the House of Assembly, Toronto, Mr. [illegible] moved the second reading of his bill, the object of which is to amend the Municipal Act so as to enable incorporated villages to pass by-laws to compel the performance of statute labor. The bill was referred to the Municipal Committee. The village of Lakefield is peculiarly interested in this bill, and should not allow it to become law without protesting against it. Lakefield tried this plan of taxation for the first two years of its existence to its heart's content. So far as towns and villages are concerned, taxation by levying of statute labor is unjust, because unequal in its application. Nothing that can be said in favor of this mode of taxation in townships will justify, in the light of reason, its application to towns or villages. If statute labor had been levied for the last two years upon the property assessed in Lakefield, a sum equal to the amount raised for village purposes would have been realized, being about $800 each year. This amount has been levied according to value of property. No taxation in villages can be just and equitable without being levied according to the value of property. Statute labor [illegible] principle [illegible] of taxation per capita, and taxation by or according to valuation. A person assessed for $200 will be compelled to pay as much statute labor as a person assessed for $1,200—each would have to pay $2. Again—a person assessed for $1,300 would have to pay as much as a person assessed for $2,000. The poor man assessed for $200 would pay one cent on the dollar, while his wealthier neighbor assessed for $2,000 would only pay a rate of one and a half mills on the dollar on the value of his property. It will be seen that in this case the poor man would be compelled to pay more than six times the amount of taxes paid by the one better able to pay, according to the value of property. No bill like this should be allowed to become law, which would grind the poor in favour of the rich even though it be only permissible. We do not think that the Municipal Council of Lakefield, or any member of it, would even attempt to put such an iniquitous law into operation, but we do say that no municipal council should have such a privilege. Mr. Scott is Chairman of the Municipal Committee, and the voters of Lakefield should solicit his services, if not on their own behalf, still on behalf of others.

A BROKEN LEG.

Mr. Geo. R. Treadwell's son, a child about five years old, broke his leg while playing on the ice on Trail's pond, near the grist mill, on Monday forenoon, the 26th of January. This should be a warning to others. We are glad to hear that the child is now doing well under the care of Dr. Armour.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS.

The Division Registrar of Lakefield has made his half-yearly report to the Registrar-General. The registrations made for the year 1879 have been as follows:—

Births to the number of	21
Marriages	17
Deaths	9
Total	47

There can be but little doubt that the registration of births has been very much neglected during the past year. The neglect of this matter is a very serious affair. Every birth should be registered within 30 days. The penalty for neglecting to to do so is $20 and costs. Parties interested had better make a note of it and attend to this matter, so as to save trouble and costs.

SUNDAY DRIVING.

Some Peterborough sports were out in the north driving nearly all day on Sunday last. They did not leave Lakefield for Peterborough until late in the evening, and were compelled to borrow a horse from a farmer to complete the journey.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.

Mr. [illegible], our village baker, has sold out his business to Mr. Peter Hughes, of this place, and intends leaving Lakefield to go farming.

ORANGE MEETINGS.

The old Orange Lodge, No. 122, meets in the Orange Hall, Lakefield, on Monday evening next, at 7 o'clock, and the Young Canadian Lodge, No. 1285, meets in the same place on the Tuesday evening following.

THE "LAKEFIELD NEWS."

Mr. J. Griffin has sold the Lakefield News plant to Mr. W. Rule, who intends to run a paper in Aylmer, about 12 miles from St. Thomas. The News, with all its strange and exciting memories, is finally completely deceased, so far as Lakefield is concerned.

ROTTEN EGGS.

It is reported that a fresh, or rather stale supply of rotten eggs has been gathered, and that youth had better beware.

Nearly every little urchin or school boy met on the streets of Lakefield will ask you, "Who struck Buckley, or how do you like my new pants?"

AN EXTRAORDINARY OUTRAGE.

An Attempted Assassination of Two Priests During Mass.

The Church of St. Peter, Hatton Garden, better known as the Italian Church, was the scene of a shocking outrage on Sunday morning, Jan. 10. The building had been decorated for the festivities of Christmas and the Epiphany, and special preparations had been made in view of the visit yesterday of His Eminence Cardinal Manning, who had promised to deliver the sermon after the vespers yesterday evening. The 10 o'clock mass was being celebrated on Saturday morning by the Rev. Father Bakanowski, a Polish priest, licensed as Chaplain to the Poles in London, who is allowed the use of St. Peter's Church for the performance of his religious functions. Just at the elevation of the Host a pistol shot was fired at the priest by a man in the body of the church, and the bullet lodged in the altar. The acolyte who was serving mass immediately fled into the sacristy, and locked the door behind him, so that the priest in following was unable to enter. Here his assailant fired two more shots, one of which became embedded in the crown of the arch over the sacristy door, and the other in the side of the door.

The priest then sought refuge by going behind the altar, where he was followed by the would-be murderer. The reverend father succeeded in getting round to the front of the church and made his escape. Two more shots were fired after him, one of them piercing the back of a chair at the top of the right aisle of the church. The man rushed to the back of the altar, and seizing some of the massive candle-sticks dashed them to the ground, breaking them into fragments. He then went up the altar steps and wrenched away the door and frame-work of the tabernacle. The force required to do this may be imagined when it is stated that the door itself is a plate of metal of considerable thickness. The screws which fastened the door he snapped, and then seized the pyx and chalice, which he bent and damaged as much as possible. Not content with this he brought out the ciborium, which contained about 300 consecrated hosts. The altar linen and ante-pendium were ignited either by the falling candles which he tore from the altar, or by the man setting fire to them with matches, a supply of which was afterward found in his possession. The ante-pendium was a beautiful work of art, worth at least £150. It was the gift of the noble ladies of Genoa, being the work of their own hands, and was presented to the church on the 8th of December last, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. As it was low mass that was in the course of celebration, fortunately the ante-pendium was covered by another of less value, which has been some time in use in the Church. The outer one was to all intents and purposes destroyed, and the under one was scorched and blackened by the flames. The debris of the broken glass, candles, metal, and woodwork was scattered all over the chancel. The incidents thus described were the work of a few moments.

The miscreant was running from the sanctuary when he was met in the nave by the Rev. H. V. Arkell, a priest residing at the presbytery of the same church, who, having heard several shots fired, ran into the church to ascertain the cause of a violent ringing of the bells. Mr. Arkell was also fired at, but he seized hold of both arms of his assailant and took from him a revolver. Notwithstanding the efforts of the man to stab the priest in the breast with a large stiletto knife, by the aid of the housekeeper (Elizabeth Brooks) the desperado was secured, but not without having cut Brooks a good deal about the hands. The assistance of the police having been secured by some of the congregation, they, with the aid of some one in the crowd which had by this time collected in the church, took the dagger from the man, who made attempts to stab those about him. The result of this destructive attack on the altar and the furniture thereon was to cause the light of the candles to set fire to some of the surrounding ornamentation, and it is estimated that altogether some hundreds of pounds' loss will be sustained.

The Rev. H. V. Arkell further states that the police did not interfere or give any aid until the desperado had been secured. They were not the persons who took from Schomo the deadly weapons, but two of the congregation, an Italian and an Irishman, took from him, one the dagger and the other the revolver. Asked with regard to the motive that could have instigated the crime, the reverend gentleman says he is convinced that it is the upshot of German Socialism, as the man was unknown to any of the clergy, and as the deadly weapons found upon him were of a costly manufacture. The police, he said, had also some clue to a conspiracy of which the Rev. Mr. Bakanowski was to be the victim. That reverend gentleman had recently published a pamphlet in condemnation of the Nihilists, and had had it translated into various Continental languages. Cardinal Manning came expressly yesterday evening to the church, and after his sermon, in which he alluded to the sacrilege that had been committed, ordered a novena to be commenced in reparation. The church was visited by crowds during the course of yesterday, anxious to learn some further particulars respecting the outrage.—London Times.

ENGLAND.

THE Bishop of [illegible] has created a sensation by the assertion that England's worst sin of the present day is not drunkenness but impurity. On the other hand it is alleged that the use of opium and other narcotics is ruining thousands of English homes, its presence among ladies being unexpectedly large.

EXTRAORDINARY DISAPPEARANCE OF GIRLS.—Several cases of unexplained disappearance of young girls are reported from West Bromwich. One, while accompanying her parents home from a night service, stopped to speak to a friend, and has not been heard of since. A young woman named Harrison left her brother's house at Halesowen to seek a situation in Birmingham. Another girl named Hathaway left her situation at Handsworth. A fourth case is reported by an Irishwoman, who states that her daughter went out one evening recently, saying she would return shortly. In each of these cases, notwithstanding all enquiries, not the slightest clue to the whereabouts of the missing girls can be obtained.

THURSDAY, Jan. 29.—There is no change to note in the grain market. Several loads of spring wheat were taken for shipment at $1.15 @ $1.17, and fall wheat at $1.17 @ $1.18, with a noticeable weakness, and the prospect is a further fall in price. Lower prices are looked for in the English market to-morrow (Friday). Oats are firm at 33c. Peas are readily taken at 61c. Hay and wood are again abundant; no change in quotations. Clover seed has made another break owing to heavy receipts; we quote $3.50 @ $3.75.

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back lassitude, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated snuffing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose; in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first stages use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild purgative to remove the tightness across the forehead, etc. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. wid22-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

To be thoroughly happy you must be well. To be well in thousands of cases, you must take the great medicine, which relieves, regulates and renovates disorderly systems—Victoria Buchu Uva Ursi. For Bright's disease of the kidneys, diabetes, and all diseases of the primary system, its timely use is very beneficial. For sale by all dealers at $1 per bottle. w5d22-2w

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by railroads. Once again, a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "dose up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

Our food furnishes material for the growth and nourishment of the body by absorption and assimilation. In like manner Victoria Hypophosphites acts in the cure of disease. When swallowed, it is absorbed, taken up by the veins, and circulated through the system, with the blood, reaching the most hidden and remote parts. It is evident, therefore, that the whole system must feel the effects of the remedy. For sale by all dealers. w5d22-2w

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Parlor Social.

This evening Mrs. D. W. Dumble will throw open her house for a parlor social for the benefit of the George Street Methodist Church. We learn that an excellent programme has been arranged, and all who go will be welcomed.

Another Fire in Ennismore.

There was a second fire in Ennismore on Wednesday, by which Mr. John Shannon lost his barn and contents, including hay, straw, and most of his grain, as he had sold little this season. We understand he has an insurance of $600.

Leap Year.

A large number of young ladies, from Cobourg, Port Hope and other towns are here at present. Rumor says that as Peterborough young men are very shy and as this is leap year, the young ladies are going to take advantage of it, and bring certain young men to the front.

Fourth Ward Councillor.

At the nomination to-day of a Councillor for the Fourth Ward to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Sawers' resignation, Mr. Henry Denne nominated Mr. W. H. Robertson, and Mr. Griffiths seconded the nomination. At one o'clock, no other nomination having been made, the Deputy Returning-Officer declared that Mr. W. H. Robertson was elected Councillor.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Moderate to fresh northerly to easterly winds; partly cloudy colder weather. The weather in Peterborough has been clear and cold, with keen northerly to easterly winds. The thermometer indicated at 7 o'clock this morning 6° above zero, rising to 9° at 9 o'clock, and 14° at noon.

Bosco's Magic.

The attendance at Bradburn's Hall last evening was not so great as on the preceding evenings. The performance was a repetition of a few very clever tricks, with the addition of a hop. After the distribution of the prizes to ticket holders, a prize was awarded to Miss Maggie Reynolds as being the handsomest lady present. The prize for the best gentleman waltzer was awarded to Mr. Thos. A. Kennedy, and for the best lady waltzer to Miss Poulette.

Election of Officers.

Carswell Lodge, No. 411, I.O.G.T., at their meeting last evening, initiated five candidates and elected the following officers:—

D. Belleghem	W.C.T.
Miss Morrison	W.V.T.
David Moore	W.S.
James Lytle	W.F.S.
Wm. S. Cooks	W.T.
H. Stephens	W.M.
Miss Huffman	I.G.

Representatives to the County Lodge:—Messrs. Lytle, Cooks, King, Mrs. Glass, Miss Morrison and Miss Irwin.

57th Battalion Drill.

The three companies of the 57th battalion of Peterborough Rangers assembled last evening for battalion drill. Companies One and Three were out in their new uniforms, while Company No. Two, not having received theirs, turned out with their old uniforms and the new helmets. The three companies assembled in the Drill Shed at an early hour, and were put through the manual drill, after which they formed into a battalion for drill under the command of Col. J. Z. Rogers and Major Bell, the adjutant, and marched through George and other streets. The evening was a rough one for a march, but the men did not seem to mind it. Col. J. Z. Rogers and Major Bell were mounted. The Band turned out with the battalion, making the parade an attractive one to the spectators, who were numerous.

Mr. W. H. Scott, M.P.P.

The Examiner contains the following editorial note:—

"The Port Hope Times and Guide compliment Mr. Scott, M. P. P. The Times' Toronto despatch says:—"Universal regret is felt on both sides of the House at the absence of Mr. Scott on account of illness." The Guide editorially says:—"Mr. Scott is by far the ablest man on his side of the House." We regret very much that Mr. Scott is still detained by illness from the active discharge of his duties at Toronto, and it is hoped that his absence will not be prolonged. He is the only man on the Opposition side of the House who carries any weight in the deliberations of the Assembly, and in committees his services are freely acknowledged on both sides. His moderation in expression, and courteous regard for opponents, as well as his undoubted ability, makes Mr. Scott respected in the House."

After some remarks which we need not quote as to the other leaders, the Examiner speaks of the Opposition having "available the services of a man so vastly superior in every quality of leadership as Mr. Scott is," and concludes with congratulations on Mr. Scott being sufficiently recovered to attend to his legislative duties.

The Hall Poor Trust.

We reported that the case of Macdougall v. Poussette had been decided against St. Andrew's Church. The following is the account given by the Globe:—

"Some days ago a report was published in these columns of a dispute that had arisen in Peterborough concerning the trusteeship of the William Hall Protestant Poor Trust. The deed which created the trust directed that four out of the eight trustees of the fund should be chosen from the Presbyterian body, two from each church. Mr. Fairbairn ceased to be a member of St. Andrew's Church some time ago, and a demand was made on the Secretary of the Trust to notify the church that a vacancy had occurred, and to appoint a new trustee. Mr. Fairbairn still claimed the office, and a motion was made in the Queen's Bench for a mandamus to compel the Secretary to declare the position vacant. The matter was argued, and Chief Justice Wilson gave his judgment yesterday morning, refusing the mandamus and holding that no vacancy had yet occurred. He proceeded in his judgment chiefly upon the ground that the deed creating the trust did not absolutely declare that two trustees should be chosen from each of the Presbyterian churches, and the Act of incorporation was silent upon the matter. Mr. Fairbairn being still a member of the Presbyterian body, he was not therefore disqualified."

Good Templars' County Lodge.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Good Templars' County Lodge, No. 51, was held this (Thursday) afternoon, in the Orange Hall, Peterborough. The following lodges were represented:—Friendship, No. 146; Peterborough, No. 340; Carswell, No. 411, all of Peterborough; Nassau, Douro, Union Lodge, No. 51; Selwyn Lodge, Selwyn; Balsam Grove Lodge, Balsam Grove. Henderson Nesbitt, of Peterborough Lodge, W. County Templar, was in the chair, Mrs. Glass, of Carswell Lodge, acting as W. Vice Templar; Rev. J. Shaw, Grand W. Chief Templar of Ontario, Chaplain; Mr. Jos. Paul, Secretary; Theodore Braden, Marshal; Miss Morris, Inside Guard; and D. Pentland, Past Chief Templar. The usual formula of opening having been concluded, the minutes of the last County Temple were read. Reports from the different lodges showed that there had been a decided improvement in the work of all, and that a greater advancement had been made during the past quarter than in any previous quarter for many years. The Temple is still in session as we go to press.

Good Pressed Beef.

We recommend to our many new house-keeping readers the following, which has been partly given in former years:—Take any fresh, lean beef—the cheaper pieces, the upper part of the leg above the 'soup pieces,' answers very well; that containing tendons or plenty of gelatine is even preferable, and some of the round steak or any other lean portion may be used with it. Boil closely covered until so tender that the meat will fall from the bones. (It is better to keep a closely fitting pan of cold water over the cooking kettle, to condense and cause to fall back the rising steam containing the escaping flavor.) Use only so much water as is needed to prevent burning. Take out the meat, mix and chop it fine. Put it into a tin pan or other deep dish. Skim off any excess of grease from the cooking liquid, and add to it a tablespoonful of cooper's or other good gelatine for each three or four pounds of meat. When dissolved, pour it into the chopped meat; put on it a large plate or tin that will fit into the dish, and place upon this 12 or 20 pounds weight—flat-irons will answer. When cold, it is a solid mass, from which thick or thin slices may be cut, that are marbled in appearance, and are very excellent for sandwiches, or for a tea or breakfast dish, and it will keep for several days even in warm weather, if set in a cool place. It is tender, juicy, digestible, nourishing, convenient and economical withal.—American Agriculturist.

Socialist up to a Certain Point.

I was travelling in the South of France, after the revolution of February. I met one day a mayor of a village, proprietor of a metairie. "Sir," said he to me, "what do they mean down there at Paris by that word 'Communism?' It is some sluggard's business, is it not? So, at least, our curate says." "It is a system of partition," replied I, "invented once on a time by a dreamer." "What did he dream?" "That the man who has a million should share it with the Commune." His eye brightened. "Not a bad dream, either," said he. "But further," I resumed, "that the man who has 100,000 francs should abandon one-half to his neighbour." "Well, he would still have enough with the other half." "Then, that the man who has 50,000 francs should come down to 25,000 francs through a spirit of fraternity." The face of the mayor assumed a thoughtful tinge. "That may still do." "Lastly, that the man who possesses 25,000 francs——" "Twenty-five thousand francs!" he interrupted, springing up with a bound, "that's the value of my farm; let him who would have a vine-stock belonging to it come and seek it. He will see how I will receive him at the end of my musket!"—Ex.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

REPORTED DEATH OF MAHOMED JAN—RECOMMENCEMENT OF HOSTILITIES.

Determination of the Ghuznees to Fight for Yakoob Khan—An Advance on Herat—

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—A despatch from Calcutta says that the report of the death of Mahomed Jan is current at Cabul, and is generally believed to be true. Gen. Roberts anticipates that the native tribes will renew their attacks upon the British positions about the third week in February, and consequently steps have been taken to re-provision the depots and to provide additional quantity of munitions of war.

DETERMINED TO FIGHT FOR YAKOOB.

The Ghuznees have sent word to Gen. Roberts that they are determined to fight to the last extremity unless Yakoob Khan is reinstated as Ameer.

RECOMMENCEMENT OF OPERATIONS.

A Bombay despatch says it is generally believed an army corps will advance to Herat, and that the district will be transferred to Persia. All the officers belonging to the Cabul division now on leave are ordered to return to their command by March 15th, when operations throughout Afghanistan will commence.

THE CREDIT VALLEY RAILWAY.

Interview of the President with the Ottawa Government—"The Wolves and Sheep."

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—Mr. Geo. Laidlaw, President of the Credit Valley Railway, has had an interview with the Premier and several Ministers of the Crown in relation to the general railway system of the country. In the course of a conversation with a reporter,

MR. LAIDLAW said:—"I came here to tell her Majesty's Ministers that her Majesty's wolves were devouring her Majesty's sheep, and to represent that the Government should exercise their power, or get it from Parliament to protect the municipalities from the bitter disappointment that awaits them if the Grand Trunk or other great companies succeed in pooling, leasing, amalgamating or buying the local lines mainly subscribed and built to secure competition and fair treatment. If the Grand Trunk absorbed by degrees all the local railways of Canada, we shall all be mere serfs. I am going to Quebec, on my own responsibility, to see if the Premier of Quebec will co-operate in securing absolutely that no stock-jobbing or other action of the proprietary of the interior line of communication which should extend from Quebec, via Ottawa, to connect at Toronto with all the independent lines which there converge, would ever be allowed to be anything else than an independent through competitive route, and remain subject to Government control in that respect. Such a line would be worth a million dollars to Montreal and Quebec, and twice as much to the Province of Ontario, the Great Western, and all the independent lines which converge at Toronto. It would emancipate the country from the Grand Trunk. It is now for the city of Toronto to take steps to have the title to its property confirmed, and receive its value or its rent. The City and County Councils should formulate their views, and through their members transmit them to the Secretary of State. Their influence will be necessary in Parliament. The Credit Valley bill is prepared. I could not have expected a more appreciative reception from the Premier and the Government than I received."—Mail.

Canadian Wheat in France.

The Bulletin des Halles, a commercial paper published in Paris, says that, "for the first time, the white wheats of Canada, the products of the Province of Ontario, have burst upon the French markets. Until now we have known only the Michigan wheat. However, it is proved that the products of Ontario are without superiors, or at least as good as the wheats of Michigan, and there is no doubt that for the future the wheats of the Province of Ontario, of which the Valley of Toronto is the grand centre of production, will play a part at least as important as that of Michigan upon the European markets."

Warmth and Energy.

In ancient times energy of mind and strength of body were supposed to be the effects of warmth, while depression of spirits or bodily weakness were ascribed to cold. Modern science has explained and modified these theories concerning the production of physical and psychical force, but in the main it has confirmed the principals of causation. In a general sense, it may be said that animal heat, when duly generated within normal limits, is the concomitant of vigor. Pratically, therefore, warmth is to be sought and cold avoided; but with this qualification, that the heat must be elicited by organic processes going on within the body, and not borrowed from without. The chief, if not the only use of wraps and "warm" surroundings is to avoid the loss of animal heat by abstraction. It is neither scientific nor hygienic, in any true sense, to trust to external sources of supply for the warmth we require to live well, happily and usefully. The food is more than the raiment, and those who desire to help the poor and melancholy over their "dead points" in the course of life should be chiefly anxious to feed them well and sufficiently. So in the management of self—to live well is to feed appropriately. Stimulants do not give strength, because they cannot add to the normal and healthy sources of animal heat. Nutriment is the only true fuel. This fact cannot be too often or too strongly urged on public attention.—Lancet.

St. John's Church Bazaar.

A bazaar will be held in Bradburn's Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 3rd and 4th, in aid of the building fund of St. John's Church Sunday School. Most of the articles offered for sale will be of a useful character, so that purchasers will obtain a better return for their money than is usually the case. Meals will be served in the hall during the day and in the evening. 2d-1w

CANADIAN TELEGRAMS.

QUEBEC.

Special to the Review, Jan. 30.

LUMBER BOOMING.—The Chronicle, under the heading of "Lumber still booming," says encouraging reports of the lumber trade continue to reach us. We learn that one firm has effected a sale in eastern Europe at very good prices of 500,000 deals, 400,000 spruce, and 10,000 pine, and expect to load below during the coming season fully 30 vessels for European markets. Another firm have sold the whole of their old and new stocks, and expect to load 15 vessels of the spring fleet.

HALIFAX.

Special to the Review, Jan. 30.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The special train on which were the Governor-General and his staff, arrived here at 11 o'clock this morning. Large crowds had gathered at the station. A salute of 19 guns was fired from the Citadel on the arrival of the train. The Guard of Honor at the station was composed of men from the 101st Regiment, Royal Bengal Fusiliers. The Governor-General proceeded immediately after his arrival to Government House, where he was met by a Guard of Honor from the 97th Regiment.

DESERT VILLAGE, QUE.

Special to the Review, Jan. 30.

MURDERED FOR HIS FURS.—An Indian named Wabamoos, from the scene of the murder, arrived at Desert last Monday. He corroborates the reports already published. He states that after the murder, Brisbois requested his (Wabamoos') son to inter the body. A special constable and Wabamoos with a team started yesterday to bring down the remains of the murdered man. Brisbois told young Wabamoos that Hennessy attacked him with a knife before he killed him. This statement is discredited. Wabamoos believes that Hennessy was murdered for his furs.

RELIEF FOR IRELAND.—A general collection is being made at every house in the city for the Irish Relief Fund. The collectors are meeting with success.

TEMPERANCE ADDRESS.—Sir Leonard Tilley will address a temperance meeting here to-night.

PARNELL'S VISIT POSTPONED.—Mr. Parnell's visit to this city has been postponed sine die. It is asserted by a morning paper that, owing to a strong feeling here on the part of the public against his visit, he will not come at all. Several presidents of national societies have stated that they will not join in his reception.

THE ICE RAILROAD.—The first engine crossed over the ice bridge at twelve o'clock to-day.

OTTAWA.

Special to the Review, Jan. 30.

RELIEF FOR IRELAND.—A movement is on foot to get the members of the Civil Service to contribute each a day's pay for the relief of the poor in Ireland. Yesterday Mr. S. Smith sent a money order for £20 sterling to the nuns of Kenmare for the relief of the distress in Ireland, being the result of the recent entertainment in St. James' Hall.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—There has been a very large number of American lumber dealers in the city for the past few days with a view to making purchases. Owing to the recent heavy rise in the Michigan market, Ottawa offers the best inducement to buyers. Sales, so far as reported, amount to about two million feet, all of which will be shipped immediately.

RIFLING HEAVY GUNS.—The military authorities have commenced shipping the heavy cannon to the foundry at Montreal, to be converted into rifled guns. A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

ITALIAN INTERESTS.

ROME, Jan. 29.—A Rome despatch says that, in view of the critical position of Italian interests in South America, the Government will send two men-of-war for their protection, if the consular reports warrant it.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—A fire damp explosion has occurred in a colliery at Meissen, Saxony. Ten dead and wounded have been taken out. It is believed five corpses are still in the pit.

A FLAT DENIAL.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the New York Herald:—

"Mr. Parnell's repeated statements that the Duchess of Marlborough's Relief Fund only relieves tenants who have paid their rent, and that it has political objects, are gross falsehoods.

(LORD) RANDOLPH CHURCHILL,
JAMES MEREDITH,
Honorary Secretaries of the Marlborough Relief Fund."

HER GRACE CONFIRMS THE DENIAL.

The Duchess of Marlborough characterizes Mr. Parnell's statements that the fund which bears her name only relieves the tenants who have paid their rent, and that its promoters have political objects, as gross falsehoods.

THE DUBLIN MANSION HOUSE FUND

DUBLIN, Jan. 29.—The total subscription to the Dublin Mansion House Fund is £29,000. Forty-nine grants, amounting to £180, were made to-day. The distress is increasing. A deputation from Liverpool is here to advise upon the best means of distributing the fund organized there.

AN EVICTED TENANT REINSTATED.

The people of Ballyhannis, which was the scene of the recent anti-rent demonstrations, assembled in force to re-build the hut from which the tenant was ejected a few days since, and despite the efforts of the constabulary, who tried to prevent them, succeeded in reinstating its former occupant.

OPINIONS OF THE RUSSIAN PRESS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 29.—The Journal de St. Petersburg does not consider the German army bill implies departure from a peaceful policy. The Moscow Gazette and Novoe Vremya think the bill is exclusively directed against France. The Gazette de St. Petersburg believes Russia alone is menaced, while the Golos holds Poland is the bone of contention.

FENIANS ON THE MOVE IN CHESTER

LONDON, Jan. 29.—An extensive robbery of arms and ammunition from gunsmith's shops has been accomplished at Chester. The police assert that the robbery was committed by agents of the Fenian Association, a body which has a very numerous membership in Chester. It is remembered that almost the first organized attempt of the Fenians was made at Chester, when they sought to carry out a plot for the capture of Chester Castle some years ago.

CONFLAGRATION IN DUBLIN.

DUBLIN, Jan. 29.—A fire broke out in a biscuit factory to-night, and is raging violently. The flames are spreading rapidly. The damage already reaches £50,000.

DEFENSIVE OR OFFENSIVE.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—The Russian papers announce that Gen. Tergukhasoff has gone to Tiflis to participate in a council of war to decide whether the Turcoman campaign shall be of a defensive or offensive character.

A STRAW.

PARIS, Jan. 29.—It is asserted that several German subjects employed in the Temple and Antoine quarters, in Paris, have been summoned back to Germany and have left Paris.

LOSS OF A RUSSIAN TRANSPORT.

ODESSA, Jan. 29.—An Odessa despatch says it is rumoured here that a Russian transport having on board 2,000 troops recently embarked at Astrakan and bound for Tchikishlar, has been caught in a heavy gale and completely wrecked in the Caspian Sea. It is stated a majority of the troops, if not the entire force, are known to have perished. It is understood they were on the way to reinforce Gen. Kauffman's expedition, which is to march to Merv, en route to Herat in the spring. Enquiries concerning the disaster directed to the war office at St. Petersburg have thus far failed to elicit further particulars.

THE FRENCH SENATE.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A Paris despatch says a coalition of moderate Republicans with the Conservatives yesterday elected Leon Say to the Presidency of the Senate Finance Committee, over Calmona, Vice-President of the Senate, the regular Republican candidate. On the Senate proceeding to elect a life Senator vice Count de Montaliver, recently deceased, the Extreme Left, whose turn it was to make the nomination, selected Dr. Paul Broca, the eminent anthropologist. Dufaure, a Republican life Senator, with twelve or fourteen followers, who have practically ceased to belong to the Left Centre, and must henceforth rank as a distinct group, midway between the Left and Right Centres opposed Broca on the ground of his Darwinian tendencies. They nominated Bertoland, a well known advocate and Republican, but opposed to the anti-Jesuit clause of Ferry's education bill. Broca received 136 votes, and Bertoland 118, scattering 12, Broca receiving 3 less than the absolute majority. The election was postponed. More than a hundred Senators of the Right Centre supported Bertoland. It is manifested that if the Dufaure group gains a few accessions through alarm at the radicalism of the Chamber of Deputies it will be able to hold the balance power. The rejection of clause 7 of the education bill is now considered certain.

AFTERNOON TELEGRAMS

Press Despatches to the Review via Cable and Montreal Lines.

THE PESTH RIOTS.

VIENNA, Jan. 30.—The Lower House of the Hungarian Diet, by an overwhelming majority, approved the explanations of Herr Tisza concerning the course of the Government during the recent riots at Pesth, growing out of the duel between Baron Maithenyi and Herr Verhovay.

PARNELL'S VISIT.

PARIS, Jan. 30.—Le Monde, the organ of the Papal Nuncio, referring to the mission of Parnell to the United States, says:—"By the mouth of a Protestant, Catholic Ireland calls Protestant England to account. Whosoever outrages justice paves the way for a terrible expiation."

A NOTORIOUS COMMUNIST.

FLORENCE, Jan. 30.—Bruneran, the notorious colonel under the Paris Commune, died recently in this city.

BISMARCK AND THE POPE.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A Berlin despatch says that Bismarck is determined to demand directly from the Pope, what are really the grievances of the Church which prevent the establishment of a solid peace. When the answer is received the Minister of Ecclesiastical Affairs will draft a bill abolishing the severest clauses of the May laws.

THE GERMAN ARMY.

The strength of the German army on the peace footing is 17,220 officers and 401,659 men. This does not include the projected increase, which, it is reported, is chiefly destined to reinforce the Alsace-Loraine garrison.

AMERICAN.

ICEBOUND VESSELS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The Herald's San Francisco report says that the Secretary of War has been petitioned to send a Government vessel to the relief of two whalers, which, with the Arctic steamer Jeannette, are said to be icebound in the Arctic Ocean. The Herald thinks there is but little cause for apprehension.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The Times' Raleigh despatch says the North Carolina Republican State Committee met yesterday. Grandy, an outspoken Sherman man, was elected chairman, and by a vote of 6 to 4 Sherman delegates at large to Chicago were elected. There is strong talk of calling a State Convention and sending another delegation to Chicago.

A DETERMINED SUICIDE.

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 30.—Mrs. Erastus Smith, the wife of a wealthy liquor merchant at Hyde Park, shot herself through the heart last evening, deliberately baring her breast to make sure her aim. No cause is assigned.

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

WHITEHALL, Pa., Jan. 30.—A girl named Shaeffer, aged 6, on her way to school accompanied by a little boy, yesterday caught her foot between the planks on a railway crossing. The boy vainly tried to extricate her. Seeing her danger she lay down across the rail, when the train came along, cutting off both her legs. She died in a few minutes.

RAILWAY AND STEAMERS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The Times says the contract relating to passenger and freight rates between the Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Union Pacific Railway terminated in May last. The steamship company has formally declared war against the railway company, and yesterday determined to reduce freight and passenger rates and begin active competition. Passenger rates are to be reduced to $75 for a cabin passage from New York to San Francisco, and freight rates are to be reduced one-third to one-half below the present tariff.

A CHARITY BALL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The great charity ball last night netted from $8,000 to $10,000 for the benefit of the nursery and child's hospital.

TERRIBLE SUICIDE.

FREDERICK, Md., Jan. 30.—John H. Toper, a prosperous farmer, deliberately threw himself before a freight train on Wednesday evening, and was instantly killed. No cause is assigned.

A TERRIBLE KICK.

FLEMINGTON, N.J., Jan. 30.—The Rev. W. Laning, of Cherryville, was kicked by his horse a few days ago and his face was crushed in. His condition is critical.

WHITE AND BLACK LABOR.

WOODSTOCK, Va. Jan. 30.—The riot at Liberty furnace ended by the discharge of the negro workmen, who were anxious to get away. The whites then disbanded.

VIRGINIA THE ARBITER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The Herald's despatch from Richmond, Va., says that Senator Mahone favours a readjusters' State Convention placing independent electors in the field and casting the electoral vote of Virginia as seemed best for her interests, regardless of party. Such a plan might make Virginia the arbiter of the next presidency.

INTO A SHARK'S JAWS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Charles Byerly, a passenger on the Havana steamer Saratoga, which sailed hence on January 17, jumped overboard and disappeared. The water was discolored with blood, and it is believed that he was snapped up by a shark.

SUPPOSED BOGUS SALE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The Times says there is talk of investigating yesterday's sale of Central Pacific stock. The Times doubts if Gould or the other members of the Syndicate parted with a single share.

INDIAN CONTRACTS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says that Hoyt's removal was a great surprise except to a few. It is generally approved in official circles. Hoyt made few friends and many enemies since he has been in office. There are many expressions of opinion that the Board of Indian Commissioners has at last vindicated its right to exist. Barstow, the Chairman of the Board, has, however, been friendly to Hoyt, and in answer to a personal accusation, Barstow has written a long letter, admitting that he has been interested in Indian contracts.

Daily Evening Review

FRIDAY, JANUARY 30, 1880.

THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA BY-LAW.

The County Council has submitted a new by-law, (published in another column) for a bonus in aid of the Toronto and Ottawa railway. They have not only waived the necessity for raising the million dollars of municipal aid, the voting of which was to be indispensable, but they have made other less important changes with a view to enabling the company to begin the work of construction at an early date. Thus the County is prepared to support an enterprise which originated among us, and which has since secured the favour of the other municipalities along the route, in spite of the vigorous opposition of a competitor striving to maintain a gigantic monopoly, and of its interested advocates.

THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

Whatever excuse may be offered for the small amount of work performed during the three weeks which the Legislature has been sitting in Toronto, no good and sufficient excuse can be offered for the statement which appeared in the Globe of Thursday last, that "the Public Accounts Committee began its researches yesterday into the items of 1878."

As we have again and again pointed out in these columns this Public Accounts Committee is the only shadow of a check exercised by the Legislature over the expenditure of the Ontario Government. There is, it is true, an auditor, but his duties are rather of a book-keeping character than anything else—and not very efficient in that respect, as evidenced by the fact that the public moneys have been paid out without even the formality of an Order in Council, that Government bank accounts have been overdrawn for years without anybody knowing anything about it, and that discrepancies can easily be shown to exist in the Public Accounts themselves. Under such circumstances it can scarcely be denied that for the Public Accounts Committee of the Ontario Legislature to be other than assiduous and thorough in the performance of its duties, is to offer a premium for extravagance and waste, if nothing worse, of the public money. And yet the House has been in session three weeks, and this important committee is only commencing its researches into the Public Accounts of 1878! Why is this thus? Why all this delay? As soon as the committee was organized it was ready for work; its members have not thus far been otherwise engaged during the early part of the day; the Public Accounts of 1878 were certainly ready for their investigation! Why then, again we ask, all this unnecessary delay? Why is work that ought to be done, and can be done, postponed until other matters claim and divide the attention of the members of this committee? Why has not the chairman, who is the nominee of the Government, called the committee together? Why have not the majority of its members, who are chiefly supporters of the Government, insisted upon going on with the work instead of allowing day after day to be frittered away without anything being done? Why, again we ask, is all this thus, unless the Government, the chairman or the members of the committee have miserably failed in their duty?

NORWOOD.

Obituary.—The Register says:—The many friends of Jas. S. Fowlds, Esq., (Reeve of the Village of Hastings) will regret to learn of the demise of his wife, which sad event took place on Monday last at the family residence in that village. The deceased lady, who was in her 53nd year, was highly esteemed both in her own and in this community, and the large funeral procession which escorted her remains to their last resting place on Tuesday afternoon, testified to the respect she was held in during her life time. Mrs. Fowlds was a cousin of Mrs. W. E. Roxburgh, of Norwood.

Sitting Bull Destitute.

Fort Benton, Montana, Jan. 29.—Iron Pipe, Chief of the Gros Ventres, arrived with twelve lodges of Gros Ventres on Wednesday night. He reports that Sitting Bull, with 600 lodges, is encamped on the big bend of Milk River, moving southward, very destitute, having suffered untold misery this winter from hunger. They were forced to follow the buffalos towards the South to procure food. Sitting Bull solemnly declares that if allowed to hunt on this side he will be friendly to the whites, but if his people are molested he will fight.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

A NEW BY-LAW SUBMITTED FOR GRANTING AID TO THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

Maintaining the Lakefield Dam—An Appeal From the Collegiate Institute—Establishing Roads—A Town and County Dispute.

THURSDAY.

THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY BY-LAW.

After again spending some time in committee on the Toronto and Ottawa Railway By-law the Committee rose and reported the By-law with amendments.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rork,—That the by-law be read a second time as amended.—Carried without a division.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Golborne,—That the Clerk be and is hereby authorized to publish the by-law to change the conditions of the By-law No. 439, passed on the 11th day of November, 1875, granting aid by way of bonus to the Huron and Quebec Railway Company, now the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, to be published for three successive weeks in the Peterborough Review, Norwood Register, and Peterborough Examiner.—Carried.

TRAMPS.

The Warden read a telegram from the Warden of the county of Bruce, asking this Council to co-operate with that Council in procuring amendments to the laws in reference to tramps.

LAKEFIELD DAM.

Moved by Mr. Golborne, seconded by Mr. Kidd,—That whereas, it is understood that an order of the Court of Chancery has lately been issued to require the Lakefield dam to be lowered 11 inches below its present height; and whereas, such action would absolutely prevent navigation of the waters between Lakefield and Young's Point, this Council memorialize the Ontario Government to take charge of the said dam with a view of sustaining the navigation; and that this Council appoint a deputation to go to Toronto to present the same, and that the Warden name a committee to draft such memorial.—Carried.

The Warden named Messrs. Strickland, Oliver, Stewart and Golborne such committee.

ESTABLISHING ROADS.

On motion of Mr. Burgess, seconded by Mr. Golborne, a resolution was passed confirming a by-law of the united townships of Belmont and Methuen, establishing a road between Lots 28 and 29, in the 4th Con. of the latter township, and the corporate seal attached to the same.

On motion of Mr. Kidd, a similar resolution was passed confirming the establishment of a road across Lot No. 13, in the 7th Con. of Dummer.

THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, Messrs. Stevenson, Dumble and Jeffers addressed the Council in reference to the claims of the Collegiate Institute in Peterborough on the county, and the large amount of work done by the Institute for the county.

The application was referred to the Finance Committee.

THOSE CEDARS.

The Warden read a letter from the Mayor of Peterborough with reference to the cedar dispute between the town and county, and recommended that the county join in referring the whole matter to Mr. John Carnegie.

On motion of Mr. Kidd, a motion was passed referring the matter to Mr. Carnegie.

On motion of Mr. Collins, a by-law was passed confirming the report of the Committee on Appointments.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, the Clerk was instructed to get the assessment and collector's rolls for a number of years bound in large volumes for each municipality.

The Council then adjourned.

THE COUNTY LODGE, I. O. G. T.

After the reports of the lodges had been read and discussed, as we reported in our last issue, the Rev. J. Shaw, Grand Templar, addressed the lodge at some length, suggesting that a more determined individual effort should characterize the work of the order instead of lecturing by paid lecturers. He also advocated the return of a portion of the Grand Lodge tax to the County Lodge, to aid it in the prosecution of its labours. He congratulated the County Lodges on the favorable reports made by the representatives of the several lodges in the districts. It was most encouraging to the friends of the cause.

Mr. D. Pentland spoke on the question of the suspension of members in subordinate lodges for the non-payment of dues, suggesting the propriety of having the matter brought to the attention of the Grand Lodge at its next annual session. He also spoke of the burden imposed on the town lodges by means of taxes, while the country lodges were free from such a burden. The taxing of philanthropic or benevolent societies, he said, was a pernicious practice, and tended to cripple their usefulness in the community. He thought some action should be taken to bring this matter to the attention of the Council. Nothing, however, was proposed to be done at present, and the matter dropped.

The election of officers for the present year was then proceeded with, resulting as follows:

H. Nesbitt, of Peterborough Lodge	W.C.T.
Miss Mollie Reid, of Nassau Lodge	W.V.T.
Joseph Paul, of Union Lodge	W.S.
W. Graham, of Union Lodge	W.T.
John Campbell, of Nassau Lodge	W.C.
Robt. Boyden, of Selwyn Lodge	W.M.
Miss Mary Bell, of Selwyn Lodge	W.D.M.
Miss Mary Bennett, of Balsam Grove	W.I.G.
T. Brown, of Peterborough Lodge	W.O.G.
Mrs. J. Mowry, of Peterborough Lodge	R.H.S.
Miss Douglass, of Carswell Lodge	L.H.S.

It was resolved that when the County Lodge adjourned it should be to meet on the third Thursday in June, at Nassau Lodge.

The Grand W. Chief Templar proceeded to install the newly elected officers, assisted by M. A. Young, of Union Lodge, No. 51, as Grand Marshall.

The question of submitting the Scott Act to the people of this county was freely discussed, but no action was taken, and there being no further business before the body, the lodge proceeded with the closing exercises. The meeting was largely attended and much interest was manifested in its proceedings.

GOSSIP ABOUT JOCKEYS.

Among the many systems by which backers of racehorses lose their money with cheerful regularity there is none more infallible than that which consists in "following" certain jockeys; that is to say, in backing whatever horse he may ride irrespective of its previous performance, and of the odds at which its starts. The popular jockey for the last five or six years has been Archer, who first came into repute when Lord Falmouth put him up to ride Atlantic for the Two Thousand Guineas of 1874, and who since that time has won upwards of eleven hundred races, which is more than any jockey of past times or present has secured in so brief a space. This year Archer has not done quite so well as in 1878, when with 229 winning mounts he outdid the best performance of Fordham and Jimmy Grimshaw in the plunging days of yore. Increasing weight prevents him from riding as often as he did two or three seasons ago, and Archer is not likely to keep long under the 8st, which has this season compelled Custance, after a long and honourable career, to send in his cap and jacket to the Duke of Hamilton. Archer, however, has come very near to winning the bet which he made about reaching a total of 200, and with 199 successive mounts, including Charibert in the Two Thousand Guineas, Wheel-of-Fortune in her four victories at Newmarket, Epsom, Ascot, and York, and Parole in the two handicaps at Epsom, he is a long way ahead of C. Wood, his nearest rival, who has ridden 458 times against 570 of Archer, and who has only 89 brackets to boast of. Tom Cannon, with 58 victories out of a possible 320, has done well with Prince Soltykoff's horses, and still better with those of Mr. Gretton, for whom he has won all the Cup races upon that gallant horse Isonomy, and there are few more finished horsemen than he is; while the two next—Luke and Fagan—with 68 wins out of 389 and 49 out of 255 belong the one to the youthful, and both of the light-weighted division of jockeys. Fordham, who seems to have lost none of his nerve since he donned silk after a retirement of three or four seasons, has ridden 244 times this year, and though he has only won 47 races, these races include the Derby, which he had never won before, and the Middle Park Plate, in which his handling of Beaudesert was a "treat for sore eyes." Lord Rosebery's colours have been carried to victory by Constable in several good races, such as the Lincolnshire Handicap and the Cambridgeshire Stakes, and that jockey would have had more than 45 winning mounts if he had been able to ride all the season. John Osborne, who is with Tom Chaloner the oldest jockey still in the saddle, has generally about the same average, and with 44 wins out of 210 mounts, he just beats another jockey of the old school, James Goater, who has been successful 41 times for the same number of mounts; but who can boast a better record than Osborne as he rode Rayon d'Or for the St. Leger and all his other engagements, Insulaire for the Alexandra Plate, and the unbeaten two year old Oceanie, in the colors of Comte de Lagrange? Snowden is a north-country jockey, like Osborne and Chaloner, and he has 41 wins to his credit and has only ridden 201 races to secure them. Chaloner himself is very low down on the list, having won only six races out of 81 attempts, and it is not likely that we shall see him again witching the world with such noble horsemanship as when, pitted against his rival Fordham, he "did him a head" on the post for the St. Leger of 1862 and for the Derby of 1863, Marquis and Macaroni beating Buckstone and Lord Clifden on those most memorable occasions.—Daily News.

An Art Find.—A German engineer has discovered on the site of ancient Pergamos (now Bergama), in Asiatic Turkey, over two hundred statues and pieces of sculpture belonging to the best period of Greek art. These works are mainly from a temple to Athena on the site of the Acropolis. They include the altar, a colossal Laocoon, figures of Eros, of two reclining females, of many Roman ladies, of satyrs and tritons, together with a highly ornamental frieze and base of a pedestal supporting a statute of Zeus, and adorned with representations of the deities of the elements.

IRELAND.

Rambles Through the Heart of the Distressed Country—Fair Prospects Blighted by Usury and Demagogues.

DUBLIN, Jan. 2, 1880.—In accordance with instructions I have during the past four weeks spent my time among the lowly of the west of Ireland, visiting their hovels, partaking of their hospitality, conversing with tenants, trying to find out their individual situation, their complaints and prospects. Of their hospitality, it is superfluous to say to those who know the traits of Irish character that I was given the best; but the best was not always palatable to even a hungry soul. I ate their potatoes, which were always small and frequently diseased to the core; indeed, a friend who was with me one day at a wayside cottage said he ate them with misgivings, for they looked like the potatoes of the terrible famine years. Milk, too, we had, but it was thin and watery. Several times, at the door of a miserable hovel, I have been told there was only meal in the house, and a neighbor has informed me that yellow meal once a day was all this unfortunate family had for weeks and would have for months to come. I am bound to say, however, that at many seemingly wretched cots I was offered the best four shilling tea; and Hennessy's brandy could often be had for the asking. Regarding fuel, I believe there has been some exaggeration as to its scarcity. Bad it certainly is generally—damp and giving out much less heat than usual. In some districts it is worse than others, and in these places coal will certainly be needed to burn with the bad turf. But in other places it is almost as good as ever. A good criterion should be the price, and wherever I enquired in Sligo, Castlebar, Westport, Louisburg, Clifden, the most distressed districts, I found the price the same as last year to a half-penny, and it is even cheaper than it was three years ago. But it is only necessary to look at some of the bogs in the west of Ireland to see that a large quantity of the turf is very bad. But it must be remembered that it is only necessary that the turf should last until March, when the next year's crop will begin to be available. Therefore it seems to be the general opinion that the greatest difficulty will not be the want of fuel.

WHERE THE SHOE PINCHES.

The chief question, I judge from conversations with tenants, with agents and others, is to be the scarcity of food—and particularly of potatoes. While in many districts there are plenty and nearly of the usual quality, in others there are none at all, and in many places there is only half a crop. From actual experience I can testify that they are bad-flavoured, small and frequently diseased. Passing through Castlebar one market day I heard a shrill voice crying:—"Fine potatoes! fine large potatoes!" Turning to the cart in which the marketwoman's crop lay, I examined them curiously to see what she called fine potatoes and saw a quantity of miserable poteens, not larger than marbles and equally unpalatable. Questioning the woman I found she was a widow with four children, and was selling her own stock of potatoes in order to buy the other necessaries of life. She thought her potatoes would last for six weeks more and then, as she was in debt about seven pounds and had no money whatever to buy meal with, her only chance was the workhouse, and with set teeth she said she would never enter that accursed place. I found ample confirmation of this old tradition—the hatred of the tenant farmers and laborers against the workhouse. They would sooner starve than take advantage of its protection, and as this is so, it seems singular that the poor law should be framed in direct defiance to the sentiment and even to the wants of the people. The workhouse at Castlebar will accommodate 734 persons and the Westport workhouse over 1,100. In the first named there were, when I called, 134 inmates, only two more than during the corresponding week of the previous year. In the Westport workhouse there were about 160, an increase of some twenty-five. All of these are children or sick persons, and no provision is made for the relief of those who are not ill and yet want food, because under the poor law the authorities may not assist able-bodied persons outside while there is room for them within, and by comparing the above figures, showing the number which may be accommodated and the number which are actually accommodated, it will be seen that the law is practically inoperative so far as the present distress is concerned.

DELVING FOR FACTS.

A stranger in Ireland, and even a native, has great difficulty in arriving at the exact facts concerning the actual amount of present or probable distress. In one town, in Mayo, the clerk of the Poor Union told me that turf was most plentiful and that potatoes were as cheap and good as last year. A parish priest in the same town told me, on the other hand, that what was to become of the people he could not tell, for potatoes and turf were an utter failure. Both of these men had equally good opportunities of judging of the condition of the poor about them; yet their stories differed entirely. Going to a third man, a landlord's agent, he said he believed the truth to be between the two extremes, so that I had three stories to choose from. It is equally hard to get the actual facts from the farmers, and the task is not made easier by the agitators.

"You should have seen the farmers' look when we first told them that the land did not rightfully belong to the landlords," I heard a leading agitator say last week. "Their eyes stuck out like pegs, but now they are thoroughly imbued with the idea and talk as glibly as possible."

AMONG THE HOVELS.

And so I found it. Riding through a patch of about half a dozen wretched hovels a little north of Westport I called out to a brawny-looking farmer standing against the doorpost smoking a clay pipe, and the following conversation took place:

"Well, how are you in this part of the country?"

"Very poorly, sir."

"How large is your holding?"

"Twelve acres."

"How much do you pay?"

"Twelve and six an acre."

"Have you paid your rent?"

"No, and shall not, unless I get a reduction."

"How many potatoes have you?"

"Not half a crop."

"Do you expect to be in want?"

No answer.

"Now, don't you really think you will get through the winter all right?"

"Ireland is in a bad state, sir."

"Yes, I know, but you have enough to eat, have you not?"

"Oh, we get along, but the landlords are very hard and the rents are great deal above the valuation," &c., and then I was treated to a speech on the land question much like that I had heard the previous Sunday at an agitation meeting. One could not help feeling frequently pained at the parrot like way in which many of these men repeated the glib phrases of demagogues.

GATHERING THE RENTS.

I was one day present when the agent of a very large estate in Mayo was calling upon a gathering of the tenants to pay the rent.

"Out with it!" said he; "you know you have it in your pockets!"

The men hung their heads but did not pay.

"Why," said one of them to me, afterward, "should we pay when there is a chance of getting five shillings off on the pound! We'll pay when we have to, and not before," and he went off chuckling to himself.

There are many such, but they are generally brought to terms if the landlord be determined not to reduce the rents. It is a curious fact, however, that those who make the most demonstration against the payments of rent are those who are best able to pay them, and those who pay most promptly are frequently the poorest. Take the case of the Widow Murray, on Sir Roger Palmer's estate. I was on her little holding of three acres, for which she paid £1 a year. Before her door were the smouldering remains of what had been £12 worth of oats and straw burned by her fellow-tenants because she had paid contrary to their order—had paid her half year's rent, ten shillings.

BORROWING MONEY IN IRELAND.

I was not long among the tenant farmers before I began to discover the terrible extent to which the credit system had been carried. I had heard ominous hints of the evil from business men and had seen passing references to it in the newspapers, but I did not realise the importance of this system in connection with the present distress until I went among the people themselves, and, indeed, I believe the subject has not been sufficiently considered by any one yet. I unhesitatingly aver that the credit system is equally responsible with bad land laws and bad crops for the present debased and demoralized condition of the Irish peasants. More money is to-day owed to shopkeepers and money-lenders than to landlords, and it is certain that if the farmers pay one they cannot pay the other. They are, therefore, in a state of total bankruptcy, and the task of extricating them seems most hopeless. The credit system has been chiefly taken advantage of by the farmers during the past eight or ten years, and the money-lenders and shopkeepers' field of operations has gradually enlarged up to the present year. Shopkeepers would give the poor small farmer almost unlimited credit, and of course charge the most exorbitant prices; money-lenders, or "gombeen men," as they are known in the West, sprang up in every town, and encouraged the pinched and unfortunate peasant to borrow money at thirty, forty, fifty, and even as high as sixty per cent. I encountered myself a case where a small farmer had borrowed at the last-mentioned rate, and I am told it was not an uncommon occurrence. Then there were established in all the leading towns branches of metropolitan banks, which for many years thrived on fat interest. All that was asked by banks or "gombeen men" was a bill, with the names of three other farmers on it for security.

USURY AT WORK.

The money-lenders thrived and shopkeepers laid the foundation of fortunes, while the poor Irish peasant was being encouraged to borrow money he did not need to buy finery inappropriate to thrifty farmers' wives and daughters, to stock his larder with four shilling tea and fine brandy, and to gradually bind himself body and soul to those who cared less for him than his landlord. It had been hoped on the establishment of the banks that the gombeen men would be obliged to retire; but it made no difference with them, because the banks were very prompt in exacting payment of bills, and would issue a process if the payment was not immediately forthcoming, while the money-lender would extend his customer's bill and otherwise treat him leniently, always charging a usurious rate of interest, however, for the favor. This is not a fancy sketch. I heard it over and over again and confirmed it from the mouths of tenants themselves. Of 210 tenants whom I visited in various parts of the distressed districts, 200 of them were in debt from £2 to £20. There is no doubt that shopkeepers were last year of positive benefit to the farmers, because the crops were quite as bad as they are this year, and it was only by the credit given for food and necessaries that the crisis was not long ago precipitated. But now the shopkeeper has become cautious.

CREDIT WITH THE SHOPKEEPER.

The halcyon days of unlimited credit are passed; the system has collapsed, and shopkeepers demand cash payments, while nothing but the most substantial security will extract a farthing from the bank or a gombeen man. It is a fact that more processes are taken out every week by shopmen and money-lenders in the distressed districts of Ireland than by landlords against tenants. I know of one man at Ballaghalleen who has issued 700 processes within a short time. Yet at a meeting at this very place, among many others, the agitators advised the tenants to pay the shopkeepers, because they were the farmer's friends. The truth is that a majority of shopkeepers are small landlords, and notoriously mean ones. Only yesterday the Dublin papers contained accounts of two evictions under exceptionally pathetic circumstances, in which shopkeepers were the evicting landlords. These facts need no embellishment. They show how selfish is the advice of the demagogues now stumping the country, and they give vivid color to the opinion expressed by a gentleman who is an experienced student of the Irish peasantry—that if there was a peasant proprietary to-morrow the bulk of the land would be in the hands of money-lenders in ten years.

FENIANISM AND PARNELLISM.

Going deep into the western country one hears much of Fenianism and secret organization. That it exists there is not the slightest doubt. I have heard of it through priests, through the police and through peasants themselves. An outbreak is not at all feared, but no exertion is spared to keep the government thoroughly aware of the movements of uneasy, restless spirits, and of every indication of organization. Not a train arrives or departs from any town in the West of Ireland that is not watched by spies or members of the constabulary. Every stranger is reported at headquarters—particularly Americans—and the name and description of every known or suspected Fenian is in the possession of the constabulary. I made many enquiries among the farmers about the reports of a rising, but they all shook their heads at the idea.

"We will," said a very intelligent farmer, "do our best to save our rent, and why should we not when the Queen's members of Parliament come down here and tell us not to pay? We will agitate, but we will never rebel—never." This I found to be a fixed notion in their heads, but it is impossible to predict what may be effected by the secret agents of Fenianism, who are doing their best, side by side with Parnell, though not to his knowledge, to create a rebellious discontent among the people. That there are those equal to any mischief one has only to attend the agitation meetings to discover, but they are helpless without money, and money they have not, and can not get.—N. Y. Herald.

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of four hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

To be thoroughly happy you must be well. To be well in thousands of cases, you must take the great medicine, which relieves, regulates and renovates disorderly systems—Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. For Bright's disease of the kidneys, diabetes, and all diseases of the urinary system, its timely use is very beneficial. For sale by all dealers at $1 per bottle.

Our food furnishes material for the growth and nourishment of the body by absorption and assimilation. In like manner Victoria Hypophosphites acts in the cure of disease. When swallowed, it is absorbed, taken up by the veins, and circulated through the system, with the blood, reaching the most hidden and remote points. It is evident, therefore, that the whole system must feel the effects of the remedy. For sale by all dealers. w5d22-2w

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

FRIDAY, Jan. 30.—There has been considerable excitement in the local wheat market to-day, and prices have been unsteady, with a possible advance of one cent a bushel. There has been no outside reason for this advance, as prices are reported generally nominal. European advices do not note a change. Peas are steady. Oats, no change to note; the demand is entirely local. Hay continues to come forward abundantly, and quotations are barely maintained.

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back lassitude, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated sneezing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose; in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first stages use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild purgative to remove the tightness across the forehead, &c. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. w5d23-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the size of our mammoth [illegible] astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

T. V. C.

The County Council of Hastings has granted $100 towards the preliminary expenses of the Trent Valley Canal.

Raffle.

The raffle for Mr. H. Winch's chesnut horse, "Dick Deadeye" came off at the Huffman House last night. Mr. A. Elliott and Mr. R. B. Morrow were the fortunate ones, both throwing 43. The ties were not thrown off as there were some negotiations for an arrangement.

Reckless use of Firearms.

A man from near Fraserville amused himself yesterday afternoon, on Water Street, near the Stewart House, by standing in the middle of the street and firing off a revolver into the air. The authorities should see that such work is stopped at once, or some harm may result.

Heavy Sale of Lumber.

Improvement in the business in the province is evidenced in the recent purchase of 100,000 ft. of first-class pine lumber by the Joseph Hall Agricultural Works at Oshawa. This extensive purchase has been made from Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, and is now being shipped via the Midland and Grand Trunk Railways.

Breakdown and Runaway.

The forward axle of Mr. B. Morrow's delivery waggon broke off to-day when near T. Fitzgerald's carriage shop, throwing the driver out and causing the waggon to strike the heels of the horse. This started the horse into a run. By some means the whiffletree became broken, and the horse's foot coming in contact with it, became badly cut at the fetlock, as well as the frogs of the foot, causing them to bleed freely.

Fire.

About half-past four o'clock on Thursday afternoon the dwelling house of Mr. Joseph Huston, near the Station, was discovered to be on fire. The alarm was rung and the firemen proceeded as far as the Station, when it was reported that the fire was extinguished. It originated in the pipes leading from the hall stove, setting fire to the room above, which was in a blaze, and at one time the destruction of the house was feared.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh to brisk, south-easterly to south-westerly winds; cloudy, warm weather, with rain, followed to-morrow by westerly to north-westerly winds and colder weather. The thermometer at Peterborough indicated at 6 o'clock last evening 20°, and at 10 o'clock 6° above zero. This morning at half-past 7 o'clock 16°, at 10 o'clock 30°, and at 12 o'clock 38°. Wind south-westerly and cloudy weather.

An Excellent Appointment.

Our readers will, like ourselves, be glad to learn that Mr. Romaine has received a Government appointment for which he is especially fitted. The following details are given by an Ottawa correspondent:—

"Mr. Robert Romaine has been appointed to the office of stationery clerk, rendered vacant by the death of Mr. Sloane. A better appointment could not have been made. Mr. Romaine was formerly proprietor of the Peterborough REVIEW, the model printing office, as newspaper men will admit, of this province. He was in former years superintendent of the Queen's Printing Office, and has had an extensive experience in all the branches of both printing and stationery. There is no doubt that the appointment will be well received by newspaper men of both political parties.

Temperance Address.

Friendship Hall was well filled last evening with the friends of temperance to listen to an address by the Grand Worthy Chief Templar of Ontario, the Rev. J. Shaw. Mr. James Stratton presided. After prayer the chairman occupied a few moments in explaining the object of the meeting, introducing the speaker, who began by complimenting Peterborough on the position she occupied in the Dominion on the temperance question. He said that Peterborough stood No. 1 in the Dominion as being the only town giving a majority for the Dunkin Act. He was glad to find the work progressing favorably. He was pleased with the reports of the several lodges in the district, and to meet with so much intelligence and speaking ability as he found among the members of the County Lodge. He then proceeded to discuss many of the features of the temperance work, saying, among other things, that the temperance cause was a part of the gospel work and not distinct from it, and that it was impossible to separate them. The door of temperance opened the way to the gospel church, and it mattered not how drunken, or debased or sinful a man might be, he would, by taking the pledge and attending the meetings of the lodge, be softened and toned down until his thoughts were turned towards the church and its gospel teaching. Many a soul had been brought to the church of God through the doors of our temperance lodges, and they should be sustained by Christians, and every temperance work should be supported by the church. There were many eloquent passages in this address which opened up a new train of thought in the minds of his hearers. It would be impossible for us to give even a synopsis of this excellent speakers' address, as our columns could not afford the space. It was well received by the audience. Mr. Pentland moved a vote of thanks to the Grand Templar for the able, interesting and practical address, seconded by Mr. Campbell, of Nassau, and it was unanimously carried. Mr. Geo. Chamberlain afterwards proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, which was put by Mr. Pentland and unanimously carried. A collection and the benediction closed the meeting.

THE WIFE DESERTION CASE.

A Former Resident of Ashburnham, Where He Married.

The Millbrook Messenger gives the following additional particulars of the case of John Brown and his deserted wife, an account of which we republished from the Port Hope Times:—

"It appears that he married a Miss Kempt, daughter of Mr. James Kempt, of the village of Ashburnham, a well-respected man, and well known there, who for many years carried on the sawmill business, (leased from R. D. Rogers, Esq.) and after that went to the business of grocer and butcher. We were well acquainted with the family from the spring of 1852, and intimately acquainted with Mr. Kempt's many relatives in the Ottawa Valley, in the townships of March, Goulburn and Huntley.

From one who knows, we learn that this John Brown, when living in Ashburnham, was a great gambler, and having severely nipped one Alex. Niblock, who kept hotel there, Niblock threatened to shoot him. So much did Brown consider he was entitled to receive a bullet from his victim, that he left his country for his country's good, and was supposed to have got work, at large wages, at Rochester, on a railroad that was then building.

Mrs. Brown is living at Cheboygan, Michigan, with a brother-in-law, one Thomas Hodgins, who is married to her husband's sister. Her father, the late Samuel Brown, (brother to Johnston Brown, mentioned above) only died last year. We understand that Mrs. Brown has always supported herself and children, and, at one time, at least, was pressed to re-enter the marriage state, it being urged that her husband must be dead, or she would have heard from him. But, true to her plighted vows, she rejected the tempting offer, and, at this late date, finds herself a widow. Living in the States she will have less trouble in securing her property left by her husband, which, we hope to learn, will be of such a value as not only to enable her to spend the rest of her life in affluence, but to recompense her in some measure, for her many years of struggling and fighting this life's battles, and also that her children may each have a goodly heritage.

FRESH EGGS DURING WINTER.

How to secure eggs during the winter is again the anxious query of young and inexperienced poultry growers. It is estimated that 45,000,000 dozen eggs are consumed daily in the United States, New York alone appropriating 40,000,000 dozen annually. Such figures as these naturally incline everybody owning poultry-yards to consider the ways and means by which the greatest number of eggs shall be gained. The production of eggs during cold weather is largely under the control of the one who has charge of the fowls. Hens supplied with warm and comfortable quarters and an abundance of suitable food as a rule reward the owner with a bountiful supply of eggs. In connection with liberal care should be observed the ages of the fowls. Geyclin and other scientists who have looked into the matter state, and Professor Miles quotes the following portion as applicable to the average of poultry: First year after hatching, 15 to 20 eggs; second year, 100 to 120; third year, 120 to 135, and the fourth year after hatching, 100 to 115 eggs, after which time there is a visible decrease, the fifth year being accorded only 60 to 80 eggs. Fowls require a variety of food. Corn fed alone tends to the production of fats, not the production of eggs. Wright in his book on poultry places finely ground oats, thoroughly moistened, but not made into a slop, at the head of the list as a standard food for poultry. He furthermore recommends the mixing of all soft food with boiling water and the feeding of it while it is yet warm. Of the whole grains he gives buckwheat the preference, and next to this he advises good sound barley. Laying hens should also have a liberal supply of fresh vegetables and any green food obtainable. Scraps of meat chopped fine and mixed with bits of food from the table are also desirable. The food may be further varied by using wheat screenings or middlings and shorts mixed and wet with water. Burnt bones or oyster shells, or bits of pounded lime, mortar and gravel, must be regularly furnished. These substances prevent the occurrence of soft-shelled eggs and are relished by the hens. A box of dry ashes placed where it is always accessible insures freedom from vermin. In climates where the weather is mild and the hens are allowed to run at large they are not cut off from their natural supplies and will generally lay well without any special aid, but directions given are very necessary elsewhere. At all times and under all circumstances plenty of clean water ought to be provided. To present the matter in a nutshell, furnish suitable accommodations, comfortable quarters, warmth, food, give as great a variety of diet as possible, and feed as much as they will eat—a hungry hen will not be a laying hen. In very cold weather add a little cayenne pepper to the morning ration, which by the way, should be warm, neither too wet nor too hot, supply plenty of water and observe regularity in feeding and also in gathering the eggs.—The World.

MEDICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

COLOR BLINDNESS.—After some 18,000 examinations, Dr. Jeffries affirms that about one male in twenty-five is color-blind to a greater or less degree. He finds the defect to be largely hereditary, although sometimes occasioned by disease or injury. In the former case it is incurable, but in the latter it may be only a temporary difficulty.

TEA DRINKING.—From a study of the action of tea, Mr. W. J. Morton has reached these conclusions:—As with any other drug, there is a proper and an improper use of it. In moderation, it is a mild and harmless stimulant. Its immoderate use leads to serious symptoms, such as headache, vertigo, ringing in the ears, tremulousness, nervousness, exhaustion, irregular action of the heart and dyspepsia. Many of the symptoms of excessive tea drinking are such as may occur without a suspicion of the real cause.

SIZE OF THE BRAIN.—Recent comparative measurements of the crania of eminent men and of criminals show that while a capacious intellect requires a large skull, a large cranium is not always attended by a high order of intelligence. The crania of a considerable number of criminals were found to have a capacity much above the average.

SCIENTIFIC COOKERY.—Berlin rejoices in the possession of a scientific cooking association, formed by house-wives of the city. It has a school of instruction in cookery, and a qualified chemist gives members of the society lectures in practical chemistry. A laboratory has been established in charge of the chemist, for the examination of articles of food, and also of utensils employed in cooking.

A MONSTER.—A recently discovered fossil animal, Amphicoelias fragilissimus, is described as a monster considerably more than one hundred feet in length, with spinal vertebra six feet across, hind legs forty feet long, and a large and powerful tail. Imagine the monster in life, standing on its hind legs and catching its prey with its fore paws, and a striking picture is brought to mind from the ages long agone.

SCIENTIFIC ACCURACY ABOUT COMETS.—Although the near approach to the earth of several comets has been known, the least distances of only two have ever been determined with any degree of accuracy. On July 1, 1770, a comet was within 1,300,000 miles of the earth—the closest approach of one of these bodies of which astronomers have any certain knowledge. Its apparent diameter was two and one-half degrees, or nearly five times the apparent diameter of the moon. It is not surprising that the apparition of such a monster should cause a panic of terror among unenlightened and superstitious inhabitants of our globe.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT has been found a useful signal in surveying. In recent work of triangulation in Algeria it is stated that the light was seen at a distance of one hundred and sixty-four miles.

PHARAOH'S CAVALRY.—To convince various scientific skeptics in regard to certain events of Biblical narrative, Abbe Moigno, editor of Les Mondes, of Paris, proposes fitting out an archaeological expedition to search for the remains of the Egyptian cavalry, buried in the Red Sea. His belief is that these remains can be found by digging for them, and that the action of the salt in which they are buried must have kept them in a good state of preservation.

TWENTY-EIGHTH YEAR.

THE WEEKLY REVIEW FOR 1880.

AN ENTIRELY NEW FEATURE!

How to Obtain the Leading Papers and Save Money.

FAIR, SQUARE, AND RELIABLE OFFERS.

WITH the year 1880, the WEEKLY REVIEW will enter on its 28th year of publication. Notwithstanding the improvements which have been made upon it, and the ever increasing expenditure incurred to keep it AHEAD of any of its competitors, the annual subscription will remain as heretofore, only $1.50—postage paid by the publishers.

Splendid Clubbing Advantages.

The Proprietors of the REVIEW have great pleasure in announcing that they have made arrangements with the publishers of the following leading periodicals in Canada and the United States, by which they are enabled to club these periodicals with the WEEKLY REVIEW at remarkably low prices.

READ CAREFULLY.—Below are three columns of figures. The name of the paper or magazine is given, and the FIRST column gives the REGULAR PUBLISHER'S PRICE. The SECOND column gives the regular subscription price of the WEEKLY REVIEW. The THIRD column gives the price at which we are prepared to supply new subscribers with BOTH the paper or magazine and the WEEKLY REVIEW combined, for one year. It is certainly an object to save money these times, and it is easy to see by our Club List how it can be done.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

ANOTHER GENERAL ATTACK ON THE BRITISH EXPECTED.

General Bright in the Logar District—Ayoob Khan's Troops Threatening to Strike if not Paid.

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines.

CALCUTTA, Jan. 30.—Despatches from Cabul state that General Bright, at the head of a strong detachment of troops, has marched to the Logar valley, which has been the scene of recent serious risings, and has encamped there with a view of suppressing local disturbances and combinations among the tribes before they can do serious mischief. Logar valley is separated by a single mountain range from the Ghuzni road, which latter place is at present the rallying point of tribes that gather to the support of Mahomed Jan at the fortress of Ghuzni. The head men of the various tribes are said to be coming into their rendezvous in considerable force, and Takirkhan, one of the most influential chiefs, has, as already stated, avowed his determination to fight to the last extremity unless the English consent to the reinstatement of Yakhoob Khan as Ameer. The Cabulese, however, are declared to have refused the proposition of Yakoob Khan to march at once on Farah, arguing that the season is not yet suitable, and that the British forces are too strong in that vicinity to justify them in taking the risk unsupported by the hill men. Thus far it is intimate that the operations made in the hope of preventing a junction of the Kohistans in the neighbourhood of Ghuzni have not been as successful as was hoped for, and the situation is regarded with some anxiety, on account of the certainty of another organized campaign on the part of the Afghans as soon as their more warlike forces can be collected. Intelligence from Herat announces that Ayoob Khan's troops threaten to go home unless paid.

Dead at his Post.

A singular, but fortunately not a common, danger of travel was illustrated on the Fulton Ferry, between New York and Brooklyn, the other day. A boat was in the slip on the Brooklyn side, and for a few minutes the deck-hands waited, wondering at the unusual delay in starting. Finally two of them mounted to the pilot-house and there found Wm. A. White, the pilot, on the floor, just dead. He had died of heart disease just as he was ready to sound the signal to start the engine. Had he fallen while the boat was in the middle of the crowded river, a very serious accident might have followed.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

A HORRIBLE MURDER.

AMERICAN.

KILLED FOR FIVE DOLLARS.

STATESVILLE, N.C., Jan. 31.—Joseph Gillespie, a colored man, was hanged at Taylorsville yesterday for the murder of Mr. G. Fowler in December, 1878. Gillespie and an accomplice followed Fowler after he closed his store, intending to rob him. They killed him with a bludgeon and divided the booty, amounting to less than five dollars. Davidson, his accomplice, also a colored man, who struck the blow, was lynched shortly after the murder. Gillespie on the gallows admitted the justice of his sentence, declared his belief that he had made his peace with God, and warned all against the evil influences of whiskey and bad company.

COMPETING TARIFFS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—At midnight to-day the new tariff of the Anglo-American Cable Company, the first aggressive step in the war on the new company, goes into effect. To all parts in Europe, except Great Britain and Ireland, the rate will be reduced to twelve and a half cents a word, against seventy-five cents, which is the present charge.

DEFRAUDED AND INSANE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Miss Minerva Ellis, a Brooklyn school teacher, became violently insane recently. This was caused by the loss of $2,000, her savings for ten years, which she loaned to the husband of an old school mate on worthless security.

A WILL CONSPIRACY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Marcus Sacia, the prime mover in the celebrated Lewis will conspiracy, was arrested in Jersey City last evening, by the United States Deputy Marshall. Lewis left his estate of a million dollars to the United States Government, and a woman, claiming to be his wife, appeared demanding the property.

THE PARIS OF AMERICA.

It is reported that several wealthy Californians are arranging to remove to New York, that Flood, the bonanza king, is negotiating for a mansion on Fifth Avenue, and that the family of the late O'Brien Flood's partner contemplate establishing their residence here. It is also stated that retired capitalists from Boston and other cities are coming to New York, which will soon become the Paris of America.

SETTLED AT LAST.

A Washington special report to the Tribune says that yesterday the President signed the patent for the grant of land in California claimed by the New Idria Quicksilver Mining Company, thus ending, so far as the executive is concerned, the famous McGarrahan case, which has occupied the attention of the public for a quarter of a century, and has been the direct cause of the removal of at least two Cabinet Ministers. Scores of Congressmen and other public men have been publicly accused of being in connection with it.

LARGE BAKERY BURNED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Field and Company's bakery was burned last night. The loss amounts to $64,000.

A SEVERE STORM.

BOSTON, Jan. 31.—A despatch from Mount Washington says that the severest storm of the winter is raging. The wind is blowing at the rate of 132 miles an hour.

A PRIVATE ENTERPRISE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A Washington special report to the Herald says that the State Department authorizes the statement that the French Minister, under instructions, has communicated to Evarts that the French Government has no concern or participation in the movements of M. DeLesseps in regard to the Isthmus Canal, that project being an entirely private enterprise.

DISPUTED PROPERTY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Mr. Benjamin E. Smith, of Buffalo, who is building a railroad across Jamaica Bay, recently purchased for $300,000 six hundred acres of land at Rockaway beach that was in dispute. Four houses on the property, built by other claimants, were torn down early yesterday, before the occupants had risen. Proceedings, civil and criminal, will be begun to-morrow, and a lively warfare between the rival claimants, including Benjamin Butler, is anticipated.

THE INTER-OCEANIC CANAL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A Washington special report to the World says that the House Inter-Oceanic Canal Committee yesterday heard Francis W. Morris, of New York, who claims to have been originator of the Nicaraguan route, that he has expended several millions in locating this route, and that to him was granted the right-of-way over this route by Nicaragua. If Morris is possessed of the right-of-way over the Nicaraguan route, the United States would acquire a protectorate over the same.

GERMANY PREPARING.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—A Berlin correspondent reports that at the Government cannon foundry such large orders have been received that a number of fresh hands have been engaged, and all are working extra time.

AMERICAN.

RAILWAY COMBINATIONS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The Herald says that no settlement of the negotiations between the Erie and Central Roads for the New England business has been reached. The Erie claims more than its share of New England business. The opening of its through line to Boston has made the Erie a formidable rival for all eastbound business at Buffalo. Its claim to a portion of the business of the Lake Shore and Canada Southern Roads, whether destined to this port or to New England, the completion of the Boston line enables it to enforce. No conflict is feared, however. It is understood that nearly an equal division of the business is asked by the Erie Road. When an agreement shall have been reached, it is probable that the Erie Road will make with the Wabash Railway a traffic arrangement similar to that recently made between it and the New York Central. A division of the eastbound traffic at Buffalo between the Erie and Central Roads will be almost a pooling of the business of the two companies.

FASHION AND HEALTH.

We have great respect for Fashion. It is an attempt to express a perfection of Art. Its tendency is in the direction of taste, neatness, cleanliness, and many Christian virtues. It designs to render humanity attractive. An experienced teacher once said to us that he always regarded it as a good symptom in a school-boy when he began to be anxious about his clothes. Even foppishness is easier cured than slovenliness. But the artistic may become too artifical; the love for display may lead to excess; and even Fashion itself may degenerate into a mere fondness for change. So taste is sacrificed to variety, and common sense to the plans of those who, as tradesmen or tradeswomen, find it for their interest to be originating new styles with inventive frequency. Often it becomes to them an advantage to introduce contrasts or marked variations, and so Art is followed, at the expense of Nature. Not every poor form should be squeezed into symmetry. Not every big foot should be compressed into littleness. Especially is it true that Fashion should not be allowed to interfere with health. It may be developed and exercised not only in conformity too, but in promotion of the bodily welfare.

The head, the chest, and the feet are the parts with which fashion seems especially disposed to interfere. As to the head, we have recently read an army discussion on caps or the soldiers' head-dress, which interested us much, because it shows how thoroughly such a subject can be studied. The health of the head, of the hair, of the body has very much to do with the character of the clothing. Pettinkoffer, the eminent German sanitarian, has given a most instructive lecture on "The Relations of the Air on the Clothes we Wear." The effects of silk, woolen, and cotton of different texture, of moisture and heat, are discussed, and facts presented with all the exactness of close experiment. It is not left doubtful what are the indications in order to adjust our bodies, through clothing, to the medium which surrounds them. More head-errors are made by men than by women, although men are very fond of indulging the idea that, when fashion is talked about, women only are referred to. Close caps, mufflers, tippets are often the causes of colds. Besides, the hair is rendered unhealthy and the hearing often interfered with. It is one of the virtues of the silk hat that it stands up a little from the head. If, as should be, there are a few holes made through it, there is opportunity for air without draught.

The more open bonnets of women do not expose them so much to evils of overheat and inure them to exposure, when not too severe. The hair is the natural covering of the head. It is somewhat doubtful whether any other is really needed. So we do not criticize women for treating the hat as a mere head ornament and not a protection. Where changes of climate or exposure require it, they only need to have at hand some other protector. It was an improvement when hat-strings were made to come behind the ears, instead of over them. It is a great misfortune that the natural hair is not more relied upon as the natural covering of the head. We have great need to find out why it is that so many scalps are in an unhealthy state; why dandruff is the rule, rather than that naturally oily condition and imperceptible shedding of the scarf-skin which is in accord with health.

The protection of the chest from sudden changes of air is exceedingly important. In it are the issues of life. It has no bony encasement like the head and spinal cord. A sudden chilling of it is very apt to effect the whole system. This may occur either from the inbreathing of too cold air through the mouth or by a direct chilling of the walls of the chest. Catlin, the Indian archæologist, wrote a book with the title "Keep your Mouth Shut." He attributed the health of some tribes of Indians to the fact that they recognized the nose as the chimney through which air was to have ingress and egress. Our exposure is much greater if we are constantly talking in the open air, or if at night we sleep with the mouth open. While in usual states of atmosphere it may make no difference, sudden changes are thus much more quickly felt. The value of flannel for the chest is so great because it is so good an equalizer of heat. If sufficient, it maintains a comfortable warmth, and does not permit this part of the body to feel sudden changes so rapidly as they occur. More depends on the texture and weaving than on the substance or weight of garment. A new-made bed-quilt, with its loose cotton, is much warmer than the same when it is packed. One reason why feathers will retain heat so well is that they will not pack. Yet, like our old Professor, we dislike feathers so much that we have a little feeling of malice whenever we see a goose. Tight gloves or shoes are not as warm as loose ones. The air contained in clothing, or between it and the skin, as it has to do with radiation and conduction, influences the heat. We believe that chamois chest-protectors are being used far too much. They are too compact. "Air-proof fabrics ought to have a very limited use. They become inconvenient not because they stop the change of air entirely, which they cannot do, in fact, on account of the necessary openings in them; but only because they limit the exchange of air in the underlying garments. From protection against the wet from without they are well suited; but they produce another wet on our skin, by impeding evaporation. They may be used in wet weather, when accompanied with cold or wind; but never, though wet, when it is warm or calm."—N. Y. Independent.

Daily Evening Review

SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1880.

THE GRAND JUNCTION BILL.

The bill relating to the Grand Junction Railway Company has been passed through the Railway Committee with an amendment stipulating that nothing in the bill shall prejudice the suit now pending between the Company and the County of Peterborough.

NOT MUCH LEFT.

In the budget speech of the Provincial Treasurer we are told that all that remained of "Sandfield Macdonald's surplus" on the 31st day of December, 1879, was $1,365,567, and that against this the Province had outstanding liabilities to the tune of $842,833, leaving only a shade over a half a million dollars of the surplus accumulated and invested by the Sandfield Macdonald Government; this half million, according to Mr. Woods' statement, being in reality all that is still at the disposal of the Government and Legislature.

In giving these figures we also feel bound to state that we do not submit them as correct, but simply as those given by the Treasurer, and which we are satisfied present quite as favourable a view of matters as any adjusting of particular items can by any possibility be made to present. Evidently there is not much left.

POLICE MAGISTRATES.

We copy the following telegram from the Toronto Telegram of January 27th:—

"The following letter from Col. Denison, P.M., was read at the meeting of the Council last evening:—'I have to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of an extract from report 55 of the Executive Committee, adopted by the Council, requesting me and the Police Court clerk to continue to impose and collect Magistrates' fees, and offering to indemnify us against all damages, costs or charges to which we might be liable, arising out of any action in consequence of the imposition of such fees. In reply I have the honor to state that the Police Court clerk has nothing whatever to do with the imposition of fees, and can only collect such fees as are imposed by me. By the statute, it is entirely optional with me to impose fees or not, in my discretion, but in the case of my imposing fees wrongfully or illegally I am liable to heavy penalties. By the recent decision of the Court of Common Pleas in the case of Hatton v. Peterborough, which decision I have carefully studied and taken advice upon, it is held that I have no right to impose any fees for work done by myself and not by the clerk. In view of this decision, and not desiring to act illegally, I wrote to you, explained my reasons, and informed you that I would no longer collect magistrates' fees. I must, therefore, still refuse to impose or collect fees, and I cannot refrain from expressing my regret that the Council should have asked me to combine with them to do what is held to be illegal.'"

The Telegram publishes the letter without comment. We presume it was thought the letter itself bore on its face the very best comment. The case referred to is the case of the "Town of Peterborough vs. Hatton," the judgment in which was rendered over a month ago, and we suppose both parties to the action must have been satisfied with it, as neither has given notice of appeal. As by the judgment it was held that the plaintiffs (the town), were not entitled to recover the monies alleged to have been retained by the defendant (Hatton) the plaintiff's suit failed, and the town will therefore, we presume, be obliged some day to pay the costs of the suit, in addition to the amount of $600 paid the auditors and the two counsel fees paid for opinions in respect to the matter. These costs and expenses will, in all, come to about $900, so far as we are able to judge. Now, the absurdity of the whole matter will be apparent. From the time the Council appointed the present clerk in March, 1877, until the date of the argument in November last, there was no question about any fees being claimed by the Police Magistrate. All monies for costs were received by Mr. Macdonald as Police Court Clerk, in addition to the fines, and were by him paid over to the Treasurer. The Police Magistrate did not claim any costs for himself. He assumed his salary covered all fees for his services in town cases. He did not claim, as we understand it, as Colonel Denison, the Police Magistrate of Toronto and some other Police Magistrates through Ontario did, that he was entitled to any costs, and the clause in the judgment referring to or, raising the questions as to hearing and other fees, was put in the special case at the instance and request of Col. Denison, as we saw by his letter to the City Council of Toronto, to raise the point at issue between him and the city, which he had in vain been endeavoring to get decided by a special case for some months. As the Magistrates are liable to certain penalties if they impose improper costs, the only safe way, it appears to us, for them to act is to impose no costs at all until the Legislature set the matter right and beyond question. This we believe to be the view taken by the Police Magistrate of Peterborough, who was present at the hearing of his case, and since that date he has, as then announced, imposed no costs but clerk's fees. The towns are losing money so long as the law remains as it is, and the respectable portion of the community are paying to protect law abiding citizens against criminals, and criminals against one another.

ANOTHER CANAL PROJECT.

A correspondent writes to the Bobcaygeon Independent from Belleville as follows:—

"What I am now writing for is to ask you to direct public attention to the desirability of making Belleville the outlet of the Trent Valley Canal. It could be done very easily. From the head of the Nine Mile rapids a canal will be needed to Trenton, whilst less than nine miles, say seven, will carry the canal into Belleville, shortening the distance and reducing the expense. I see that Port Hope wishes to make the Trent Valley Canal outlet at that place, which is simply ridiculous. It wants to cut a canal from Rice Lake to Port Hope. This is of course quite impracticable, and even if it could be done it would be useless. Port Hope is on the Lake, Belleville is on the Bay: Port Hope harbour is dangerous, Belleville harbour is safe. It is this reason which will give Belleville all the lumber trade which Port Hope now enjoys, as soon as the Grand Junction is completed to Peterborough and Mud Lake. What I ask of you, sir, is to advocate Belleville as the terminus of the Trent Valley Canal."

INSANITY, ITS CAUSES AND COUNTERACTIVES.

The Medical Superintendents of our Lunatic Asylums in their yearly reports to Government frequently make statements and throw out suggestions which are deserving of a far wider circulation and of a far more general study than they receive. Published only in the blue books, these remarks are practically entombed, so that those who stand most in need of the warnings, and would be most profited by the arguments, never know of their existence, and have consequently no opportunity of becoming acquainted with the terrible dangers to which they are exposed, or with the means of escape from injurious habits into which they have fallen and by which they are being carried surely, though slowly, to physical, mental, and moral ruin. For years on years, these gentlemen have lifted up their solemn, urgent protest and given forth their sad and earnest warnings with apparently little if any effect. They have asked the assistance of ministers, fathers, doctors, druggists, editors, and what not, in educating general opinion on the subject, and especially in cautioning those who are most likely to be drawn into those ways which lead down to death. The response they have received, however, has almost been next to nothing. Some have said, that, the representations made on the whole subject have been so exaggerated that they partake in some measure of the very insanity against which they were intended to guard. Others have found refuge in the excuse that the whole matter was far too delicate to be meddled with, while still others have been of opinion that any attempt of the kind would only intensify the evil intended to be counteracted, by putting notions into the heads of those entirely ignorant of what was denounced, and entirely innocent of the criminality against which it was sought to defend them. In this way it has come to pass that almost nothing is done, the evil remains and is intensified, while the physicians of our lunatic asylums are in danger of being discouraged by the apathy, and inclined, without further effect, to let things go as they may, while they try to alleviate the terrible sufferings as they come, without attempting to prevent their approach by timely warning and honest out-spoken instruction. And yet it is a terrible thing to be told that a very large proportion of those in our asylums are there not because of hereditary taint, not even because of their own vicious habits, and their utter disregard of the first laws of physical and moral well-being. It is awful to be told that there are beds by the score occupied in all our lunatic asylums by patients hopelessly incurable, because of their own personal habits; that these persons are a needless burden on the community; and that they are in many cases preventing those of whom there is hope being properly attended to, and having a chance of recovery afforded them. It is not many years since Dr. Workman suggested that all such ought to be warned that they would not on any consideration be admitted to the asylums, and other doctors in similar positions seem to have very much the same idea. All over this country, and in almost every other country, the evil prevails, bringing forth the same fruits of enfeebled physical powers, a premature decay of intellectual faculty, and a deadness of moral perception, issuing in many cases in utter idiocy or outrageous madness. And it is among all classes. How many shy, nervous, dyspeptic, ailing, young men,—students, even of Theology sometimes—may well tremble at the terrible pit they have dug for themselves, while they try to persuade their friends that it is over work, or something else over which they had no control, though all the while they know that it is something fearfully different. We are convinced that parents, ministers, doctors and teachers ought to deal far more fearlessly and honestly with this matter than they do. The evils flowing from it can scarcely be exaggerated and are to be seen everywhere, culminating only too frequently in the lunatic asylum and all which that implies.

And other predisposing causes of the same terrible affliction have to be studied and guarded against. The sins of the fathers give a hereditary taint to the children, and an increased proclivity in the same and ruinous direction. Dr. Clark, of the Toronto Asylum, discusses this at considerable length in his report for last year, lately laid before Parliament, and shows with great earnestness and power, how there "is a lineage of disease as truly as there is a legacy of health," and that from imprudent marriages, contracted from mere wordly considerations, as well from the vicious lives of fathers and mothers, an ever increasing number are inheriting constitutions physically and morally deteriorated, which in due time help to fill our lunatic asylums and increase the general misery.

Among other additional causes of insanity, Dr. Clark denounces in very strong language the "senseless mental overstrain to which the school children are subjected," and this arising from the multiplicity of studies required of children and youths up to twenty-one and beyond. We are tempted to give rather a long quotation on this subject, for the evil is a very formidable one, and is resulting in more injurious consequences than many suspect. "Children," says the doctor, "are put in the worst ventilated houses which can be found in the country, and these, too often, are literally crammed with them. In this fold all day they must study for hours at a time. Evening brings no relaxation for them, for a task needing several hours' study must be done before bedtime, or early in the morning, and this becomes a dreary, uninviting round 'from weary chime to chime.' Besides the four elementary studies, a smattering of almost every other branch of learning is required from mere children. They, successfully or vainly, endeavor, according to their strength, to overcome these daily burdens and obstacles to health by a constant effort which produces mental tension. The result is many never recover from the struggle during the remainedr of a lengthy life. Night and day, except a few hours of sleep, from the age of seven up to manhood or womanhood, the susceptible and tender brain is on the rack, and this strain is at a time when only moderate exercise is healthy to this impressible organ. The brain must, like the rest of the body, in its early days gather tone, fibre and capacity for the great struggle of life. The young are not permitted to do hard manual work because of the tenderness of the body, until maturity is almost reached, but the most important organ of our physical system is urged onwards to the utmost extent of its powers from babyhood upwards. The weary head is filled with all kinds of knowledge which in former times were wisely judged to belong to the college. It needs no prophet to see that this hot-house growth in a foul atmosphere, and with a uniform system of forced training and long hours of study, mean nervousness, lassitude, periodic headaches, and a lax, prostrated physical and mental system. A tendency to, and an invasion of insanity may end the chapter of [illegible], especially if a hereditary predisposition exists. A visit to any of the schools of Toronto needs only to be made to convince any one that the flabby muscles, bleached faces, weak and fluctuating pulses, languid movements, even in the play-ground, and the weary attempts to learn lessons, are not much like the buoyant responses of nature in healthy children."

There is, we fear, more truth than poetry in all this. The difficulty is to hit the happy medium between giving the brain, as well as the body, too much and too little work, for evidently the latter is scarcely less injurious than the former.

We make no apology for writing in this strain. The evil and the danger referred to are on every side, and it is as foolish as anything well can be for Christian men and women to think that they can escape from their responsibility in the premises, by simply closing their eyes and refusing to take cognizance of facts which are as saddening as they are unquestionable.—Canada Presbyterian.

IRELAND.

Lord Francis Osborne, brother of the Duke of Leeds, has declared himself to be a Home Ruler, and ready to come forward as a candidate for Limerick city at the next general election. He is a convert to Catholicity and an advocate of temperance.

On January 3rd, the house of a small farmer, named John Reynolds, near Belleek, was entered by a party of men, some of them carrying arms, who beat him. The house of Moses McConnell, the bailiff, on the same property, was also entered by an armed party, who threatened him.

On January 6th, a process-server named Farmer, who was serving a large number of people near Carrowhubbick, was seized by the people, and hanged from a tree by the feet until every process in his pockets were shaken out and destroyed. He was then taken down, and sent to the Enniscrone police barrack, where he remained for the night.

While the Sligo board of guardians were sitting on January 6th, a large crowd of unemployed laborers assembled before the workhouse and sent a spokesman into the meeting, asking for work, as they were on the brink of starvation. A petition to Lord Beaconsfield was resolved upon, asking that a part of the Church surplus might be granted as loans to small farmers.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw81-1y

SUNLIGHT.

BY ALFRED SULLY.

Words said in wine are lightly said,
Books read at night are vainly read;
'Tis only in broad sunlight
Of sober day
That words which move the world are named,
And books that shake old thrones are framed.

'Tis only in the dusk of night
That Vice stalks boldly into sight,
While Virtue sleeps and angels rest,
She wanders forth,
And with her guile and wine-stained breath
Both lure the souls of men to Death.

How well I know in Paradise
God's sun doth never set nor rise;
But shines throughout Eternity,
And keeps in light
Each act and thought of each man's soul,
Like words upon a printed scroll.

LONDON, ENG.

FASHIONABLE GIFT-GIVING.

Well, what was to be done about it?

Mrs. Waters looked ruefully at the five-dollar bill, reposing in solitary state in the inner compartment of her pocketbook, and pondered. In the first place, there was the muffs for the girls. It would take the whole of the five for them alone, to say nothing of the other things. Clearly they must be given up, and she had been promising for so long a time to get them, too. It was too bad!

Then, there was the scarf for Clara, and the fur gauntlets for herself, and Mrs. Weeks' bill and the balance on Kitty's birthday gift, and a dozen other things, all to be paid for out of that paltry five dollars. No wonder Mrs. Waters groaned as she contemplated these impossibilities!

"Why, I could use fifty dollars this very day, and then not get half we need," said she, despairingly, tapping her foot nervously on the fender. "But I can't get any more from John, for he said when he gave me this bill, this morning, that I must make it hold out as far as possible; he positively couldn't spare any more for a month to come; his bills were falling due, and he would be dunned to death, for he could not collect anything that was coming to him. Oh, dear! it's a dreadful thing to be so stinted," and the little rocking chair on which she sat rocked back and forth excitedly.

Mrs. Waters was by no means an extravagant woman, and her complaints and wishes on the morning in question should not be so construed. In fact, her husband proudly declared her to be the best wife in town. She was economical and industrious, as the neatly mended garments of her children often testified, while her worn-out dresses were transformed into stylish frocks for the little ones by her own deft fingers. A wasteful woman, or one less skilled in household management, never would have been able to "keep up" so respectably in every particular as did Mrs. Waters. Perhaps pride and ambition had something to do with it, but if so, it was certainly a pardonable pride, and an ambition not wholly unworthy, which made this mother so careless of her own ease, and so cheerfully endure many sacrifices, that the family might always, as she expressed it, "put the best foot foremost."

But she could not sit longer, thinking over the best disposition of her finances. Time meant something in that busy household, and here it was almost ten o'clock, and the dusting to be done yet, and at any rate, thinking the matter over forever did not make the problem more clear, she argued.

"I'll pay Mrs. Weeks what I owe, and the balance due Mr. Todd, and with what is left I'll try to get the scarf, and the gloves too, if they are not too dear. I'll have Kitty go at once and pay those two little bills, and then they'll be off my mind."

"Here, dear," she said to her little daughter, "put on your cloak and tippet, and go down to Mr. Todd's bookstore, and give him $1.50 I owe him. He will give you the change out of this bill, and from there you can go around to Mrs. Weeks and pay her $1.75 out of it, and bring back to me $1.75; or stay—it is such a long walk for you to both places in the rain, you may pay Mr. Todd and then come directly home. I will send Clara to pay Mrs. Weeks, or will perhaps go myself this afternoon. Now be careful and don't get in the mud; the walking is so bad on this side of the street, perhaps you had better go past Dr. Gross'—it's nice and dry down that way. And oh, goodness, that reminds me that I promised to send my dollar for the missionary society to Mrs. Gross early this week. It was due last month, but I couldn't possibly pay it, and it won't do to let it run on any longer. So Kitty, you will have to stop there and give her a dollar. I don't see that there's any other way," and with a sigh at the remembrance of this unexpected debt, Mrs. Waters took her dusting cloth and went to work, soliloquizing:—"That ends the chance of buying Clara the scarf; but it would never have done to let that missionary money go unpaid. Mrs. Gross is president now, and they say she has made a rule that if any are in arrears she will read out their names before the whole society. I don't believe in anybody being so fierce, for my part!"

She went on vigorously with her work, and had just completed her dusting when Kitty returned with the change, and a somewhat ambiguous message of thanks from Mrs. Gross "that she was much obliged for the dollar, as it was better late than never," which only elicited from Mrs. Waters a dry "ahem!"

"Well, Kitty," she said after a pause, "you may run and play now. This afternoon you can go with Clara to pay Mrs. Weeks. I feel really ashamed to think how long I have kept that poor woman waiting for that trifling amount. She told me she needed it to pay on her winter's coal, and her rent would soon be due too, and she scarcely knew how she was going to get along. If we could afford to hire our sewing done, I would always employ her, for she seems so conscientious and anxious to please. I've been trying to interest some of the ladies in our set in her behalf and secure work for her."

And just here I must reveal to the reader that this fact of being regarded as a member of this same "set" to which she had just referred, was a source of infinite satisfaction to Mrs. Waters. It was a sort of panacea for the inconvenience of having a liberal purse—a soothing balm for all life's annoyances. This coterie consisted of the wives of nearly all the well-to-do men of the village, as well as a few others of more slender means, whose geniality and general respectability, like that of our friend Mrs. Waters, gave them a footing.

Counting over the money that Kitty had placed in her hand, she was in the act of dropping it into her purse when a peal from the door-bell announced an arrival.

"Who can it be this drizzly day?" she ejaculated. "I wonder what brings people out so early in the morning! I do hope it is no one to call on me, for I'd almost as soon see a sewing-machine man or a book agent coming, as a lady caller this time of day."

The visitor proved to be Mrs. Judge Jones, the acknowledged leader of the ton of Millville, who, after the usual exchange of compliments, apologized for her unseasonable call. "Of course you have heard that we are going to lose Mrs. Wilcox," she began, "and I told some of our ladies that it wouldn't do to let her go away without making her a present. We have been talking of a silver water-set. What do you think of it?"

Mrs. Waters was aghast. She was expected to contribute towards a silver water pitcher, goblets and salver! How could she confess to her fashionable friend that she had not a cent to give—that the little pitiful sum in her purse belonged to another, because she owed it to another? Fortunately for her, Mrs. Jones did not wait for a reply, but rattled glibly on. "I have headed this list with $5; Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Richards each gave me $2, and Mrs. Martin $2; but what do you think? Mrs. Elgin would only contribute a dollar! I declare I wouldn't act as small and as mean as that for anything. I didn't dream she was so stingy, although I did hear once that she wouldn't allow her hired help to eat butter. Well," glancing over the list which she held in her hand, "I've done pretty well for a stormy morning. I have $14 already, and if you have five dollars to give it will help matters along nicely," and she beamed a gracious smile on Mrs. Waters.

Poor Mrs. Waters! To have turned away an important book agent or troublesome peddler, with the confession that she had no money or "couldn't afford it," was an easy task, but to acknowledge to Mrs. Judge Jones, above all persons, that she was too poor to aid in making this present, required an amount of moral courage of which she was not capable. Confused thoughts of Clara's shabby tippet, contrasted with visions of the bright new scarf she had been promised; the new gloves she herself needed; the child's magazine to which, for weeks past, Kitty had been begging her to subscribe; the recollection of the 25 cents she had reluctantly furnished last week for little Ralph to give to the fund gotten up to make his Sabbath school teacher a Christmas gift; the dime given to Clara the week before for the same purpose; the remembrance of her own remark at the time, that it was nothing but "give, give all you had," and the consciousness that here sat Mrs. Jones, who never had known in all her life what it was to want for money, asking as sweetly for $5 as though it was the merest trifle—all these thoughts, and a host more, flitted rapidly through her brain in a jumped-up mass as she sat gazing at her visitor.

"We are all to meet at Col. Wilcox's to present the gift the night before they leave for Florida," pursued the lady, adjusting her damp ruffles as she spoke, "and as we will have to get the water set from the city, we must order it as soon as I am sure of all the money, and I believe you haven't yet told me what you will give; only, please, dear Mrs. Waters, don't follow Mrs. Elgin's example," and she laughed heartily.

Mrs. Waters' hand nervously went into her dress pocket. "She will go away and say uglier things about me than she has about Mrs. Elgin if I refuse," was her mental comment. "It would look mean, too, I dare say, when I've always professed such friendship for Mrs. Wilcox—though, the dear knows! Mrs. Wilcox could make me a present of a fifty-dollar gift better than I could afford to give fifty cents toward getting her one." Then mustering up a smile, she said aloud:—"I'm somewhat short of money to-day. Where there are children there are so many calls on one's purse, you know," and she smiled again as if to make her visitor fully understand that her contribution was a matter of course. "But here are two dollars—all that I happen to have just now—if you choose to accept so small an amount!"

"Accept it? Certainly, with thanks," responded Mrs. Jones gaily, taking the proffered silver and dropping it into her own plethoric pocket-book. "And now I must be off."

Mrs. Waters bowed adieu to the Judge's wife with a smile on her lips, but a feeling at her heart akin to guilt.

"What a coward I am," she said, sinking into the nearest chair and covering her face with her hands. "How can I ever face poor Mrs. Wicks and tell her again that she must wait?" And then, in a more energetic tone: "It seems to me that the Millville people are running the 'giving' business entirely into the ground lately. If a man moves out of town his entire circle of acquaintances feel bound forthwith to buy him a gold-headed cane, with all the donors' names inscribed on it, and have a big presentation speech and have it reported in all the newspapers; or if a school ma'am gets married, or a Sabbath school teacher happens to have a birthday, or a married couple celebrate a wedding anniversary, Heaven and earth must be moved to raise money to get them a silver-plated gimcrack of some sort! Even the children are infected with the mania; Clara and Kitty each must have a quarter at the end of every school term to help to buy the teacher a brass napkin ring or cheap pickle castor. And to think of Mrs. Jones asking me for five dollars! I wonder if that woman thinks I'm made of gold? I ought just to have been independent and told her frankly that I couldn't give her anything, and let her think what she pleased; and if the facts were known, I'll warrant that, with the exception of Mrs. Richards, not one of those ladies on that list but gave her money reluctantly. I'm ashamed to tell John about it. Men have just such trials, however, as well as women, for I've heard John say a score of times that he is often forced to contribute to objects that he knows he really cannot without defrauding himself or his creditors, and that he has to do it or be considered mean-spirited. Dear me, if the secret history of many of the gold watch and silver tea set presentations that sound so imposing in the papers were written up too, I'm thinking that the background of how the money was raised would tarnish a good deal of their lustre."

"Mother's eyes are as red as if she'd been crying," whispered Kitty to Clara that evening at supper, while little Ralph in childish pity, feeling that something was wrong, slipped his hand caressingly into that of Mrs. Waters and said.

"I won't make a speck of noise to-night, mamma, if your head aches."

"Dear child!" thought she, "headache is easier to endure than heartache."

The night appointed for the giving of the water-set duly arrived. The residence of the Wilcox's was surrounded, surprised and taken possession of by a party of ladies and gentlemen; cake and creams were ordered from a neighbouring restaurant by the gallant colonel; the presentation speech was made in his most happy style by Judge Jones, and the whole affair pronounced "a perfect success." One person alone seemed sad and distraite. Between herself and all the gaiety and laughter, the shallow jokes and real witticisms, there came to Mrs. Waters the constantly recurring vision of a patient, pale-faced needle-woman, whose out-stretched hand seemed to ask, not charity, but for that which was rightfully hers, and whose white lips seemed to say, "You have sinned."

HOW TO KEEP TEETH CLEAN AND HEALTHFUL.

As I am not aware of anything practically new in the way of dentifrices, I can only allude to them as auxiliaries or assistants in promoting cleanliness, and in neutralizing the abnormal acidity so commonly present in the oral cavity. No one has yet discovered the magic prophylactic, notwithstanding the absurd claims of the vendors of various nostrums, such as "Sozodont." Of this article I will testify to what is also well known by most dentists, namely, that it destroys the color of the teeth, turning them to a decidly dark yellow.

There is, of course, quite a general use of tooth brushes by the people, but not uncommonly an abuse of them for want of proper instruction. It is getting to be better understood by both dentists and patients now than formerly that a crosswise brushing is not wise, but that the upper teeth should be brushed downward, and the lower teeth upward. It is a common mistake not to brush thoroughly the buccal and posterior surfaces of the third molars, and the lingual surfaces of the lower front teeth. I am sure that nothing like an adequate amount of care is given to this preventive service. It cannot be too strongly impressed on the minds of the guardians of children that they should see that the practice of brushing the teeth thoroughly is begun as early as possible, so that it shall become a habit to be continued through life.

Concerning the forms of brushes, I will say that straight brushes are utterly impracticable on the surfaces to which I have referred as the ones most neglected. Curved brushes with a tuft end, bud-shaped or convex, are the best. There are several favored forms that are quite efficient in the line I have spoken of. One of these, named the "Windsor," I have faithfully tried for twenty months past, and introduced it very generally in my practice, and I feel that it meets the indications better than any other within my knowledge. The faithful use of floss silk between the teeth ought to be earnestly recommended; also the quill toothpick. The wood toothpicks so generally furnished at public eating places are a source of much evil to the soft tissues between the teeth. All kinds of metallic toothpicks are objectionable, though I am aware that it is the practice of some dentists to commend them to their patients.

The value of a decided polished surface of the tooth becomes very apparent to those who have had the operation performed; the facility with which such teeth can be kept clean is evident; and although this condition may have been secured at considerable expense, yet it is an investment that will pay a good rate for interest. I do not think many dentists have much idea of the beautiful polish that a human tooth will take. Many teeth are capable of a great improvement in this direction which are now a decided detriment to what might otherwise be a pleasing face. We know that the general idea among the people is, that interfering with the surfaces of the teeth destroys the enamel, but we also know that this is a popular error.—G. A. Mills, in Dental Cosmos.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

SATURDAY, Jan. 31.—The market to-day was neither a good one nor yet a bad one. The sudden change in the temperature, no doubt has had something to do with it. There were few purchasers present, and as a general thing they took what they wanted and left for home, not desiring to hunt for bargains as is usually the custom. There was an abundant supply of beef far in excess of the demand, and many quarters were taken home again. Some very fine beef was sold at $5.50 per cwt., the highest price yet paid this year; this was, however, an exceptional lot. The range may be said to be the same as last week, $3.50 to $4.50. Mutton, steady at quotations, few carcasses in, with an equally light demand, and no change to note. Pork was scarce and slow of sale. Chickens were in request, and a slight advance was noticeable; some fine large fowls brought 40c. per pair, while the bulk were sold at 30c. to 35c. Ducks were scarce, the demand being light; no change in prices were noted. Turkeys were in fair supply, and sold at an average of 70c. each. Geese went slow at 40c.; 45c. was paid for some very fine ones. Butter sold at the highest quotations, 20c., yet some fine butter sold as low as 17c.; 18c. and 19c. were the ruling figures, the supply was equal to the demand. Eggs were plenty at 15c., some, however, selling at 17c. per doz. Lard advanced a cent to-day, selling at 11c. Potatoes, 60c. to 65c., excepting one lot, which was selling at 70c. Apples in fair supply at 75c. per bag. Turnips, 20c. per bag. Parsnips, 60c. per bushel. Hay, no change, but slow of sale. Oats were more plentiful, and sold at an advance; some lots selling at 34c. The market seems to have advanced and we have to add a cent to our quotations. Peas are coming forward in larger quantities, 60c. being the ruling figure. Wheat is coming in rapidly again, there seems to be continued excitement in the grain market; $1.17 to $1.18 are the figures to-day for both spring and fall wheat. The break has to a certain extent been checked, but it cannot be controlled much longer, and lower prices may at any moment be looked for.

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

To be thoroughly happy you must be well. To be well in thousands of cases, you must take the great medicine, which relieves, regulates and renovates disorderly systems—Victoria Buchu Uva Ursi. For Bright's disease of the kidneys, diabetes, and all diseases of the urinary system, its timely use is very beneficial. For sale by all dealers at $1 per bottle. w5d23-2w

Our food furnishes material for the growth and nourishment of the body by absorption and assimilation. In like manner Victoria Hypophosphites acts in the cure of disease. When swallowed, it is absorbed, taken up by the veins, and circulated through the system, with the blood, reaching the most hidden and remote parts. It is evident, therefore, that the whole system must feel the effects of the remedy. For sale by all dealers. w5d23-2w

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back lassitude, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated snuffing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose; in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first stages use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild purgative to remove the tightness across the forehead, etc. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. w5d23-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Irish Relief Fund.

We are pleased to learn that the collectors have thus far met with great success in collecting funds for the relief of the poor of Ireland. Drs. Kincaid and Boucher have collected upwards of one hundred dollars in the district assigned them. As soon as the lists are completed, they are to be prepared for publication.

From Headquarters.

We have seen a postal card from Mr. H. G. Vennor dated the 29th Jan., and worded as follows:—

"There is a bundle of snow and a package of cold weather making straight for Peterborough and will likely reach there Monday or Tuesday next—may last three or four days, but mild weather will follow it again. Therefore if you have faith, make your arrangements accordingly."

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh to brisk, westerly to south-westerly winds; partly cloudy, colder weather, possibly followed to-morrow by snow areas. At Peterborough the thermometer indicated at 9 o'clock this morning, 24°, with little or no variation during the day. Several snow flurries have passed over but leaving nothing to indicate their presence.

St. Paul's Church.

The annual meeting of the congregation of St. Paul's Church was held in the school room on Wednesday evening last, at which there was a large attendance of the members. A bountiful tea was provided and generously partaken of by many of those present. The meeting was called to order by the Rev. Mr. Torrance at about 7.30. After the usual opening exercises, Col. Haultain was unanimously appointed chairman, who, after a few preliminary remarks, called for the report of the session, which was read by Mr. Erskine, the clerk, after which, in the following order, reports from the Deacon's Court, Sabbath School, Music Committee and the Treasurer's statement were read. Several gentlemen took part in the discussion of the many topics touched upon in these. From what we can learn the congregation is to be congratulated upon its position. The amount raised for missions by the congregation was $900.60, and by the Sabbath School $250.35.

LIVE STOCK TRADE.

A report dated London, Jan. 17, from E. Mertens, says:—

"Our trade has been dull this week, and prices have given way somewhat, particularly for sheep, of which there has been an over supply. Cattle remained, however, still dear, and prospects look well for early shipments."

On motion of Mr. CLARK, (chairman), the amended report of the Committee on Petitions was received and adopted.

THE LATE JAMES MILLAR, ESQ.

Mr. PEARCE presented the report of the Select Committee appointed to draft an address of condolence to the family of the late James Millar, Esq., as follows:—

To the family of the late James Millar, Esq.:

It is with feelings of the deepest sorrow, that we, the members of and officials of the County of Peterborough have learned of the sad bereavement you recently sustained by the lamented death of your highly esteemed and honored father, who was a member of this Council continuously since the year 1865. His good judgment and the able assistance he rendered his colleagues in promoting all measures calculated to forward the welfare of the public at large, are indelibly impressed on the memory of this Council. We feel it a duty to express the loss which this Council has sustained. We and the people of the County, particularly the inhabitants of the township of Otonabee, in which township he so long and efficiently occupied the position of Reeve, bow in humble submission to the unerring wisdom of the divine decree which removed from our midst one whose loss and usefulness is universally acknowledged. We desire to convey to you an expression of the high opinion in which he was held by us, and at the same time place on the records of this Council at this, the first session of our Council since his lamented death, this humble expression of condolence to you, his surviving family. We deem it a privilege in thus alluding to his usefulness to state that his colleagues fully recognizing his services and ability, elected him to the highest position in their gift, that of Warden of our County. In conclusion we beg to assure you that he will still live in the memory and recollection of this Council and the people of this County as an honored and worthy man.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

On Friday afternoon the Rev. V. Clementi, Mr. Cluxton and Mr. Garvey appeared before the Finance Committee of the County Council as a deputation to ask for a grant to the Irish Relief Fund.

Mr. CLEMENTI, in addressing the Committee, referred to the great necessity which existed for aiding the people of Ireland at the present time. He explained what the people of Peterborough were now doing, and referred to the liberal manner in which several of the municipalities in this county aided the starving people of Lancashire some years ago, when the township of Smith alone gave $400, and other townships, through their councils, large sums. He concluded with an eloquent appeal for similar liberality in the present even more urgent need of the people of Ireland.

Mr. CLUXTON also addressed the Council. He said that Ireland had arrived at another sad epoch of its sad history. In 1847, during the great famine, aid was rendered, but it came too late, as the population of the country was reduced between two and three millions by that great calamity. At this time the peoples are moving quickly, and liberal contributions are being made, and will continue to be made, and will come in time; but what would a million of dollars be when we consider the vast number of sufferers. Other nationalities may think that the Irish people want because of their improvidence. But, although the Irish are generous, they have not many opportunities of displaying this trait in their character, as in ordinary or normal seasons. Although they may have a cow, a pig, and some hens, the butter, pig, and eggs all go to pay the rent of their small holding, and they have nothing but potatoes and buttermilk for their food, with only the coarsest of clothing. It is likewise thought that there is in Ireland a lack of industry, but they have but little to encourage them—nothing to look forward to. The Swiss and French small holders of land in bad years have other products to depend upon; but in Ireland, with its successive crop of potatoes, when they fail all is gone. Take Flanders, for instance, whose earliest colonists found there nothing but an expanse of intermingled sand and marsh; whoever pleased was permitted to squat and to undertake its reclamation piecemeal. By toil and tending for generation after generation with that labor of love never exhibited except by men working on their own account, could the original sand be converted into rich mould whose exuberance now strikes every stranger with astonishment. In Ireland the landlord may wish to extend his demesne, but the small holders are absorbed, the tenants evicted and the cabins pulled down; or in years when the crop fails the tenant may be evicted from his inability to pay his rent. When we find a person in this country sick having every necessary comfort and attendance, we sympathize with the sufferer. But when we look to Ireland at the present time, and see the poor mother and her children at the verge of the grave, starving for want of fuel, starving for want of clothing, and starving for want of food, our humanity is touched. He thanked God we knew little of hunger in this country. He trusted that this urgent appeal would have their sympathies, and that they would grant aid to these suffering people in their time of calamity.

COBOURG.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PETERBOROUGH BONSPIEL.—The "Waverly" curlers are practising every night at their rink, in anticipation of carrying the silver tankard to Cobourg from the Peterborough bonspiel.

ENTERTAINMENTS.—Concerts and entertainments are arranged for every night for two weeks hence. On the evening of Wednesday, the 28th instant, the "Ever Ready" Fire Co. held their entertainment, which was better attended than anything for a long while. Mrs. Caldwell and W. H. Clark, both of Hamilton, were present, and took part in the entertainment.

BOBCAYGEON.

WHARVES.—The Independent says:—A petition of the steamboat proprietors, and captains, and mates, and engineers has been in circulation for signature, praying that the Dominion Government will improve the lower wharf at the locks, which is so situated that steamboats and barges are forced in passing to touch a rock under water and frequently causes great detention and loss of time.

OUR SHIP YARD.—The ship yard down at Little Bob is humming with business. Several scows are being built, a large number of hands are employed, and there is quite a scow boom.

TEAMS.—A large number of teams have passed through here. They were pointing north, for the lumber shanties.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read it in another column. d146-1y

An Old Pensioner.—David Brady, aged 95, a pensioner of 1812, was charged before the magistrate this morning with drunkenness, and being weak and ill. He was sent down for 60 days that he might have proper care. The prisoner stood guard over Napoleon at St. Helena, and helped to convey his remains to their last resting place. Fifty years ago he was discharged from the British army as unfit for service, and since that time has led a hard, roving life.

A Fratricide.—Robert De Courcier, his brother's murderer, being called into the dock this morning, Mr. Dalton McCarthy, his counsel, asked for an adjournment to next assizes on account of the serious illness of Robert Stinson. Mr. Irving, the county judge, said:—"One could not help wondering how such a perfect specimen of God's creation, man, could be guilty of the awful crime of the murder of his own brother." Beyond slight twitchings now and again, and an eager look, the prisoner gave no signs that he was aware of the terrible position in which he was placed.

The Murder of a Husband.—The inquest on the body of the murdered man Sabourin is proceeding to-day at Billings Bridge before Coroner Lynn. The evidence of the daughters, who witnessed the bloody affray will convict the woman of the crime. The prisoner was present and did not appear to fully realize the position in which she was placed.

A Handsome Present.—The Governor-General has presented the Dragoon Guards with new helmets for escort duty in severe weather.

Low Temperature.—The thermometer registered 25° below zero this morning.

Municipal Funds Seized.—A tiers saisie was served on the Secretary-Treasurer of the city, seizing all moneys in his hands belonging to the corporation, and calling upon him to appear at the court in Aylmer on the 13th Feb., to show cause why the amount in his hands should not be paid to La Banque Nationale of Ottawa. The bank caused this seizure to be made in virtue of a judgment to be given in his favor against the corporation of the City of Hull for $500 and $131 costs in the Superior Court at Aylmer last February. It is part of the bureau claim for work done on the charter of the city, which was transferred to La Banque Nationale. The Secretary-Treasurer collected a large amount of taxes before the day of polling at the last municipal election and the bank must have made quite a haul. This procedure will greatly embarass the Council as they were depending on the money in hand for other purposes. The payment of the expenses incurred for the the election of aldermen will now have to be postponed. The attorney for La Banque Nationale is Alderman Rochon.

The Canada Pacific.—It is understood that a large party of men will leave Ottawa for British Columbia shortly to work on the Yale-Kamloops Branch of the Pacific Railway.

The Legislative Buildings.—It is understood that when the proposition to erect new Parliament Buildings comes up in the Legislature, one of the strongest cards to be played by the opponents of the proposal is an opinion given by Col. Gzowski, that in a few years a great deal more could be obtained for the present site and buildings than could be now. He thinks the necessities of the traffic of the Grand Trunk will compel the company to look for additional premises, and that they might be induced to become the purchasers of the present Legislative Halls. Considerable objection to the proposed site in the Queen's Park is also being manifested, in consequence of its distance from the centre of the city and the hotels, railway stations, &c.

THE POLICE AND THE NIHILISTS.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 2.—The Russian police having proved inefficient in the prolonged struggle with the Nihilists, a large number of German police have been summoned from the Baltic provinces of the Empire.

INDIA AND IRELAND.

London, Feb. 2.—A Calcutta despatch reports that committees to collect funds for the relief of the Irish distress have been formed in Madras and Bombay.

GERMAN POLITICS.

London, Feb. 2.—A Berlin correspondent asserts that a complete understanding has been arrived at on all important questions regarding the home and foreign policy between Bismarck and the Emperor William. The same correspondent says that the rumor that the Crown Prince has been commissioned to visit the Pope to come to an understanding on the church struggle is unfounded. Bismarck has resumed his functions with all his old energy.

ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Berlin, Feb. 2.—Dr. Siemens contends that he was the first to divide the electric light and to utilize it. He refers to his electric illuminations of the imperial arcades, achieved long before Edison's experiments.

FRENCH TAXES REMITTED.

Paris, Feb. 2.—The budget scheme for 1881 which was submitted on Saturday put the expenditure at 2,773,391,474 francs, and as the existing taxes produced 2,777,193,908 last year, there is a surplus at once available for the remission of taxation, which will be on alcoholic drinks.

ITALY AND AUSTRIA.

London, Feb. 2.—A Rome correspondent says the Italian Minister of the Interior has issued a circular to the prefects of the Provinces bordering on Austria, pointing out the great importance the Government attaches to the cultivation of friendly relation with Austria, and instructing them to repress itinerant political agitators and emigrants.

AMERICAN.

THE "HUASCAR" BLOCKADING.

Panama, Jan. 23.—The Huascar is reported as being employed on the blockade of Mallendo.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Panama, Jan. 24.—DeLesseps' surveys are being rapidly and efficiently prosecuted. Eight working parties are in the field, employing over 120 men. No other surveying parties were so large, so well appointed, or under such efficient and intelligent direction as the present. The people of Panama and Columbia heartily wish DeLesseps success, but there is not the slightest disposition shown by the Columbian Government to grant a concession for the construction of a canal to the citizens of one nation more than another. It is regarded as an international affair. No difficulty would be experienced in having that portion of Panama embraced in the cities at the termini, and a reasonable territory along the line of the canal made into a neutral zone, under a government guaranteed by the great powers and free to all. But so far as the Monroe doctrine is concerned, the people here do not see its application, and would resent any serious interference from the outside world in that direction as an insult and outrage.

A MUNIFICENT DONATION.

New York, Feb. 1.—Cardinal McCloskey has sent a letter to Jas. O'Brien, warmly thanking the latter for a contribution of $1,000 to the Irish relief fund.

AFLOAT ON AN ICE CAKE.

Watertown, N.Y., Feb. 1.—Yesterday afternoon eleven men with a team left Gananoque for Grindstone Island. A heavy gale of wind broke up the ice. Geo. Cummings, of Grindstone Island, was drowned. Geo. Pann, of Gananoque, was rescued from a floating ice cake after seven hours' exposure.

PARNELL MAKES ANOTHER ASSERTION.

New York, Feb. 1.—Mr. Parnell writes to the Herald in reference to Lord Churchill's contradiction of the statement that the Queen gave nothing to relieve the famine in 1847. Parnell says he finds he might have gone still further and said, with perfect accuracy, that not only did she give nothing, but she actually intercepted £6,000, which the Sultan of Turkey desired to contribute to the famine fund. Parnell asserts the Queen had the British ambassador inform the Sultan that she limited her contribution to £2,000, and it would not be in good taste for the Sultan to donate more than the Queen.

RELIEF FOR IRELAND.

New York, Feb. 2.—By the direction of Cardinal McCloskey collections were taken up in all the Roman Catholic Churches of this city yesterday on behalf of the sufferers in Ireland. The amount collected is estimated at $25,000. The delegates of the Ancient Order of Hibernians met yesterday and decided to raise a relief fund for the sufferers in Ireland. The Order numbers 20,000 members, and it is expected that the fund will reach from $25,000 to $50,000.

GRANT AND BLAINE.

New York, Feb. 2.—The Herald's Pittsburg despatch says that the Republican County Committee on Saturday, after a stormy session, elected delegates who were instructed to favor Grant by a vote of 106 to 43 for Blaine. The Herald's Harrisburg report says that Cameron is there to guard the interests of Grant at the coming convention. He says that Blaine is the weakest candidate on the list of aspirants, as he cannot carry New York, the pivot state, while Grant would sweep it.

A CONSTABLE'S MISTAKE.

New York, Feb. 2.—James Lacey, who was arrested at Newark on Friday, when supposed to be drunk, and who was afterwards proved to be suffering from a fractured skull, died yesterday.

NO JUSTICE FOR INDIANS.

Washington, Feb. 2.—It is understood that a lady in Boston wrote to Schurz, urging that a suit be begun in the Supreme Court to test the rights of the Poncas, and offering to pay all legal expenses. This Schurz declined without offering a satisfactory explanation. It is reported from a trustworthy source that Schurz has determined to arrest Standing Bear and Brighteyes if they come to Washington, on the ground that the latter is absent from her reservation without a pass. The friends of the Poncas believe this, and have taken steps to prevent it.

INDIAN AGENCY TRICKS.

New York, Feb. 2.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says the person who represented himself as Edward Knapp, who, with Inspector Hammond, appeared in Arizona at the time of Agent Hart's resignation, and to whom a mine on the reservation was sold for a trifle, turns out to be Commissioner Hoyt's son, who travelled to Arizona under an assumed name. It was this revelation that suddenly shattered Schurz' confidence in Hoyt and caused the latter's summary dismissal.

CONTAGION IN A HOSPITAL.

New York, Feb. 2.—The Herald charges that erysipelas is raging in one ward of the Bellevue Hospital, and that the life of all the inmates of the Hospital is endangered from contagion.

MUTUAL AVOIDANCE.

Much comment was excited on the acquittal of Mrs. Smith and Cove Bennet on Saturday, by the evident anxiety of both prisoners to avoid one another.

THE INTER-OCEANIC CANALS.

New York, Feb. 2.—A Washington special report to the Herald says it is understood that a bill which is to be introduced to-day for the appointment of a commission to examine both the Nicaragua and Panama Canal routes, provides for four commissioners, three engineers and one naval officer. Menocal, an engineer in the navy, has been selected as one of the commission. The bill appropriates $30,000 for the expenses. Menocal expects that the bill will be passed this week, and the commission will sail for Panama on February 10th. Menocal thinks that a new survey would reduce the estimated cost of the Nicaragua route from 52 millions, the former estimate, to 47 and a half millions.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Easton, Mass., Feb. 2.—Early on Sunday morning John D. Gardiner and his wife were burned to death in their house, which was also consumed. Both had been drinking with callers on Saturday night. It is supposed that a kerosene lamp was accidently overturned.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Senor Arosma, the Columbian Minister, said yesterday that if France should seek to exercise a protectorate over DeLesseps' canal project, it would not be by reason of any warrant given in the concession to DeLesseps, and the Columbian Government would be found ready to act with the United States in support of the principles of the Monroe doctrine.

A STRINGENT AGREEMENT.

New York, Feb. 2.—P. Lorillard & Co., tobacco manufacturers, have distributed among all their employees a circular, prescribing the conditions upon which only they would be retained. The circular demands the signing of an agreement by each employee, granting to the firm the right to search his person or home at any time for tools or other property stolen from the firm. The agreement also absolves the firm from all liability for damage to the health or life of an employee occuring on the firm's premises. The circular causes intense excitement.

DANGER FROM THE UTES.

New York, Feb., 2.—A Washington report to the Times says that Governor Pitkins, of Colorado, in a conversation last night, represented the condition of affairs in the vicinity of Los Pinos as being very serious. The settlements are kept in a state of constant apprehension by the hostile demonstrations of the Indians. The people residing to the south of the Indian reservation in Ouray County are now suffering from a lack of supplies, and they cannot obtain relief because the Indians are in full command of the only road over which supplies can be hauled. The people of that section are urgently appealing to Pitkin for military protection, and say many White River Utes, as well as Uncompaghre Utes, are demanding rations which the agent and employees are powerless to refuse. Within the past few days, Douglas, the chief of the murderers and ravishers, has been furnished with provisions at Los Pinos Agency by the Government, which ought to hang rather than feed him. The Uncompaghre Utes by their acts emphatically declare that they are in full sympathy with the outlaws. In a short time both tribes will be starving and demanding food from the agent, who will be powerless to appease their hunger, while the national Government is apparently determined to repeat its White River experiment by withholding protection from the officers at the stations in the midst of these fiends. Unless troops are placed here our families and ourselves must suffer the perils of a barbarous Indian war with famine staring us in the face.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

Wheatland, N.J., Feb. 2.—Wm. Palmer, of Williamsport, was found frozen to death in Wheatland woods. It is supposed that he attempted to cross the woods while intoxicated.

GUARDING THE QUEEN.

New York, Feb. 2.—A London despatch says that the authorities are understood to be taking extraordinary precautions to secure the personal safety of Queen Victoria, during her progress from Buckingham palace to Westminster palace to open Parliament on Thursday. It is believed that information of a projected attack by members of the International Society has been received. The entire route will be lined with troops.

A TROTTER'S DEATH.

Long Branch, Feb. 2.—The well-known trotting mare "Midnight," owned by John and Charles Wheeler, of Eatontown, died yesterday of blood poisoning. Her record was 2.20.

MR. PELL'S REPORT.

A Comparison Unfavourable to the United States—Canada's Future Painted in Glowing Colors.

London, Jan. 31.—Mr. Pell, M.P., who visited the United States to gain information of the agricultural interests, has made his report. It is very voluminous, but treats mainly of the comparative condition of the farming interests of the United States and England, offering no satisfactory solution of the causes of the depression. It appears more like a studied effort to reconcile the English farmer to his lot than to attempt to show how he may better his condition. Mr. Pell dwells on the fact of British emigration to Mexico, and in a tone which would discourage such emigration. He considers at length the relative merits of Canada and the United States, and generally to the discouragement of the latter as a place of residence, and paints Canada's future in most glowing colours. He admits the recent prosperity of American farmers, but claims that the farmers of England occupy a higher social position, are better and happier, realizing more uniform and reliable returns, and are less the victims of transporting monopolies. He also claims that England sustains her supremacy in scientific knowledge, and that her productions of the farm are superior to those of the United States.

Daily Evening Review

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1880.

CENTRAL EXHIBITION EXPENDITURE.

Had not the Cobourg World concluded an article upon the above subject with the announcement that it would "be very glad to answer any questions on this important subject either from Peterborough or anywhere else," we should have been disposed to let its article pass as unworthy of notice, because it is apparently the outcome of a prejudiced mind.

In the article referred to a comparison is instituted between the expenditures at Cobourg and the last exhibition held in Peterborough, with the evident intention of making its readers believe that the latter was the more extravagant of the two. Had the World stated the facts fairly we would have been content to leave the reader to draw his own conclusions, but it does not do so, and if in exposing the fallaciousness of some of its figures and conclusions we say aught that seems to reflect on the management at Cobourg, they must blame the World, not us, for rendering such a discussion necessary.

While the World is careful to deduct every possible cent from the ordinary expenditure, and place it under the head of exceptional at Cobourg, it has not deducted a single cent from that at Peterborough. For instance, it is careful to deduct therefrom the $14 paid Mr. McClelland in 1878 for expenses incurred in recovering a fowl which the efficient (?) constables employed at Cobourg permitted to be stolen; while it makes no allowance for the fact that what it calls working expenses in 1879 included $70 for a band, while in 1878 the music was paid for under the head of prizes.

Again it informs its readers that the gross expenditure at Peterborough will be $2,732.24, whereas the auditors' report, (which includes everything to pay as well as paid), shows it to be [illegible], another difference of $67.34 in favour of Peterborough, as compared with the World's figures. And yet again the World gravely informs its readers that Cobourg handed over $131.67, whereas Peterborough will only hand over $67.64. We beg to inform the World that Peterborough will hand over nothing—but that on the other hand it only received from Societies outside of its own county $63.24, against $334.75 received from outside societies at Cobourg; and further that the balance of $131 received at Peterborough from Cobourg, came subject to the payment of a $40 prize, reducing it in reality to $91, against the $379 received by Cobourg from Lindsay.

But that there may be no mistake about the relative merits or demerits of the two expenditures, we beg to submit the following figures, collated from the auditors' reports of 1878 and 1879:

	Cobourg.	Peterboro'.
Printing	$ 221 00	$ 180 25
Judges	162 00	120 00
Constables	120 00	61 50
Salaries	300 00	300 00
Superintendents	10 00	9 00
Postage, Stationery, and Telegraphing	43 85	17 50
Committee expenses	212 65	135 56
Auditors	10 00	12 10
Drawing Treasurer's Bond	3 50
Other payments	76 86	94 86
Total of these payments	$1,068 11	$ 951 15
Prizes of previous year, paid	46 00	40 00
" year	2,596 75	1,768 25
Band, included in prizes in 1878		70 00
Total expenditure	$3,712 36	$2,684 40

Evidently the success of the basis adopted a year ago, combined with the financial success of the last exhibition troubles the World, little as it tries to make of it, because it tries to explain it by stating that only three of the committee came from a distance, and that therefore the committee expenses were much less. As a matter of fact, a majority of the Executive Committee resided outside of the county of Peterborough, West Northumberland itself having two upon it, East Durham one, West Durham two, and North and South Victoria each one, or seven, in all out of the whole number of thirteen. In fact, these outside members of the committee cost the association $68.65, while the societies which they represented contributed $63.24 to the funds of the association, and which contribution secured to the members of all these societies the right of exhibiting free of charge. We trust this "answer from Peterborough" will suit the World.

PORT HOPE.

Firemen's Social.—On Friday the members of the Hope Extinguisher Company gave a return supper to the East End Chemical Engine Company at the Royal Hotel, the guests being received first at the very comfortably furnished head quarters of the Company.

RELATIVE VALUE OF TWO M.P.P'S.

East Peterborough and North Victoria are both represented by two supporters of the Mowat Government. They are both no doubt equally anxious for the development of the new townships in their respective ridings, but the value which the Mowat Government puts upon the respective representatives of these constituencies is not perhaps unaptly represented by the appropriations which the estimates contain for colonization roads in North Victoria and East Peterborough. Look at them:

NORTH VICTORIA GETS
Bobcaygeon Road, North	$1,350 00
Snowdon, from Monck Road to Railway	1,200 00
[illegible]	[illegible]
Peterson Road, east of Minden	500 00
Buckhorn Road, north of Monck Road	500 00
Lutterworth Road	400 00
Stanhope Road	400 00
New Road in Minden to connect Dysart	400 00
Monck Road, between Kinmount and Norland	250 00
Carden and Dalton Road	[illegible]
Total	$6,000 00
EAST PETERBOROUGH:
Chandos Road	$1,000 00

Besides the sums already mentioned, there is an item of $1,500 for "repairs on Buckhorn, Methuen, Bobcaygeon and Burleigh roads," which may be considered common to both constituencies, but the lion's share of which will no doubt go where the lion's share has already gone.

PETERBOROUGH GAOL.

The following is an extract from the report of the Inspector of Prisons, &c., for 1879:—

PETERBOROUGH GAOL.
Prisoners committed during the year	90
Greatest number confined at any one time	16
Number of re-committals	30
Total cost of maintaining Gaol	$2,209.22

I inspected this gaol at 7.30 p.m. on the 23rd January, when the prisoners were locked up in their cells for the night. The gaoler being absent, I passed through with the turnkey and matron.

Only 6 prisoners were in confinement, 3 of whom were men and 3 women. Four of the number were in custody for vagrancy, 1 for burglary, and 1 for larceny. I found that the number of commitments during the winter had been exceptionally low, and that no lunatics had been in custody since the commencement of the current official year. The only work provided for the prisoners was the cutting of a little wood and the cleaning of the premises. The gaol was only in fair order, although clean throughout. The stock of bedding was ample, but the regulation clothing had not been obtained for the sentenced male prisoners. I requested the Sheriff to get the consent of the County Council for a dozen suits being ordered.

I pointed out that the turnkey's bed-room was altogether too far away from the wards, either for safety or proper supervision, and that, in the reconstruction then going on in the Court House, it would be well to remedy the defect.

The various books were examined, and instructions given regarding the manner of keeping the register.

I instructed Mr. Hayes to make the second inspection of this gaol. He reported to me as under:—

"I visited the Peterborough gaol on the 11th August, when there were 4 female and 1 male prisoners in custody, all of whom were under sentence for vagrancy.

"The books were examined, and the gaoler was requested to adhere to the instructions previously seconded by you regarding the proper method of keeping the register.

"The gaol was generally in good order, and cleanliness prevailed. Instructions were given to stop the practice of leaving the cell doors open during the day time."

SCOTLAND.

Within a week nearly two hundred unclean salmon have been taken from the Tweed.

Fines amounting to £101 were imposed in the Jedburgh Sheriff Court on the 14th inst. for fishing in the river Tweed.

The Glasgow United Trades Council has paid during the past year £20,000 to unemployed and sick members of different trade organizations in the city.

The first direct cargo from Cyprus has arrived in Leith, consisting of 350 tons of locust beans and 150 tons of timber for Hope & Co., besides a small quantity of wine consigned to George Martin.

Dr. Isaac Balfour, Professor of Botany, has started at the head of an expedition sent by the British Association and the Royal Society of London to investigate the flora and fauna of the island of Socrata, regarding which there is but little known.

The U.P. Presbytery has rejected a memorial from the session of Pollock Street Church, Glasgow, calling attention to the Rev. Fergus Ferguson's utterances on "the intermediate state," in his lecture on "The Dilemma of Modern Orthodoxy."

The desolation caused by the recent gales in Iona is said to surpass anything ever seen on the island. Whole families were trying to get shelter at the peat fires on the hearths of their roofless homes, with the open sky above them, and nothing to protect them from the severe showers of hail and rain.

A letter has been sent to the Marchioness of Ailsa, threatening her life when she goes to Maybole. The Marchioness has taken the wise plan of publishing it, stating to the workingmen of Maybole, in whose welfare she takes a kindly and personal interest, that she knows the letter has not been written by any of them, and that she will continue to visit among them with perfect confidence.

The special congregation, consisting of five Cardinals, appointed by the Pope to examine the question of annulling the marriage of the Hereditary Prince of Monaco and Lady Mary Hamilton have delivered judgment, pronouncing the marriage to be invalid; but at the same time affirming the legitimacy of the son, the issue of the marriage, and the right of the Prince to provide for his education.

The annual dinner of the Inverness Gaelic Society took place in Glasgow on the 7th inst. The chief, Mr. Lachlan Macdonald, of Skaebost, gave an interesting address on the Highlander as a soldier, and maintained that, however great and glorious had been the military past of the Highlands, there were still men left with the spirit and the ability to emulate the feats of their heroic ancestors should occasion offer.

OMEMEE.

Carnival.—The masquerade carnival in the rink, Wednesday evening, passed off very satisfactorily. The ice was in splendid condition; quite a number appeared in costume, which was quite appropriate in most cases to the character represented; but the spectators were not as numerous as the occasion warranted. The proceedings were greatly enlivened by the excellent playing of the Band.—Herald.

CAMEL vs. LOCOMOTIVE.

The Construction of Railways in Central Asia.

London, Jan. 31.—A despatch from Vienna says the speedy construction of a railway from Pesth to Candahar is spoken favourably of in military circles here. It is urged that if the line is not rapidly made, the future struggle in Central Asia will resolve itself into a contest between the locomotive and the camel. Russia continues the construction of railways in Asia without intermission. Amongst other trans-Caucasian companies, the successors of the Poti-Tiflis Company have just had their statutes approved by the Government. By these they are required within eight months to submit plans, and to commence work within thirty days afterwards. Two lines, namely, the Tiflis-Boku line with a junction in Tiflis uniting Boku with Poti, the whole length between 302 miles, and, secondly, the so called Naphta line from Boku to Sabuntshi and Surachan, connecting Boku by a branch line of seventeen miles to Naphta. The trans-Caucasian company will then possess altogether 337 miles of railway.

Prospering.

The Peterborough Daily Review has entered its third year under the most encouraging circumstances. The Review is an excellent daily, and we are pleased to note that it is meeting with that gratifying success which it so richly merits.—Collingwood Messenger.

There is no person living that who suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the woe and heartache
Waiting for us down the road,
If our lips could taste the wormwood,
If our backs could feel the load,
Would we waste the day in wishing
For the day that ne'er can be?
Would we wait with such impatience
For our ships to come from sea?

If we knew the baby fingers,
Pressed against the window pane,
Would be cold and stiff to-morrow—
Never trouble us again—
Would the bright eyes of our darling
Catch the frown upon our brow?
Would the print of rosy fingers
Vex us then as they do now?

Ah, those little ice-cold fingers,
How they point our memories back
To the hasty words and actions
Strewn along our backward track!
How those little hands remind us,
As in snowy grace they lie,
Not to scatter thorns—but roses—
For our reaping by and by!

Strange we never prize the music,
Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown;
Strange that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone;
Strange the summer skies and sunshine
Never seem one-half so fair
As when winter's snowy pinions
Shake their white down in the air.

Lips from which the seal of silence
None but God can roll away
Never blossomed in such beauty
As adorns the mouth to-day;
And sweet words that freight our memory
With their beautiful perfume
Come to us in sweeter accents
Through the portals of the tomb.

Let us gather up the sunbeams
Lying all around our path;
Let us keep the wheat and roses,
Casting out the thorns and chaff;
Let us find our sweetest comfort
In the blessings of to-day,
With the patient hand removing
All the briars from our way.

A MIRACLE IN IRELAND.

An affair of less local importance, unconnected with religion, than the apparitions which have now, on three occasions, been seen by numbers of persons of all sexes and of all ages, would long before this have occupied a very prominent place in the columns of the press. All that may be said in the following lines is an expression of the feelings and the judgment which the ecclesiastical superiors may express upon the facts of which they are really cognizant.

The chapel of Knock, at which the apparitions have occurred, is about five miles from Claremorris, and its gilt cross which ornaments the lofty tower can be seen for miles around. The priest who so worthily presides over the parish is the venerable archdeacon of the diocese, the Very Rev. Bartholomew Cavanagh. The chapel is of cruciform shape. The sacristy occupies the upper and lower shaft, and it is immediately behind the high altar. In the gable of the sacristy there is a Gothic window about five feet high by two broad; its lowest part is about twelve feet from the ground. The remainder of the gable is plain, and was covered outside by a good substantial coating of cement to protect the wall from the rains, which beat with great violence, especially from this side. On this gable wall of the sacristy were seen the extraordinary lights, in the midst of which the Blessed Virgin, accompanied by St. Joseph and St. John, the Evangelist, appeared. On Wednesday last, on arriving at the place, there were a great number of people on their knees before the scene of the apparition, and around were already many ex votos in the shape of a crutch, walking sticks, and statues, sent by those who believe that they have been miraculously cured through the intercession of the Blessed Virgin by the application of some of the cement and dust taken from the wall, the greater part of which is disfigured by persons breaking off portions of the cement, some of which, following the example of the pious people, we also carried off with us. Tuesday evening, the 21st of August last, the eve of the octave day of the assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, was accompanied by a blinding drizzle of rain, which continued till the next day. As some persons were hurriedly going along the road which leads by the chapel, at about 7.30, they perceived the wall beautifully illuminated by a white flickering light, through which could be perceived brilliant stars, twinkling as on a fine, frosty night. The first person who saw it passed on, but others soon came and remained, and these saw, covering a large portion of the gable end of the sacristy, an altar, and on its gospel side the figures of St. John the Evangelist, the Blessed Virgin, and St. Joseph. On the altar, which stood about eight feet from the ground, and immediately under the window, a lamb stood, and rising up behind the lamb was a crucifix with the figure of our Lord upon it. The altar was surrounded with a brilliant white light, through which, up and down, angels seemed to be flitting. Near the altar, and immediately to the gospel side, but nearer the ground, was St. John having a mitre on his head and holding the book of the gospels open in his left hand as if reading from it. He held his right hand raised, and in the act of blessing, the index and middle finger being extended after the manner adopted by bishops. To St. John's right stood the Blessed Virgin, having her hands extended and raised towards her shoulders, the palms of her hands turned toward the people, and her eyes raised up toward heaven. To the Blessed Virgin's right was St. Joseph, turned towards her and in an inclined posture. The figures remained visible from 7.30 to 10 o'clock, witnessed during that time by about twenty persons, who forgot all about the heavy rain that was then falling, and which drenched them thoroughly. The light at the chapel was seen by people who live near the place. She appeared a second time on New Year's Day, between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock inst., immediately after Mass.

On Monday evening last, the eve of the Epiphany, a bright light was again visible, and from 11 o'clock p.m. until 2 p.m. was seen by a very large number, of whom two were members of the Royal Irish Constabulary, who were on patrol duty that evening. One of them said that up to that time he did not believe in it, but he was really startled by the brightness of the light which he saw. Many cures have been already worked through the intercession of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and by the application of the cement taken from the chapel wall. We have heard from the mouths of most trustworthy witnesses an account of nearly a dozen cures of which the narrators themselves were eye-witnesses.

In addition to what we have already written regarding the visions seen at the chapel of Knock, two remarkable miracles, witnessed by hundreds of persons, were performed yesterday, namely, sight restored to two girls, one of whom had, on the testimony of her mother, not seen anything from her birth. She had been several times with physicians in Dublin, but all to no purpose. Yesterday, in the presence of hundreds, she received the use of her sight, having visited three times the spot where the Blessed Virgin Mary is said to have appeared, and after praying three times in honour of the mother of God.—Tuam News.

REVIVAL IN ST. CATHARINES.

A Great Religious Movement in the City—All the Churches Thronged.

St. Catharines, Jan. 29.—Mr. E. P. Hammond has been conducting revival services in St. Catharines for nearly three weeks. He has met with marked and unexampled success. Over six hundred persons have been examined and given in their names, professing to have experienced a change of heart. Services have been held during the whole time of the revival in all the churches continuously and almost simultaneously. Meetings have also been held in the drill shed, in the market place, and in the police office. St. Paul Street Methodist Church, the largest in the city, and capable of holding 1,600 persons, has been filled to its utmost capacity every night, and crowds were unable to gain admission. The Baptists, Presbyterians, and Methodists are working in the utmost harmony together. So great has been the awakening that not only are the people aroused in the city, but large numbers flock in from the surrounding country, all anxious and eager to hear and listen to the great revival preacher. The work has been productive of great good to many young men. Old hardened sinners, who hardly ever entered a church before, and perhaps never uttered a prayer, have succumbed, and tearfully told their experience, and given evidence of their desire to lead Christian lives. The work does not seem to be very emotional, but some deep and mysterious power is moving the people. Although the work has been going on for three weeks there is not a particle of abatement in the interest. Nothing in the history of St. Catharines ever caused such an universal feeling among the people. It is a great religious awakening. Deputations have come in from the adjoining towns and villages asking for Mr. Hammond's help. Urgent calls have also come from the leading cities in the Dominion asking Mr. Hammond to come and help them.

FARM AND GARDEN.

Ginger Cookies.—1 cup water, 2 cups molasses, 1½ cup lard, 1 tablespoonful soda, 2 do. ginger. A pinch of alum, to be dissolved in the water. Flour enough to roll out soft; bake quick.

Some Dairy Statistics.—There are over 12,000,000 milch cows in the United States, from which over 300,000,000 pounds of cheese and 980,000,000 pounds of butter were made during the past year.

Look Ahead.—A farmer should always think in advance of his work. The whole plan must be laid out in the head, before the hands are put to it. There is time yet left for thinking over what should be done in the next two or three busy months.

Curry the Cows.—No animal of the farm will show signs of neglect so soon as a cow. The coat gets rough and dirty, and the bones stand out with irregular and peculiar prominence. On the other hand, as a matter of course, good care gives the opposite appearance, and the creature is neat, clean, and plump. There is much in a good supply of wholesome food, but it, without occasional rubbing and currying, will not make the cow look and feel comfortable. It pays to curry the cows.

Keep the Good Calves.—As the cows come in, the best of the heifers may be selected for raising. There can be no better way to improve the stock of cows than to use a good bull and keep the best calves, well feeding and caring for them until matured. After these become cows a selection can again be made for breeding, and only the best retained. In a few years the value of dairy cows may be doubled by this careful practice of selection.

Values are Increasing.—Every relic of the long continued depression—the seven lean years—now happily gone by, is passing away. Prices are advancing, and every purchased thing costs considerably more than a year ago. The farmer who values his land and stock may justly put up the figures from 25 to 50 per cent. His income must be made to increase in proportion, and this must be done to a great extent by increasing in every possible way the productive value of his property.

Why can not we Grow Larger Crops?—There are localities where it may pay to grow small crops cheaply, where one may skin the land for a few years and leave it, just as in some places cattle are or have been killed for their hides and the carcasses left to decay. But every year these localities are growing more and more distant in the West, and in time land will be too valuable to be used in so wasteful a manner. In central and eastern localities the future prosperity of the farmers will depend upon the growth of larger crops by the expenditure of more labor on the land. To reach this end will be a work of time, but it will never be reached unless a beginning is made, and there was never a more propitious time to begin than now.

Care of Poultry.—The American Poultry Yard says:—We must shortly close up the doors and windows of our fowl-houses, to guard the occupants against the sharp air by day, and the chillier atmosphere at night. But let us be sufficiently careful to perform this operation sensibly, and not so stifle the birds that the emanations from their bodies will infect the internal atmosphere of the premises, and thus poison or sicken the stock. Ventilate the premises thoroughly every day and every night in the year. No matter how hot, how cold, how dry, the fresh air of heaven must be afforded your fowls, either by allowing them freedom out-of-doors altogether, or by supplying their quarters with this necessity to their comfort and thrift.

Gladstone's Cousin Goes for Him.

Rev. J. E. Gladstone, vicar of St. Matthew's, Wolverhampton, and cousin of the ex-Premier, speaking at a Conservative meeting in that town, alluded to the hon. gentleman, and said that the great cutter-down of trees, to whom they might well say, "Woodman, spare that tree," was once more flourishing his axe. He had said he did not preach confiscation, but if he did not preach that, he did preach "expropriation," which had rather a dangerous resemblance to confiscation. The speaker said it was rather extraordinary to notice how frequently the right hon. gentleman had either grown tired of a constituency or a constituency of him. In the old days of patronage he went to the pocket borough of Newark. Thence he proceeded to that ancient and illustrious seat of learning—his old University of Oxford. In the course of time even that loved and loving University rejected him. From Oxford he went to his native county of South Lancashire, but his own countrymen gradually grew weary of him, and he was cast out of Lancashire. From Lancashire he went to Greenwich, but there did not appear to be any very warm love between the representative and the constituency, and they next heard of him crossing the border and telling the electors there that if he was a born Englishman he was a blood Scotchman. King Solomon had said, "My son, fear thou the Lord and the King, and meddle not with them that are given to change."

Recently a tenant entered the office of a Tipperary land agent, and throwing a roll of notes on the table exclaimed: 'There's every penny I've got in the world. It's a year's rint, and ye may take it or lave it—if yov take it, I'll go to the workhouse; if ye lave it, I'll go to Ameriky on it.' The agent opened the notes and counted the money. 'Why, my good man, there is more than a year's rent here. There is over four year's rent in the bundle.' 'The devil there is,' cried the tenant putting his hand in his pocket—'begor, I gev you the wrong bundle of notes after all.'

It's a veteran jest to say that "while a hen lays an egg a ship lays to;" but on board the vessel you can actually see a delay.

W. FAIRWEATHER & Co.

A WORD TO GIRLS.

A terrible tragedy occurred recently in Baltimore which, contrary to our usual custom with regard to tales of crime, we repeat for the consideration of every young girl among our readers.

It was the history of a young girl, beautiful, innocent, and carefully guarded; the idol of her father and brothers. Her mother, however, was dead, and her head was filled with romantic dreams of a hero who was to come and rule over her life.

On her way to and from school she met a handsome, dashing fellow, who eagerly sought her acquaintance, managing to throw a kind of mystery over their meetings.

He was vulgar, false and cruel, but he had brilliant eyes and well-cut features. What more would a girl of sixteen demand in a hero?

The friendship lasted for years; he gained an absolute control over her. She hid her love for him from her fond old father and brothers; he eloped with her finally, but refused her marriage. The girl came home to die. Her eldest brother pursued her lover, shot at him repeatedly but failed to kill him. Later, the villian met her gray-haired father, and when the feeble old man, maddened by grief, threatened him, he shot him dead.

Now here is a young girl dead before she had fairly tasted life, her old father murdered, and her brothers left homeless, all for her indulgence at first in silly, reckless romance.

It is natural for you to think of love, girls. God meant you to love and to marry. But He meant you to do it with the blessing of your father and mother upon you. Trust the love that has watched you from the cradle, as being truer than that of the young fellow who has known you but yesterday. If his feelings for you must be kept out of their sight, depend that there is something tricky and unclean in it, and if he tries to draw you into deceiving and mocking them, you may be sure that he is no "hero," but a man who will lead you into a path the gates of which open into the grave.—Youth's Companion.

Firms and their Employees.

The old firm of builders, Messrs. Wm. Lawrence & Sons, of Pitfield Wharf, Waterloo Bridge, and Bread street, London, which was founded in 1813, and of which the surviving partners were Mr. Alderman W. Lawrence, Sir James C. Lawrence, Bart., M.P., and Mr. Edwin Lawrence, ceased to exist on Dec. 31st, 1879. The retirement of the partners was marked by a noteworthy act of generosity. The whole of the business was handed over by them to some of their principal clerks and managers, who had served faithfully for a long period. The sum of £20,000 was also placed at their disposal to enable them to carry on trade on the most advantageous terms. The artisans who had been employed by the late firm for ten years and upwards were each paid sums varying from £10 to £20, according to the number of years' service, and a few of the oldest workmen have been informed that, in addition to their £20, a pension will be granted them for the remainder of their lives, when they are pleased to demand it from the Brothers Lawrence. No interest of any kind is retained in the new firm by its former owners.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a years since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is Scott & Bowne's Palatable Castor Oil we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w2d1-1m

To be thoroughly happy you must be well. To be well in thousands of cases, you must take the great medicine, which relieves, regulates and renovates disorderly systems—Victoria Buchu Uva Ursi. For Bright's disease of the kidneys, diabetes, and all diseases of the primary system, its timely use is very beneficial. For sale by all dealers at $1 per bottle. w2d23-2w

Our food furnishes material for the growth and nourishment of the body by absorption and assimilation. In like manner Victoria Hypophosphites acts in the cure of disease. When swallowed, it is absorbed, taken up by the veins, and circulated through the system, with the blood, reaching the most hidden and remote parts. It is evident, therefore, that the whole system must feel the effects of the remedy. For sale by all dealers. w2d23-2w

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back lassitude, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated sneezing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose; in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first stages use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild purgative to remove the tightness across the forehead, etc. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. w2d22-2w

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our middle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil combined with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w2d1-1m

From a Prominent Veterinary Surgeon.—Mr. Wm. M. Giles, Chemist, sir: I have practiced extensively both in Europe and America, and your new discovery, Liniment Iodide of Ammonia, surpasses any thing I ever used for splints, strains, lameness in the limbs or shoulders, weakness across the kidneys, wind galls, and hard, bony swellings on the joints. It is truly marvellous.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Town Council.

There will be a special meeting of the Town Council at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

A Bad Cut.

At a sewing bee in Ennismore on Saturday, Michael Collins received a cut on the head over the eye, making a bad skull and scalp wound. Dr. Kincaid attended the sufferer.

Church Broken Into.

On Thursday evening last St. Paul's Church held a festival. A considerable amount of edibles were laid-aside intended for the Mission School in the South Ward. During the night the church was broken into by some persons and the edibles were stolen.

Curling and Skating Rink.

There was a large attendance at the skating rink on Saturday evening of both skaters and curlers, all of whom seemed to enjoy themselves. The ice was not as hard as could have been desired; yet it was sufficiently good to enable all to have a merry time. The curling was for amusement and practice, and some very fine shots were made. The outside rink was flooded with the hope of getting a good curling surface.

The Cold Weather and Ice Gathering.

The sudden change in the temperature since Saturday has again covered the still waters of the river with ice, and should Vennor's predictions come true, there will be no difficulty in obtaining ice of sufficient thickness to fill our ice houses. Very little, if any, has been gathered thus far, and much apprehension in some quarters has been expressed of an ice famine next summer.

Newcastle and Trent Medical Association.

The fourth meeting of the Newcastle and Trent Medical Association will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Buildings, Port Hope, on Wednesday morning, February 4th, at 10 o'clock. The annual report for 1879 will be presented, and the officers for the year 1880 are to be elected. There will be a report of the tariff committee. A paper will be presented on Gunshot Wounds by Dr. McDonald, of Brighton; a case in Medical Jurisprudence by Dr. Herriman, of Port Hope; and a paper on Jaundice by Dr. Hamilton, of Port Hope. The subject of the treatment of Phthisis will be presented for general discussion, with other matters of interest to the medical fraternity. The Midland Railway have arranged to give one-third return fare tickets to all who hold a certificate from the secretary of the meeting.

Obituary.

We learn from the New Westminster C. B. Herald, that Mr. G. H. Armstrong, formerly a resident of this county, died at New Westminster on Monday, January 5th, after a lingering illness, at the age of 38 years. Mr. Armstrong was a son of Mr. W. Armstrong, and a brother of Mrs. James Stratton, of this town. Another brother, Mr. W. J. Armstrong, is a member of the Local Legislature, and was formerly Minister of Finance and Agriculture for British Columbia. Mr. Armstrong was also distantly related to the family of our Mayor, Mr. Lundy. The Herald says that Mr. Geo. Armstrong was among their earliest settlers, and was successful as a miner and contractor in former years. Flags were set at half mast in respect to his memory. The funeral took place on the 7th, the remains being followed to their last resting place in the Masonic Cemetery by a large number of citizens. Among the pall bearers was Mr. J. C. Hughes, formerly of Peterborough. The Ven. Archdeacon Woods performed the funeral services.

THE CEMETERY COMPANY.

Appointment of a Superintendent—Contemplated Improvements—A Requisition.

An adjourned meeting of the Directors was held in the Town Council Chamber this morning, the President in the chair.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the last meeting, the committee elected to take into consideration the requisition respecting the appointment of a caretaker, reported as follows:—That having carefully examined the requisition, and compared the names attached to it with those of the stockholders in the Secretary's book, they found that the requisition was signed by 106 persons, of whom only 58 are owners of lots, and that the number of votes to which those 58 gentlemen are entitled is but 86.

The total number of stockholders is 612, so that the number of the requisitionists is less than one-tenth of the number of owners of lots.

The report having been received, the following resolution founded upon it was adopted:—

That inasmuch as the requisition forwarded to the Directors with respect to the appointment of a caretaker, is found, on examination, to comprise the names of only 58 stockholders, the large majority of whom, viz., 40, are owners of but one lot each, the Directors do not feel themselves at liberty to entertain the recommendation contained therein.

A resolution was then adopted re-appointing Mr. John Kelly as Superintendent for the current year.

A sub-committee was appointed to ascertain on what terms some additional lots in close proximity to the cemetery can be purchased, and another committee to superintend the carrying on of necessary work within the present boundaries.

The meeting then adjourned.

A HUSBAND'S DEATH.

Struck by his Wife with an Axe in a Drunken Quarrel.

DEATH OF THE VICTIM.

OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—The man Sabourin, who was struck on the head three times with an axe in the hands of his wife, on Wednesday evening last, during a drunken quarrel, died yesterday morning. The woman admits that she struck her husband with the axe, but states that it was in self-defence. Their married life has of late years been very unhappy, owing to the dissipated habits of both, and fierce quarrelling was not unfrequent. The woman says her body is bruised by the blows of her husband, and her shoulders are cut severely by the marks of his teeth. She says he also bit off the end of one of her little fingers.

THE SCENE OF THE TRAGEDY.

It was nearly twelve o'clock on Friday night when informations were sworn to at the police office, but Detective Geoulx and P. C. Johnson started out for the bridge. On arriving at Sabourin's dwelling they were promptly admitted by Sabourin's wife. The children were just having supper, although it was then midnight. The house was scantily furnished, and a tallow candle furnished light. On the floor upon the mattrass was lying the dying man, with one of the children asleep at his feet.

THE WOMAN'S STORY.

When asked by a detective how the affair occurred, Mrs. Sabourin replied, "We were both tight. He started the row, and when he began beating me I grabbed the first thing I could get hold of to defend myself, and the first thing that came in my way was the axe, and taking it up I hit him twice on the head."

Mrs. Sabourin is a quiet looking woman, about 40 years of age, and small in size. When spoken to by a reporter, she told the particulars of the fatal row without reserve or hesitation, but did not seem to fully realize the seriousness of her own situation. She stated that she had often been beaten before, and on one occasion was laid up for six weeks. This was a couple of weeks ago.

THE POST MORTEM EXAMINATION.

The post mortem examination on the body of the murdered man Sabourin was made to-day. Two complete fractures of the skull were shown, either of them sufficient to produce death. The brother of the murdered man conveyed the body to his residence in the country after the post mortem had been made. The children, six in number, have been summoned to give evidence. Four of them are confined in St. Joseph's asylum.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh to brisk winds; partly cloudy to cloudy weather with snow areas. Peterborough was visited by the cold wave yesterday, the thermometer indicating during the most of the day 2° below, and at evening 6° below; this morning early 2° below, at 8 o'clock 6° above, at 9 o'clock 8°, and at noon 20°; wind blowing fresh from the north-east to south-east. The self-registering thermometer of the Rev. V. Clementi indicated on Saturday night 40° above zero; on Sunday morning at 9 o'clock 4°, gradually sinking to 1° at 10.30 o'clock. At 1 o'clock it had fallen to 2° below zero, and at 9 o'clock to 4° below. During Sunday night it registered 9° below zero. This morning at 8 o'clock 1° above zero was marked, at noon 22°, the thermometer again sinking to 16° at 3 o'clock.

How Byron Reduced his Fatness.

Take the case of Lord Byron. "When I was at school at Harrow," he said, "I was as fat as Lord Sligo. This disgraceful infirmity I afterwards determined to get rid of. Accordingly when I quitted school and came to town, I got some dresses of flannel to envelope me from head to foot. Thus dressed, I stood at the wicket while my servants bowled to me, two or three hours in the day. I was put into profuse perspiration, but not reduced as I expected; I therefore determined to effect the rest by starvation. You observed what I ate for dinner to-day. (Turbot and a quantity of vinegar!) Well, this is Saturday. I shall not eat again until Monday." "Where is your Sunday dinner?" he was asked. "In my pocket." And he drew forth a snuff box containing some preparations of tobacco. "To morrow," said he, "I shall drink some green tea for breakfast; and at five o'clock chew three of these for dinner. They will absorbe the gastric juices of the stomach and prevent the sensation of hunger. I have told you how fat I was at Harrow. Lend me your hand—what do you think of me now?" "I can count every rib in your body." "Indeed, I am delighted to hear you say so."—Mayfair.

MRS. JONES says her husband will never be struck by lightning because he always gets insulate.

HOGS intended for slaughter should receive all the food they will eat, and should have a warm, dry bed, that they may sleep comfortably and grow fat fast.

THE South Jersey farmers had a streak of luck with their sweet potato crop. The yield is enormous, and the prices realized higher than for several years past.

PERE HYACINTHE'S APPLICATION.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A Paris despatch says that M. Loyson (Pere Hyacinthe), has asked the Prefect of the Department of the Seine to grant him use of the Church of Assumption in the Rue St. Honore, at present occupied by a Polish confraternity. Loyson pleads that his present church is unsuitable, being too small, at too high a rental, and that his work addresses itself to persons requiring religion free from superstition and fanaticism. The application will certainly be refused, as his community occupies the same position as the Protestant free churches, which provide their own edifices and pay their own pastors.

A NIHILIST ROBBERY.

ODESSA, Jan. 31.—The persons charged with the robbery of 1,500,000 roubles from the Government Receiver's office at Cherson, South Russia, in June, have been tried by a court martial. Three of the prisoners were sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment with hard labour, and a woman who originated the scheme of robbery was sentenced to imprisonment for life with hard labor. Two of the accused were acquitted. It is supposed that the robbery was committed to aid the Nihilist cause.

THE CZAR'S ANNIVERSARY.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 31.—The municipality's programme for the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Czar's accession to the throne, includes the presentation of an address to the Czar with an album containing sketches of events in St. Petersburg, the offer of a prize of 5,000 roubles for the best historical essay on St. Petersburg, the opening of 25 new schools, and the distribution to the public of an account of the principal events during the Czar's reign.

BRITISH INTERESTS.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Standard asserts that telegraphic instructions have been sent to the commander-in-chief of the British naval forces in the Pacific to despatch a man-of-war to La Paz, Lower California, in consequence of the late disturbance there, which are regarded as liable to tend to the danger of British subjects.

THE CZARINA IN PARIS.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A special announces the arrival of the Czarina in Paris. Her physicians report that she may safely proceed to St. Petersburg.

INCREASE OF THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

VIENNA, Jan. 31.—It is rumoured in well informed circles that Russia has decided to increase the number of her peace and war forces, the latter by 150,000 men.

ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The German newspapers are discussing England's probable attitude in the event of a Continental war. Prince Bismarck is working with extraordinary vigour.

FEVER AND FAMINE.

ROME, Jan. 31.—A Rome despatch says the accounts from Terro de Lavore, Naples, continue to be terrible. The population of seventeen communes, numbering 92,000, is afflicted. Of these, 51,340 had been attacked by the fever up to the 15th December last, of whom 5,028 died. This fever means famine. Government aid is not sufficient.

BRUTAL OUTRAGES ON JEWS.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The Gibraltar Guardian says the Moors at Fez, Morocco, have attacked the Jews, wounding several. They covered an old man, who was over 70 years of age, with petroleum and burned him alive, amid shouts and jeers. Two of the wounded Jews are French subjects.

AT LOGGERHEADS.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—A fresh quarrel has broken out between M. Gambetta and M. Jules Simon. There will probably be a coalition in the French Senate between the lukewarm Republicans and the reactionary members. President Grevy and M. Gambetta remain friends.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A despatch from Zanzibar says that the African explorer, Henry M. Stanley, has reached the last fall of the river Congo, at Yallala.

DISTRESS IN TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 31.—Excessive cold prevails at Diarbekir, and a great fall of snow has taken place. Several travellers have perished on the way to Diarbekir, and great mortality prevails among the cattle. Although thousands of Moslem refugees are slowly perishing at Phillippopolis from cold and starvation, they are only aided by foreigners. Bulgaria will give nothing towards their relief, and say the statements of misery are got up by Turkish and English intrigue.

LOSS OF A COAL-LADEN STEAMER.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The steamer Bengore, laden with coal, from Penarth for Gibraltar, foundered when two days from port. Thirteen of the crew were drowned and six saved. A violent storm has raged in the Mediterranean for two days past. Disasters to shipping are feared.

PARNELL CONTRADICTED.

DUBLIN, Feb. 1.—At a meeting of the Mansion House Committee last night, the Mayor presiding, it was announced that £33,000 had been received to date, and £15,300 disbursed. The chairman complained of the attacks made in America on the constitution of the Committee and its mode of distribution, and read letters from Roman Catholic Bishops McEvilly, of Galway, and Duggan, of Clonfert, expressing astonishment at these attacks, and declaring that the Mansion House funds is administered solely with a view to the relief of the distress, and that the Committee enjoys public confidence. Archbishop French, of the church of Ireland, was present at the meeting, and joined in these expressions. It was announced that the Committee had received £3,000 additional from Sydney, making a total from the Australian colonies of £21,000.

CARTRIDGES FOR MONTENEGRO.

VIENNA, Feb. 2.—Montenegro has ordered four millions of cartridges from a Austrian manufactory.

A CAPTURE BY THE POLICE.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 31.—A St. Petersburg despatch says the police on Friday night made a descent upon a house on Sapper street. On opening the door the police were fired upon. They returned the fire, and arrested two men and two women. The fifth occupant, named Deutsch, an important political criminal long sought by the police, shot himself dead on the spot. The police then searched the house, and found a printing press, a large number of copies of the last issue of the revolutionary journal, The Will of the People, also forged stamps and documents, poisons and explosives. The Police Superintendent, who was wounded, and his assistant having effected the capture at the risk of their lives, have been promoted and decorated with the order of Vladimir. A judicial enquiry has commenced.

A STRANGE OUTRAGE.—A printer named Sykes, skating in a lonely part of the marshes yesterday, was suddenly seized by a number of men, stripped of all his clothes, except his pants and shirt, was bound hand and foot and was left beside some burning embers. He became unconscious, and on coming to this morning found himself half frozen. He managed to reach an overturned boat and gather some sticks with which he kindled a fire and kept himself alive until succour arrived.

SCUTTLING A VESSEL.—In May last the barque Brother's Pride, of this port, was abandoned at sea on the voyage from Bardenas to New York with a cargo of melado. The shippers of the cargo had $36,000 and the owners of the vessel had $23,000 insurance on the vessel, freight and advances. The insurance companies suspected wrong-doing and refused to pay the insurance on the melado. It is now alleged that the vessel was scuttled at sea, that the cargo did not consist of melado, but of some unknown valueless mixture, and that it was a put up job to defraud the insurance companies. Treadwell Cleveland, a New York lawyer, came here and caused the arrest of Captain W. H. Tower, master of the Brother's Pride, and to-day Tower was arraigned at the police court on the charge of scuttling the vessel. The witnesses were not ready, however, and the prisoner was remanded to jail.

A RUSSIAN THREAT.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 2.—The Herald, referring to the supposed intention of Persia under British inspiration to seize Herat, says: "This step would be hostile to Russian interests. Russia certainly will not retire before a small Asiatic state incited by a foreign power." The Herald points out that England is not in a position to defend Persia against Russia.

GERMAN PETROLEUM.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—Steps are being taken to form a company to work the newly discovered oil wells in the Hanover petroleum region. The present bores are yielding an average interest of 22 per cent upon the capital against 19 per cent in America.

AUSTRALIAN MEAT.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The ship Strathleven has arrived at Gravesend from Australia with a cargo of refrigerated meat in splendid condition. This new enterprise is said, by those who are interested, to promise admirable results, and it is thought the day is not distant when Australian fresh meat thus preserved and transported will become a powerful competitor of American meats brought to England in the same way.

AMERICAN.

SHERMAN AND GRANT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says that Sherman stated in an interview:—"The assertion that I have promised offices to secure delegates is absolutely false. I am gratified that a few treasury officers have taken interest in my nomination, but others have not only opposed me, but favor Grant. This is especially true in Virginia and North Carolina."

AN INDIAN FIGHT.

BISMARCK, Dakotah, Feb. 3.—A Fort Buford dispatch reports that on January 28th an Uncapapa band captured a herd of ponies near Glendive belonging to the Gros Ventres. The latter attacked the Uncapapas, killing fifteen Indians and re-capturing the stock. There is great excitement in Yellowstone and fears of a general uprising.

HEAVY DAMAGES CLAIMED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—John E. Wheelock, an American citizen, residing at the gold mines of Caratal, in the State of Guayana, Venezuela, claims $50,000 damages for his arrest and cruel treatment on a fictitious charge of robbery. The President of Guayana has written a letter to the Consul-General at the port of Spain acknowledging the injustice to Wheelock, and promising the punishment of the offenders.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—A Washington special report to the World says it is reported that a Democratic Congressman is about to introduce in the House a joint resolution reaffirming the Monroe doctrine and directing the President to notify immediately DeLesseps and his coadjutors that any attempt to construct a canal across the Isthmus excepting under American protection must at once be given up.

BECOMING INSANE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The Herald's Dublin despatch says that Parnell's unwarranted attacks on the Mansion House Committee are regarded as utterly inexplicable, and cause great consternation among his friends. It is believed that the excitement of his American tour has proved too great a mental strain, and that he is becoming insane.

ONLY ONE ARM.

The Herald's Columbia despatch reports an interview with General Gary concerning Colonel Haskell's allegations. Gary pronounces them false and malicious and wants an investigation. It is believed that he does not challenge Haskell because the latter has but one arm.

A BAD BARGAIN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—A Washington special report to the Sun says:—Judgment, $103,000, which was recovered recently against Rhomberg & Co. Iowa distillers, was compromised by Sherman within a week for $50,000. although the judgment could have been easily collected, and the Government's expenses in the trial were $35,000.

SAVED FROM A WRECK.

SEABRIGHT, N.J., Feb. 3.—The brig Caspola, with cotton from Galveston, is ashore abreast of the highlands. The crew and a lady passenger were landed safely by the life saving crew.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Feb. 3.—A severe north east storm is blowing here. At Monticello the wind approached a hurricane.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 3.—A gentleman of this city, who fell five weeks ago and has been complaining of a pain in the chest ever since, was relieved yesterday when the surgeon removed the whole of a lead pencil which had been completely embedded in his chest by the fall.

A LIMITED SUFFRAGE.

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 3.—In the House the order was passed that the Committee on the alleged bribery of members proceed at once with the investigation. It was ordered that the Judiciary Committee inquire into amending constitution, that the suffrage be limited to those able to read and write English.

MIDNIGHT TELEGRAMS

A REAL PEACE.

BERLIN, Feb. 2.—The Leipsic Grenzboten publishes an article on European disarmament, believed to be inspired, suggesting if there was a British Government capable of inducing Parliament to declare that England in the case of a Russo-French attack upon Germany would guarantee the neutrality of Belgium, Luxembourg, and Switzerland, and to demand also the neutrality of the North Sea and Baltic, such a declaration would bring about real peace.

IMPRISONED PRELATES FORGOTTEN.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 2.—A letter from Suzdal, in the Province of Vladimir, reports that an Archbishop and two bishops of the faith, or old believers, are confined in the fortress there on account of their creed. The Archbishop has been there twenty-six years, and the bishops twenty-two and seventeen years respectively. The Golos, in a leader on the subject, supposes they had been forgotten by the authorities. For publishing this article the Minister of the Interior has deprived the Golos of the right of inserting advertisement during the present month.

GHILZAIS AND HAZARAS.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—A correspondent at Candahar, after mentioning the disastrous results of the strife between the Ghilzais and Hazaras without the British lines, adds that similar tales of internecine war come from the direction of Farah. A representative sent by Ayoob Khan to Farah has been defeated by Ibrahim Khan, of Chakansur, who is putting the country under contribution. Ayoob Khan is reported to have sent two regiments, six guns, and 2,000 horses against Ibrahim Khan. Other accounts, however, say these troops of Ayoob Khan refused to march.

AN UNNECESSARY SCARE.

A Cabul despatch says the prophecies of the impending defeat and disaster published in some newspapers have been read here with astonishment. The data of the writers are as inaccurate as their deductions are gloomy. Mahmoud Jan was not a soldier of great repute in the wars of Turkestan. Until lately he was an unknown subordinate officer of artillery. General Gough never was in danger during his march to the relief of Cabul. Gen. Roberts was right when he reckoned on his ability to bring up reinforcements. He never had to fight his way around the city to Shirpur. He had in December firewood for four months and forage for fifty-four days. The idea of a forced retreat upon Jellalabad never suggested itself here.

HOME AGAIN.

Return of Her Royal Highness the Princess Louise—A Boisterous Voyage.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 2.—The snow storm abated about three this morning, and then clear weather set in with biting cold. A steamer was signalled from the East shortly after six o'clock, which proved to be the George Shattuck, from St. Pierre. At nine o'clock another signal went up for a steamer east, and at fifteen minutes to eleven three guns were fired from the citadel hill, which announced that the lookout party at Camperdown had made out the steamer to be the Sarmatian, and that she was then some four miles from the coast in charge of a pilot. A moment later the mail steamer signals were hoisted, and as by magic, floated from the flagstaffs at the dockyard and various public and private residences, while the shipping in the harbour and at the wharves were decorated from stem to stern. Streets and wharves were immediately crowded with sightseers. The Sarmatian steamed slowly up the harbour. The Union Jack was lowered from the Citadel flagstaff and the Royal Standard floated in its place, while the signal staffs were handsomely dressed with bunting. At twelve o'clock the Sarmatian dropped anchor off the Ordnance yard, accompanied by the commissariat transport Lily, in which his Excellency the Governor-General had steamed down to the mouth of the harbour to meet his Royal wife. Returning in the Lily the Vice-Regal party landed, and amid a royal salute and cheers from the spectators drove to Government House.

FLAGS, BUNTING, AND STREAMERS

A ROUGH VOYAGE.

Following is the report of the steamer Sarmatian. She having been delayed off Lough Foyle by fog for fifteen hours, left Moville at two a.m. on Saturday, the 24th. The weather experience was most boisterous throughout the whole passage, and the vessel was delayed by incessant gales of head winds. The Princess suffered much, but is now recovering, and with rest will regain her usual health. Nothing of any note occurred during her voyage. The Princess is accompanied by the Hon. Lady Pelly, Hon. Mrs. Langham, Col. McNeill, Equery in waiting to the Queen, and Captains Chater and Collins were in attendance on her Royal Highness.

Special to the Review.

DEPARTURE FOR OTTAWA.

HALIFAX, Feb. 3.—A large crowd collected at the Intercolonial Railway Station this morning to witness the departure of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise by a special train for Ottawa. The streets were lined from Government House to the railway station with troops, and the Guard of Honour at the railway station was from the 101st Regiment. About 11 o'clock the Vice-Regal party arrived. A number of military and civil dignitaries were at the station to see them off. As the train started they were loudly cheered, and a salute was fired outside by the Halifax battery.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

A MEMORIAL ON BEHALF OF THE TORONTO & OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The Grand Trunk at Work in Our Council—Remission of Taxes—The Special Audit Again.

The Council held a special meeting this (Monday) morning, at 10 a.m.

Present—The Mayor and Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, McNaughton, Yelland, Toole, Menzies, Denne, Robertson and Paterson.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The CLERK read a letter from Mr. Thomas Hewitt, offering his services as Street Inspector for the current year for the sum of $[illegible].

Also a circular from the Mayor of Toronto, suggesting that the Council join them in petitioning the Legislature against the bill now before the Legislature, doing away with market tolls. The Mayor was authorized to sign the letter.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY CO'Y.

On motion, Mr. DUMBLE was heard, with reference to the Council memorializing the Ontario Government, asking for Government aid for the said road. In doing so he said he deemed it unnecessary to make any lengthened remarks in support of it, and concluded by submitting a draft memorial for their consideration.

Councillor DENNE opposed the memorial, on the ground that 200 influential ratepayers had already petitioned against the road.

Councillor MENZIES opposed it also. He couldn't assent to a memorial contradicting a petition he had signed, and moved, seconded by Councillor DENNE,—That it be not entertained.

Councillor SMITH moved, seconded by Councillor CAHILL,—That the Mayor and Clerk be instructed to prepare, sign and forward the memorial asked for.

Councillor ROBERTSON moved that the matter be laid over until next Monday.

Councillor DENNE seconded this.

Councillor SMITH—You can't second two motions.

Councillor McNAUGHTON wanted to know if this would entail any cost.

The MAYOR—None.

Councillor MENZIES withdrew his resolution, and Councillor Smith's became the principal motion, and Councillor Robertson's motion the amendment.

Councillor SMITH urged the Council to pass the memorial in a forcible speech, pointing out that it was an entirely different matter from the memorial which they passed the other evening.

Councillor MENZIES again wanted delay, and asked had Mr. Dennistoun's opinion been received.

Councillor SMITH—It has.

Councillor TOOLE could not understand the movements of certain members of this Council this morning. This action was not going to cost the town a single cent, and whatever the opinion of these gentlemen as to the advisability of granting a bonus to the road, their ought surely to be no difference of opinion as to the advisability of obtaining the aid of the Government for this undertaking. He said it was a delicate matter, but he felt bound to point out that the Grand Trunk Railway had fought this scheme from one end of the line to the other, and there were good grounds for believing that the same influences were now at work in opposing even the passage of this memorial.

Councillor CAHILL asked that Mr. Dennistoun's opinion be read, which Councillor SMITH did as follows:—

"PETERBOROUGH, 2nd Feb'y, 1880.

"H. H. SMITH, Esq., Barrister, &c.,

"Chairman Finance Committee.

"SIR,—I return you the copy of the Bill relating to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. You ask if the town's position under the By-law is altered thereby. In answer I have to say that if no legislation is obtained, the charter would be at an end on 1st of July next, unless work is commenced as required by charter. If the charter is suffered to expire, the liability under the By-law would also end. Under this Bill, if passed, the charter is preserved until 1st May, 1882, and the By-law may be kept in force or allowed to drop, as the Council may think best in their interests. (See sections 42 and 55.) This would seem to be the only effect.

"Yours,

"JAS. F. DENNISTOUN."

Councillor MENZIES denied that he was here as agent of the Grand Trunk.

A VOICE.—How do you know you were meant?

Councillor McNAUGHTON thought they should pass this memorial at once, as it was not going to cost us anything, without wasting any further time.

Councillor CAHILL supported the memorial, and expressed his surprise at the opposition offered to it, as it in no way affected our by-law.

Councillor YELLAND would like to have the Mayor's opinion on the matter.

The MAYOR said he thought Mr. Dumble had put the matter fairly before them, and that it ought to be passed.

Councillor DENNE again objected. He wanted the matter laid over; there was something behind it that would come out some day.

The motions were then put, Messrs. Menzies, Denne and Robertson voting against the memorial, and all the others for it.

AUDITORS SALARY.

Councillor ROBERTSON moved that Mr. Hogan be heard with reference to his taxes.

Mr. HOGAN said when he applied to the Treasurer for payment for the amount due to him for the special audit, but he couldn't give it. Subsequently on the 2nd of January when he was prepared to issue it, Mr. Bradburn garnisheed it. He disputed that he owed Mr. Bradburn but in the meantime it was before the court and he was prevented from applying it on account of his taxes as intended. He therefore asked that the balance due him for the special audit be applied on his taxes or that his taxes be allowed to stand until after his suit with Mr. Bradburn was decided.

On motion of Councillor DENNE the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

A motion was passed authorizing the Mayor to issue checks on charity account, and the Council adjourned.

THAT INFLUENTIAL PETITION.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—I have observed that a petition from T. Menzies and others was presented to Parliament praying that no legislation be granted to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Committee. Will you, Mr. Editor, please advise if the Mr. Menzies who headed that petition and who paid Mr. Armour for circulating it, is the same Thomas Menzies, the Grand Trunk Ticket Agent at Peterborough, and if so, might I ask this Mr. Menzies how much the G. T. R. Co. pays him for doing their dirty work in Peterborough? The G. T. R. Co. has dogged the T. & O. Ry Co. wherever they thought they could use their dollars to advantage, but I hardly thought they could get tools to do their work in this town. I challenge Mr. Menzies and every man who signed that petition to publish in black and white the objections they have to the bill now before the House, which is simply a consolidation of the old acts.

I suppose if the G. T. R. Co. would instruct their ticket agent to circulate a petition to hang Mr. Scott, the worthy man would have had no conscientious scruples against it. 'Tis a pity we had not a few more like him.

Yours truly,

DEATH AFTER DEATH.

Miss Adelaide Ray died on Friday evening, Jan. 23, at 9 o'clock, of consumption, and was buried on Sunday, January 25th. Mrs. Sarah Ray, her mother, died on Thursday evening at 5 o'clock, of dropsy. Miss Eliza Ann Ray, another daughter, died on Friday morning, the 30th of January, at 6 o'clock, of consumption. They were buried both at once on Sunday, February 1st. It was the largest funeral ever known in this part of the country. The family have the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community. Dr. Hodge, of Mitchell, son-in-law of Mrs. Ray, attended the funeral. The funeral sermon will be preached for the three, mother and two daughters next Sabbath evening at 6.30 o'clock by the Rev. N. Clark in the Presbyterian Church, Lakefield. No females are left in the house. Only one daughter survives, viz., Mrs. Hodge, of Mitchell. Mr. Ray, the bereaved father and husband, and one son alone remain in the old home. Within the last few years one son died of consumption and another met with a sudden death.

FENELON FALLS.

IN THE LAKE.—On Saturday evening a week ago, as Mr. Wm. Smith, of Fenelon, was returning home from this village by the short cut across Cameron Lake, his team broke through the ice a few rods from the steamer Coboconk's wharf, and got into the water, which was about ten feet deep. Mr. Smith had with him three or four companions, one of whom ran back for help, which soon arrived in the shape of a couple of sleigh loads of villagers, who by means of ropes which they took with them speedily rescued the horses. On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Thomas Grandy, of Indian Point, also came to grief on Cameron Lake while coming with a waggon load of wheat to the Falls. When about half way across the lake the hind wheels of the waggon cut completely through the ice, upon which, next instant, the axle was resting; and Mr. Grandy would have had a great deal of trouble in getting out of his predicament but for the presence of a neighbor, who drove up just in time to render the necessary assistance. —Gazette.

Barnum's Tattooed Humbug.

Barnum's tattooed Greek sailor is on exhibition in Albany, and the advertisement says:—"He has upon his body 7,000,000 punctures, and it was all done by a female savage. The poor man lost a drop of blood and shed a tear for every puncture, and was the only one of 24 who survived the operation. The woman who did the tattooing worked 8 hours a day for 90 days before the task was completed." A mathematician of the Albany Express figures as follows:—"The woman must have given him 2½ punctures a second. Then, if he lost one drop of blood with every puncture, he lost, estimating the usual number of drops to a pint, and taking a pint for a pound, 5,[illegible] pounds. Or to put it differently, just 800 gallons of blood, or a trifle over 20 barrels during 90 days. Tears don't weigh as much as blood, so bunching the two together the gentleman from Albania must have lost about 5½ tons of these fluids within three months." Barnum's agent asserts that if the Greek had not been a wonderful man he would not have been exhibited.

PLEASANT FIGURES.

We have before us two full years' reports for the years ending Dec. 1, in 1879 and 1878 respectively. Omitting the specie, we have the following aggregates, in specie values, for agricultural products, manufacturers, etc., classed together as

MERCHANDISE:

12 months ending	Nov. 30, 1878.	Nov. 30, 1879.
Exports from United States	$7[illegible]	$751,812,783
Imports	430,890,[illegible]	485,528,711
Excess of Exports	$[illegible]	$266,[illegible]
Excess of Exports for two years		$575,354,294

That is to say, our country has sold abroad over five hundred and seventy-five million dollars' worth of its products more than we have imported from other countries. This has been paid to us largely in the form of returned government and other bonds held abroad, and partly by sending us specie, of which we received $60,380,811 more than we exported, thus—

GOLD AND SILVER.

12 months ending	Nov. 30, 1878.	Nov. 30, 1879.
Exports from United States	$27,322,551	$25,[illegible],155
Imports	28,[illegible],125	86,[illegible],540
Excess	(—)$1,[illegible],574 +	$61,740,385

The influx of specie may continue awhile, though temporarily stopped by the speculation in grain which has carried prices above the shipping point. This cannot continue long, for either the foreign demand, when the present stock of breadstuffs is reduced, will raise prices there to correspond with the present prices here of grain and flour, or prices here will come down to a figure at which foreign buyers will take our products. Which event will happen, we cannot of course predict with any certainty. The "probabilities" are that there will be some concession on both sides. High prices will diminish consumption greatly. It may be said, in a general way that, other things being equal, foreign nations would buy and consume twice as much of our wheat if it cost them $1.25 a bushel, as they would if it cost them $1.75 per bushel. In the latter case they would much more largely resort to other and cheaper foods. For these reasons the present speculation in grain is to be deprecated. The higher rates benefit the producers very little, and may do them much injury if the result be a failure to find a market for the remaining surplus we have to spare.—American Agriculturist.

PORT HOPE.

A PRESENTATION.—The Guide says:—Mr. Fogarty, of the Cobourg Sentinel-Star, had a pleasing surprise on Saturday evening. The staff of the Times, with whom he has lately severed his connection, planned to present him with an enduring proof of their regard, and to give the assurance with the most pleasant surroundings and accompaniments. Calling at the residence of Mr. Trayes, without the vaguest idea of what was in store for him, he was ushered into the drawing-room where his friends were awaiting his arrival. An appropriate address, read by the foreman of the Times office, gave expression to the best of good wishes, and asked Mr. Fogarty's acceptance of a silver butter-cooler and a cruet-stand, both of highly artistic design. After the presentation the company entered upon an evening of enjoyment and mutual entertainment, not the least important item of which certainly was the sumptuous supper provided by their host.

BRUTAL.—As Dr. Ceaser was going up Walton street about one o'clock on Monday morning he saw a horse, harnessed for a wagon, hitched to a post in front of Dr. Clemesha's house. Passing down at 7 o'clock, he saw the poor brute still tied there, having weathered the fearful cold of the night, and by a wonder outlived it. The doctor was unhitching the wretched beast, intending to take it to some place of shelter, when the owner came along and claimed it. It took five minutes to dig the poor animal's feet out of the hard ice which had frozen round them during the cruel vigil to which it had been condemned. We understand that proceedings will be taken against the owner, whose name is said to be Clayton.

A SERVICE OF LOVE.

"I am among you as He that serveth."—Luke, xxii. 27.

Themes of thought most grand and glorious
That from highest knowledge flow,
Mind of man may fully value,
These not merely should he know;
God doth higher powers bestow
On mankind, to labor for Him,
This the end for which they're given,
To employ them in the vineyard
Of their Master now in Heaven.

Yea, though borne on Sacred pinion,
Fancy in etherial flight
May unveil beatic visions
From celestial realms of light,
In our Heavenly Father's sight
These alone are not accepted,
Work well done is nobler far
Than mere thought's ecstatic visions
Or excerpt quotations are.

Those engaged in Jesus' service
Know it is a loving one,
Even know they have a kingdom
Though 'tis not by merit won,
'Tis the gift of God's dear son;
But their hearts responsive thrilling
To His matchless sovereign love
Loyal hearty service render,
Warmest gratitude to prove.

God accepteth no man's service
If his heart unchanged be,
But when Christ his sins have pardon'd
And from Satan's bondage free,
Quickening created he.
Drawn by cords of love to worship
Low adoring at His feet,
Will the laws, now as God's servant
Of his Master, deem most sweet.

God asks hearts to be His wholly,
Hearts that gladly yield their own
Will to that of their Deliv'rer,
Serving Him and Him alone,
As by the Apostle shown,
Who with single eye and purpose
All things else esteemed but loss
For the knowledge of His Saviour
And the Glory of His cross.

Works for Jesus cluster round us,
All along life's path we find
Many pining suff'ring members
Of the family of mankind,
Craving for assistance kind;
Doing good and making happy
Those from day to day we see
Must be done through this pure motive,
That God glorified may be.

With the spirit of their Master
Who did minister below,
Truly humble, meek and lowly,
More conform'd to Him will grow,
And their lives His mind will show.
Happy, happy, are those servants
Who upon the Lord attend,
Theirs a service full of pleasure
And blest joys that never end.

E. B.

THE GOLDEN TALISMAN.

"I cannot recommend you, believing you to be a thief. But I will be so far merciful that I will let you depart. Go at once."

The voice and face were stern and unyielding.

Geoffrey Baird knew that all the piteous appeals he had made, the assertions of innocence he had frantically declared, had fallen upon ears indeed deaf, and closed to him.

"You have been very kind to me, Mr. Hoyt," he said, his voice quivering with pain; "and I hope some day you will know that I had rather cut off my hand than rob you."

There was no reply, and the boy, for he was not nineteen, walked slowly from the room where he had been accused of crime, condemned and punished in a brief half hour.

He was a widow's only son and very poor, but Abraham Hoyt had been very kind to him, employing him in light labor about his extensive grounds, paying him well, and allowing him to read whatever he wished in his library.

And from that library a valuable watch had been stolen from a table drawer, when there was no one, as far as could be ascertained, in the room but Geoffrey Baird.

Crushed, humiliated, almost heart-broken, the lad walked from the house, across the wide garden, bright with summer bloom that seemed to mock his misery. He had his hand upon the latch of the great iron gate leading into the road, when he heard his name called in a clear, childish voice.

"Jeff! Jeff! Wait a moment."

And then, turning his eyes, he saw a fairy of ten summers, a golden haired darling, dressed all in white, coming down the walk with flying feet.

Of all the treasures his employer possessed, Geoffrey knew this, his only child, was the dearest. Motherless from her birth, she had been her father's idol her whole petted life.

"Jeff!" she panted, coming to his side, "you must go away, papa says; but I know you never took the watch. Did you?"

"No, Miss Daisy, I never took it."

"I know it! I am going to find out who did take it. And Jeff, you must take this."

She opened her tiny white hand to show lying upon the palm a broad twenty dollar gold piece. But the boy shrank back.

"No, no, Miss Daisy," he said, "I could not."

"But you must. It is my own, my very own. Aunt Louise gave it to me on my birthday. In the corner I scratched 'M. H.' for Margaret Hoyt, with a pin, but I guess it won't hurt it. Please, please, dear Jeff, take it."

She pressed it into his reluctant hand, and then throwing her arms around his neck, kissed him with her child's lips, saying:

"I'll find out who did take the watch, Jeff, and then you will come back."

Before he could answer she was speeding back to the house, her curls flying out on the summer air that wafted to Geoffrey a last:

"Good-bye, dear Jeff."

With a heavy heart he went homeward, to tell his tale of sorrow and disgrace. He feared it would almost kill his mother, but after hearing him patiently, she said:

"I had a letter from Albany this morning, Geoffrey, from my father's lawyers. Twenty-five years ago my father cast me off for marrying a poor man. He died without forgiving me, but to you he has left his fortune, nearly half a million of money, upon condition you take his name when you are of age. I have packed up our possessions, and we will go to Albany to-night."

* * * * *

"Margaret!"

The tones were sharp and imperative, and Margaret Hoyt looked up from the task of teaching little Allie Bristow her letters, to answer. But before she spoke, the beautiful girl who had entered the school-room, said:

"Margaret, I want you to come and show Elsie how to trim my dress for to-night. Everybody said your taste was exquisite taste before your father failed and died."

The pale, patient face flushed a little at the cruel words, but Laura Bristow did not heed the pain she had given.

"Come now," she said, impatiently, "I want to look particularly well, for Willard Wharton is coming. It is the first party since he came from Europe. He has been vegetating in Florence ever so long with a consumptive mother, but she died a year ago, and after travelling awhile he has come home. Did you know him?"

"I never heard the name."

"Come to think of it, he left here long before you came."

Allie's primer was put aside, and Margaret accompanied Laura to the room where her finery was being prepared for a brilliant party a few hours later.

"Miss Hoyt," Mrs. Bristow said, looking up from the cloud of tulle under her fingers, "I wish you to come down to play and I wish you to wear white lace ruffles and a white flower or two in your hair. That will not interfere with your mourning, but you will look a little less like a mute at a funeral."

To hear was to obey. Mrs. Bristow was a distant connection of Mr. Hoyt's, and when he died, leaving his only child in poverty, the lady impressed upon poor, stricken Daisy, that she was under an obligation by being permitted to be governess, lady's maid, and generally useful factotum in her family.

For nearly a year she had filled the position of poor relation, unsalaried and overworked, and much of the bloom of her pure blonde beauty had left poor Daisy's face.

But the soft violet eyes had lost nothing of their sweetness; the golden hair, gathered into a rich knot, was full of waves and ringlets, making tiny baby curls around the delicate oval of her pale face, and the sensitive mouth was still expressive and lovely.

She sighed as she put the soft white ruffles into her black dress, and the white flowers in her hair.

"It seemed like forgetting poor father," she thought, but yet she knew her appearance had been too gloomy for a festive occasion.

The guests were gathering, and Daisy had gone into a small sitting room opposite the wide drawing rooms to wait until she was summoned to take her place to sing and play.

She had never been in society in Albany, and knew none of Mrs. Bristow's friends, so she was graciously excused from taking any more active part in the social gathering than to amuse by her singing, or help willing feet along by playing dance music.

She was turning over the leaves of a new magazine, quite sure of being uninterrupted, when the door opened, and on looking up she saw a strange gentleman.

"Pardon me," he said, "I thought this was the drawing room."

Then, as she lifted her face, he sprang forward.

"Daisy! Daisy!" he said, and not realizing the familiarity of the address, she arose to stretch out both hands, saying:

"Jeff! It is Jeff!"

"It is Jeff," he answered, "or rather it is Willard Wharton."

Then, moving a chair near the one she had occupied, he told her of his grandfather's legacy, and the change of name.

"Through good and ill, years of prosperity and the temptation that assails all of us, I have carried a golden talisman, to keep my heart pure and true, that I might one day bring it to your feet."

And through a mist of happy tears she saw him open a large locket hanging from his watch-chain. No miniature face, no lock of hair was there, but carefully set, a twenty-dollar gold piece, with "M.H." scratched with a pin in one corner.

In the drawing-room Mrs. Bristow wondered what detained her hero for the evening; but when he came in late she read nothing of the secret that was in his happy eyes.

She saw his courteous attentions to her governess, but attributed them to the innate courtesy of the young millionaire, and Daisy sang as if inspired, and threw a shower of gleeful fantasies into her waltz and galop music.

But when Miss Hoyt was asked for in Mr. Wharton's calls, when the stylish turnout that was the admired of Albany stood at the door for Miss Hoyt to drive, Mrs. Bristow grew savage.

"You are too forward with strangers," she told Daisy.

"But Mr. Wharton is an old friend. I knew him when I was a little girl, and—and we are to be married in the spring," said blushing Daisy.

And considering Mr. Wharton's wealth and position, and his future wife's probable influence in society, Mrs. Bristow wisely made the best of it, and Daisy was provided with a trousseau and a wedding party, for—"Your great kindness to Alice," said Mrs. Bristow, gracefully.

Not until they had been some days married did Willard Wharton say one day, carelessly:

"By-the-by, Daisy, was that watch ever found?"

"Yes. Felix was arrested six months afterwards for stealing some of the plate, and in his trunk was the watch. Papa searched faithfully for you, but you had vanished as if the earth had swallowed you."

"I knew it would turn up somewhere," said Mr. Wharton, quietly, "and perhaps now it is just as well it was missed. If I had not left in disgrace my darling might not have given me my golden talisman."

IRELAND.

SIR DOMINIC CORRIGAN, the eminent Irish physician, is lying seriously ill at his residence in Dublin.

THE Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Napier has resigned the Vice-Chancellorship of the University of Dublin, and the Lord Chancellor of Ireland has been nominated as his successor.

MESSRS. FRY, of Dublin, have had the honor of submitting for Her Majesty's inspection some specimens of their manufacture of Irish poplin, and Her Majesty has been pleased to select one for a set of curtains at Osborne, as well as at Windsor Castle.

THE Duchess of Marlborough has opened an exhibition of art and porcelain painting at the Queen's Institute, Dublin, in presence of a large and fashionable company.

A LEADING Dublin paper announces that the Government has at length resolved to grant loans to landlords and local authorities out of the Church funds at one per cent. interest, repayable in 35 years, for improvements of land.

THE Duchess of Marlborough is, encouraging the development of Irish industry, has given orders that Dublin castle be draped with curtains of silk figured terry poplin. The designs selected is exceedingly beautiful, the chief features being the royal crown worked over an arrangement of shamrocks. The drawing rooms at Blenheim Palace, the English seat of the Vice-regal family, are also being thoroughly embellished with the same fabric. Here the designs on the poplin will consist of an arrangement of the ducal coronets and monograms, surrounded by the star of the order of St. Patrick. The object of this movement is to bring the Irish poplin generally into use as a fabric for upholstery and decoration.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit.

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

APPLE PUDDING.—Apple pudding is one of the most easily prepared and palatable of desserts. Place a large layer of sliced apples in the bottom of a buttered earthenware baking-dish. Sift three teaspoonsful of baking powder and a little salt into three cups of flour, and stir in sweet cream until it is a thick batter. Where cream is lacking butter and water will answer. Spread the batter over the apples and bake one-half hour. Eat with sweet sauce.

CHICKEN PIE.—By making a batter after the above recipe and pouring it over a dish of boiled and well-seasoned chicken, a nice chicken pie can be made on very short notice. An old and tough fowl or any tough meat can more easily be made tender and nicer cooked under a cover of dough than in any other way, probably because of the closer confinement of steam.

MANY persons know it, but some do not, that a pretty and easily grown window plant may be obtained by soaking a round piece of coarse sponge in warm water until it is thoroughly expanded. After squeezing it about half dry, place in the openings millet, red clover, and barley grass seeds, rice and oats. Hang the sponge in a window where the sun shines part of the day, and sprinkle it lightly with water every morning for a week. Soon tender leaves will shoot out, and, growing rapidly, will form a drooping mass of living green. If regularly sprinkled, it will later be dotted with the blossoms of the clover.

TO PLASTER A CISTERN.—It is of importance that a cistern should be properly plastered in order to make it tight and lasting. A correspondent gives the following directions:—Procure one barrel of water-lime as new as possible, and two barrels of clean sand without gravel or small stones; in a long box of a convenient size mix one part of lime to two parts of sand while dry. When thoroughly mixed, pour in water till it is thin enough to spread, and spread it evenly over the whole cistern. This done close up the cistern and leave it a week or two to dry. Then mix another pailful of lime with two pailfuls of sand, as before, but make it thin enough to be put on with a whitewash brush; put on this last coat and the job is done.

TO KEEP PORTER OR STOUT FRESH AND BRISK.—Put in the cork, and place the bottle upside down in a tumbler or other vessel of water. The porter or stout will open as fresh the next day, or any number of days after, as when first uncorked.

REMEDY FOR A COLD.—Ten ounces of paregoric, 12 grains of ipecac, one stick of licorice. Dissolve the gum and licorice in one-half pint of warm water, then add the other ingredients with a quart of cold water. A dessert-spoonful three or four times a day.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw21-1y

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back, lassitude, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated sneezing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose; in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first stages use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild purgative to remove the tightness across the forehead, etc. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. w1d23-5w

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. w3d1-1m

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited our shores for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our saddle rock astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL combined with the HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. w3d1-1m

Daily Evening Review

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Mechanics' Institute.

There was a meeting of the Directors of the Mechanics' Institute at their new rooms on Monday evening. The report of Mr. Lewis, the Chairman of the Library Committee, detailing the improved arrangements of the books and catalogues, was read, and a vote of thanks was tendered to him for the trouble he had taken in the matter. It was resolved that the library should be open between the hours of ten and one, three and six, and half-past seven and ten. Other routine business was transacted.

A Rare Chance.

We have received copies of the engravings "Meeting of Wellington and Blucher" and "Death of Nelson," offered to every subscriber to the Canada Presbyterian, and they will undoubtedly prove beautiful ornaments to any home. The offer of this premium is still open to every person who subscribes for the Presbyterian, either directly or through this office. By subscribing for it along with the REVIEW, fifty cents and all trouble of transmitting your money to Toronto will be saved. The pictures themselves are now on view in the window of the REVIEW Office, and an inspection of them is invited.

Vennor and the Postal Card.

Last week the REVIEW published a postal card from Mr. H. G. Vennor, in which he promised Peterborough a cold tidal wave and snow. The frosty wave reached Peterborough safely on Saturday, distributing itself equally among all, reducing the mercury down to within 4° of zero. The cold wave still lingers. The snow, according to promise, arrived this morning, and is being unfairly distributed over the land, piling up in some localities while leaving the ground bare in others, without any regard to the wishes of the people. The young are delighted and are ready to carry Vennor about in state, while the old are ready to vote him a home in South America.

Fancy Bazaar.

A bazaar, to last for two days, was opened this morning in Bradburn's Hall, in aid of the building fund of St. John's Sunday School. At the entrance of the hall on the right was the Post Office, where Miss Walton, as Post Mistress, delivered letters to all who called for them and paid postage. On the left was the Fish Pond, presided over by Miss Stapleton, where no fisherman was disappointed of a bite. On the south and west sides of the hall were stalls covered with a great variety of ornamental objects and many useful ones. At the south stall Mrs. Beck and Miss Chamberlain officiated, being assisted by Mrs. Nesbitt, Miss Hall and Miss Walton. Next to this was a children's stall, under the charge of Miss Minnie Beck and Miss Dollie Shaw. Along the west side was a long stall where Mrs. Weller, Mrs. Hatton, Miss Cottingham, Miss Weller and Miss Hatton, found many customers for their attractive wares. At the north-west corner was an Art Gallery, where those with artistic tastes were absolutely astonished, under the guidance of Miss Ullyot. On the north and east sides of the hall were the refreshment tables in charge of Mrs. C. Perry, Mrs. Snyder and Mrs. Madison, ably assisted by Miss Snyder, Miss Wrighton, Miss Ullyot and Miss Gafford, who dispersed their appetizing viands in a charming manner. The bazaar was noticeable for the unusual number of useful articles exhibited, and for the still more unusual honesty of the fair saleswomen, who actually gave change. No doubt they will reap a rich harvest this evening.

THE PETERBOROUGH BONSPIEL.

The Great Curling Event of the Season—The Beginning of the Play.

The out of town curling clubs arrived yesterday and made their headquarters at the Huffman House. At a meeting there last evening, the drawing for positions was conducted by the managing committee in the presence of all the representative skips and the umpire, resulting as follows:—Toronto vs. Orillia; Newcastle vs. Cobourg; Port Hope vs. Bowmanville; and Lindsay vs. Peterborough.

The intention was to play the first games on the Little Lake, but owing to the inclemency of the weather and the fall of snow this morning it was mutually agreed by all the clubs interested to play the whole contest in the covered rink.

The playing started at 9 o'clock and continued until 12.30, noon. The following clubs began the contest:—

Mr. Robert Innes acted as umpire.

The Rink has been very tastefully decorated with evergreens and bunting, and new gas pipes and jets have been added, creating a brilliant effect. Around the balcony are displayed several mottos as follows:—"God Speed the Princess Louise," "May Victory Crown our Club where'er they go," "Prosperity to the Curling Club," "Speed the Plough," "God Bless our Dominion," "To our Sister Clubs," "A Curler's Welcome," "Kindest Wishes to the Directors," "May the Rink Prosper" and "Success to Lord Dufferin."

The following rinks are playing this afternoon, having commenced at 1.30 o'clock, the games not being concluded as we go to press.

To-night the programme will consist of fancy games, and will be arranged as follows:—Toronto vs. Port Hope; Lindsay vs. Bowmanville; Newcastle vs. Peterborough; Cobourg vs. Orillia.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

A GRANT IN AID OF THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL ROUTE.

The Railway By-Law Sustained—A Road Grant Refused—Memorial as to County Councils.

SATURDAY.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment, the Warden in the chair, all the members being present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

THE TRENT NAVIGATION.

Mr. GOLBORNE moved, seconded by Mr. SANDERSON,—That the Warden be authorized to pay from time to time an equitable share of the expenses of the committee of the Trent Valley Canal, the whole not to exceed the sum of five hundred dollars, and that the corporate seal be attached hereto to give this resolution the effect of a by-law.

Moved in amendment by Mr. LANG, seconded by Mr. MOLONEY,—That the amount be limited to $200.

The amendment was lost and the original motion carried.

On motion of Mr. SANDERSON, Mr. Collins' name was added to the Finance Committee, it having been omitted therefrom by mistake.

A SPECIAL GRANT.

Moved by Mr. GOLBORNE, seconded by Mr. STRICKLAND,—That a grant of $100 be made to open the boundary line between the Counties of Peterborough and Hastings, between the Townships of Chandos and Wollaston, provided the County of Hastings give the same amount, to be expended under the joint superintendence of the Reeves of the townships.

On motion, Mr. J. B. McWILLIAMS was heard before the Council in support of the grant, and urged that it be made in consideration of the large amount which he had been able to induce the Government to make on the Colonization Roads in this county this year. He read a list of grants which he had recommended the Government to make, and stated that the estimates just brought down covered them all.

The motion was lost on the following division, viz:—

YEAS—Messrs. Strickland, Oliver, Pearce, Rork, Burgess and Golborne.—6.

NAYS—Messrs. McCarthy, McCliggott, Walsh, Moloney, Kidd, Lang, Collins, Stewart, Sanderson and Fitzgerald.—10.

THE RAILWAY BY-LAW.

Moved by Mr. MOLONEY, seconded by Mr. LANG,—That whereas a number of railway bonus by-laws have already been voted in this county which have cost the county a considerable sum of money and no good accomplished in return therefor, be it therefore resolved that the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company be required to deposit security with the county for the payment of the expenses of submitting the by-law to be voted on on the 21st February next, to be paid by them in the event of the by-law not being carried at the polls, and also in the event of its being carried to pay the expenses should the road not be carried to a successful completion according to the terms of the by-law.

Several members said had Mr. Moloney brought forward this matter when the by-law was under consideration and before it had been submitted to the people and published, they would have supported it, but as the matter now stood it had gone beyond their control. It was also pointed out that only yesterday Mr. Moloney had moved a resolution to have the by-law published in a fourth paper, thereby increasing the cost of its publication.

The motion was therefore lost on the following division:—

YEAS—Messrs. Moloney, McCarthy, McCliggott, Walsh and Lang.

NAYS—All the rest of the Council.

On motion of Mr. GOLBORNE, a by-law was put through its several stages and passed, confirming the report of the Finance Committee.

MAKING ADDITIONS.

On motion of Mr. McCARTHY, seconded by Mr. McCLIGGOTT, the name of the Reeve of Ennismore was added to the Committee on Equalization and Assessments.

On motion of Mr. OLIVER, seconded by Mr. GOLBORNE, Mr. Carnegie was added to the deputation appointed yesterday with reference to the Lakefield dam, with a view to the said deputation presenting the memorial with regard to that portion of Harvey taken from this county and attached to Victoria.

COUNTY COUNCILS.

Moved by Mr. KIDD, seconded by Mr. GOLBORNE,—Whereas an agitation has sprung up in some quarters looking to the re-construction or substitution of some other body to discharge the duties now discharged by County Councils; and whereas this Council is of opinion that the evils complained of arise solely from the large number of representatives given to municipalities in the more densely populated portions of the Province under the present Municipal Act; and whereas this Council is of opinion that most of the duties now performed by County Councils cannot be as effectually performed by a representative body like County Councils and that their being performed by any other body or parties excepting those annually elected directly by the people, is open to very grave objections, and would be very unsatisfactory to the people at large; and whereas we believe the evil complained of can be obviated by providing for the reduction of the number of Deputy Reeves in some equitable manner; and that the Warden, Mr. Sanderson, and the Clerk be instructed to prepare a memorial to the Ontario Government and Legislature, embodying the views of this Council as herein set forth, and also send a circular to the various municipalities throughout the Province, inviting their co-operation by petitioning the Government and Legislature to the same effect.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. PEARCE, a by-law was passed confirming the appointment of Mr. Rogers as a member of the Equalization Court.

The Council then adjourned.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

The signal for a new departure has been sounded by the manager of the Bank of Montreal, through the issue of a circular to the customers of the bank severally asking for a copy of the balance sheet for the current year, and promising that the information so given shall be held strictly confidential. It will be curious to note to what extent this request will meet with compliance, if ever the fact should transpire. That there is a right and propriety in a creditor's asking a debtor how he stands financially will hardly be denied in theory, but when it comes to so practical an application of the rule as here suggested, doubtless there will be not a few to take exception to the new method. A customer applying for accommodation closets himself with his banker, and becomes very confidential indeed, verbally, but it needs no effort of the imagination to fancy the sudden access of reserve which would take hold of an applicant were he asked to substantiate his statements with, not figures merely, for these in detached form are often submitted, but with that most searching of all exhibits, a balance sheet. As custom now has it, not until insolvency stares a merchant in the face is he called upon to expose his financial state to any one beyond an extent which may seem to him advantageous, or may be thought to secure his own ends. To demand such an exposition of the undoubtedly solvent is to attempt to revolutionize a most important branch of banking, and might be expected to encounter much strenuous opposition, even if ultimately successful.—Journal of Commerce.

BY-LAW No.—

A BY-LAW to amend By-law No. 439, of the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the County of Peterborough, called a By-law to aid and assist the Huron and Quebec Railway Company, etc.

WHEREAS, the Municipal Council of the County of Peterborough on the Eleventh day of November, A.D., 1875, by their By-law No. 439, granted aid to the Huron and Quebec Railway Company, now the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, to the amount of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, subject to certain conditions therein named.

And whereas, Municipal aid to a very large amount has already been voted to aid in the construction of the [illegible] is expedient and desirable to facilitate the said Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company in their efforts to secure the speedy construction of said railway, notwithstanding that the said Company has not, and shall not have received aid by way of Municipal bonuses, to the extent of one million of dollars, as in the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth clauses of the said by-law No. 439 mentioned and provided for.

Be it therefore enacted by the Corporation of the County of Peterborough, and it is hereby enacted, that By-law No. 439 aforesaid, be and the same is hereby amended by striking out clauses Six, Seven, and Eight, and by substituting in subsection "e" of Section Ten the words Town of Peterborough for the words "City of Toronto."

The said Company shall erect at the Town of Peterborough workshops of a capacity for, and shall therein employ constantly not less than one-half of the mechanics and hands employed in the shops of said railway in the Town of Peterborough and the City of Ottawa and between those points, before they shall be entitled to payment of the debentures or monies last payable under the by-law aforesaid.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A Whole Family Murdered in their Home, Which was Burnt with their Bodies.

Special to the Review.

LUCAN, Ont., Feb. 4.—About 12 o'clock last night a body of men, blackened and masked, entered the dwelling of the somewhat notorious Donnelly family and murdered the inmates, the father, mother, one son, and a girl, a niece. A small boy, named Connor, took refuge under the bed and escaped unhurt. They then set fire to the house, which, together with the murdered bodies, was totally consumed. Another son residing about three miles from the homestead was called to his door about the same hour and was shot. He is also dead. The township is wild with excitement.

OTTAWA.

Special to the Review, Feb. 4.

CURLING.—The Ottawa Curling Club leave for Montreal next week to play the Local Club for the Quebec tankard.

THE BILLING'S BRIDGE MURDER.—There are no new developments in the Billing's bridge murder. The woman has been confined in jail since the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder. She is not so calm as previously in the affair.

BURNED ALIVE.—The name of the man who was nearly burned alive is Stewart, a painter by trade, and he is still prostrated with the small-pox.

CAMPBELLTOWN, N B.

Special to the Review, Feb. 4.

DELAYED BY A STORM.—A severe easterly snow storm commenced yesterday afternoon and continued during the night with unabated violence. The storm has moderated a little, but it is still drifting and snowing along the line, and the road is heavy. The Vice-Regal train is just passing Sayabec station, forty-eight miles from Rimouski, at 10 a.m. The Vice-Regal party will probably reach Point Levi about seven or eight p.m.

CLARKSVILLE.

Special to the Review, Feb. 4.

ROASTED ALIVE.—Last night the Hamilton and North Western Railway express was going north from here, when between Lisle and Creemore the engine ran off the track. The fireman was instantly killed, the engineer's leg was broken and the badly scalded brakeman became wedged between the cars, which were piled one on top of the other, and had his leg literally roasted. Some passengers received slight bruises. The engine is a total wreck.

TORONTO.

Special to the Review, Feb. 4.

ORANGE ELECTION.—At a meeting of the Loyal Orange County Lodge of Toronto last night, E. F. Clarke, of the Orange Sentinel, and corporation printer, was elected County Master, defeating Alderman Adamson, who has held the position for twenty years.

ENQUIRY REFUSED.—Attorney-General Mowat has refused the application of the County Council of Bruce for an investigation into certain complaints against the Registrar, Mr. McLay.

MILLBROOK.

Special to the Review, Feb. 4.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES.—Mr. John Carnegie, of Peterborough, has been elected to represent this district in the Board of Agriculture.

T. V. C.

At the session of the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham, the following paragraph was inserted in reply to the Warden's address:—

"The deputation at Ottawa were assured by the Minister of Railways and Canals that the Trent Valley scheme should be proceeded with so soon as the finances of the country would bear the expenditure, and that the construction of the Murray Canal would be commenced without delay. He was also pleased to express surprise that a work of such vast importance to the Dominion had been so long overlooked by the different Governments of the country."

A MONTREAL party is said to have purchased a phosphate farm of 400 acres in Ottawa county for $7,000.

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back, headache, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated sneezing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose, in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first degree use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild aperient, to remove the tightness across the forehead, etc. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. wd22-2w

WORK OR BREAD.

DUBLIN, Feb. 3.—A large number of unemployed people to-day made a demonstration before the Mayor's office at Clonmell, demanding work or bread, accompanying their demands with threats to sack the bakers' shops.

THE HOME RULE LEAGUE.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—At the annual meeting of the Home Rule League to-day, they rejected a proposed Parnellite resolution censuring certain members of Parliament. Mr. Shaw delivered a long speech, in which he repudiated any ambition to become the Home Rule leader, and said that Mr. Butt's broken-hearted look twelve months ago had cured his ambition. The treasurers of the Home Rule League have resigned.

THE MANSION HOUSE COMMITTEE.

DUBLIN, Feb. 3.—The Mansion House Relief Committee met to-day. It was announced that £41,000 sterling had been received to date, and £15,400 distributed. Replies to inquiries from the Mayor had been received from thirty Bishops, including three Catholic Archbishops, and one Protestant Archbishop, repudiating Mr. Parnell's charges of discrimination against the rent defaulters, and expressing entire confidence in the committee.

A GOVERNMENT BILL PROMISED.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The Standard states that among the measures promised by the Government to be presented at the opening of Parliament is a bill regarding the distress in Ireland.

AMERICAN.

MURDERED HIS DAUGHTER.

NEWTON, N. J., Feb. 3.—Frederick Terill, convicted of murdering his daughter, has been sentenced to be executed on April 3rd.

A POLICE MISTAKE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—John Castine is dying at the hospital from a fractured skull. It is not known how he was injured. He was locked up by the police on Saturday for alleged intoxication, and his true condition was subsequently discovered at the city prison.

ENTICING FEMALE CLERKS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—An afternoon paper implicates a Southern Senator in the ruin of one of the young women clerks in the Treasury Department. It is reported briefly that women employed in the Department have been discovered enticing certain associates to houses of ill-fame to be introduced to Congressmen.

A FATAL FIRE.

BEVERLY, Mass., Feb. 3.—The summer residence of W. B. Pickman has been burned. The loss is $20,000. By a falling chimney a boy was killed, and several firemen were hurt, one, it is feared, fatally.

FIGHTING THE INDIANS.

DENVER, Feb. 3.—On January 27th the Utes attacked a supply train with ammunition and rations for Major Morrow thirty miles north-east of Palomas. Forty men of the ninth cavalry guarding the train repulsed the Indians with heavy loss. Two soldiers were wounded and one scout was killed. On Friday two companies under captains Rucker and Hooker, attacked Victoria's band five miles north of Palomas and drove them from the ford which they were attempting to cross. One Indian scout was killed and three soldiers were wounded. In the night Victoria stole up the river and crossed the Rio Grande. On Sunday Morrow discovered the trail, and marched thirty-five miles that day in pursuit. Morrow telegraphed on Sunday that he was but a few hours behind Victoria. Measures have been taken to prevent his escape through San Nicolas and San Augustin passes. The Mexican troops are actively co-operating. Victoria must soon surrender, as all hope of escape is cut off, and his ammunition and stock are fast giving out. Governor Wallace intends, if Victoria is captured, to have him and his band arraigned on indictments for murder.

MINING EXCITEMENT.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The Times' Bangor despatch reports that Maine is in a fever of excitement over the developments of rich copper and silver mining properties. Large profits have been realized already. It is estimated that two or three millions have been invested in lands in the mineral districts since midsummer by the citizens. Lands which were worth ten dollars an acre less than two years ago, have been sold for one and two thousand dollars an acre. A Mining Exchange has been established in Bangor.

A HERALD FISH STORY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The Herald's Halifax despatch says that Henry Youle Hinds, one of the Governors of King's College, an eminent scientist and a member of the Halifax Fishery Commission, alleges that while engaged upon the Commission he obtained information which satisfied him that the official statistics procured for the British case had been falsified before their presentation to the Commission. He says that he obtained documentary proof of the fact and proceeded to England in November, 1878, to lay it before the British Government. After repeated failures to interest the English Government in the matter he wrote Delfosse, the Belgian Minister at Washington, who had presided over the Commission, giving details of the falsifications he had discovered, but Delfosse attached no importance to the charges. It is probable that Hinds' facts came to the knowledge of the United States Government and influenced the State Department to protest against the payment of the award of five and a half millions.

A STATEMENT is just published by the Beaver Line of steamers, showing that the total loss on live stock shipped by their steamers during the past year was only 0.41 per cent on cattle and 1 per cent on sheep.

From a Prominent Veterinary Surgeon.—MR. WM. M. FATAL RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—By a railway collision at Argenteuil, Department of the Seine and Oise, seven persons were killed and twenty wounded.

GLADSTONE VIOLENT.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—At a meeting of Liberals in Liverpool, who support the candidature of Lord Ramsay, eldest son of the Earl of Dalhousie, for the House of Commons, a letter was read from Gladstone violently attacking the Government.

WHOLESALE FORGERIES.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Samuel Swim, who was arrested yesterday, and was detained as a witness against Brockway, a well-known forger, has made a confession that he gave Brockway a check paid him for wages by Alexander Taylor, jr., banker, and that Brockway said he intended to use said check to perpetrate forgeries on the bank of the Republic on which the check was drawn. The arrest of Brockway, who was said to be the leader of one of the most dangerous gangs of forgers and counterfeiters in the country, will, it is thought, effectually break up the gang. The forgeries of this band in this city alone will, it is thought, reach the sum of $300,000, while there is hardly a city in the Union that does not contain a victim.

AMERICAN.

BOILED ALIVE.

WILMINGTON, Del., Feb. 4.—U. G. Gallagher fell into a vat of boiling logwood decoction at the Morocco factory yesterday, and was boiled alive.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

LEAVENWORTH, Ks., Feb. 4.—The cold snap is hard on negro emigrants. An old colored refugee was found frozen to to death in a shanty yesterday.

A WIDESPREAD STORM.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The loss on Coney Island by the storm is estimated at from $30,000 to $300,000. Four wrecks were driven ashore at and near Long Branch. The Times says the storm was one of the fiercest of recent years. The area covered was 2,000 miles long, by 1,000 miles wide, and included more than 20 States.

THREATS OF EXPOSURE.

Agent Whitney, of the society for the prevention of crime, stated yesterday that the society was engaged in a systematic espionage of all disreputable resorts in the city, and that several vile houses had been closed with the aid of influential and wealthy citizens of respectability, whose names had been obtained in this way, and who were compelled to take this course by threats of exposure.

PRINCESS BRIGHT EYES SAFE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The Tribune's Washington report says that Schurz denies that he ever thought of causing the arrest of Bright Eyes for leaving her reservation.

A LADY PICKPOCKET.

The wife of ex-Coroner Jack Wildeys was sentenced to 30 months in the penitentiary yesterday for picking pockets.

A hundred employees of Lorillard & Co., tobacconists, struck yesterday, refusing to sign the arbitrary agreement recently demanded by the firm.

THE DISTRESS IN IRELAND.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The Herald's Dublin despatch says that three hundred thousand people are slowly starving, and can only be kept alive by superhuman efforts. The local efforts are becoming feeble, the people looking to the world for succor. The returns by counties where the chief distress exists shows the number of those suffering, as follows:—Mayo, 64,000; Galway, 43,260; Sligo, 42,330; Kerry, 33,100; Donegal, 28,000; Roscommon, 23,150; Cork, 22,806; Clare, 19,360; Limerick, 7,000; Tipperary, 6,360; Leitrim, 5,600; Wicklow, 2,000; Monaghan, 2,300; Westmeath, 1,960, Longford, 1,875; Kilkenny, 1,790; total, 312,370.

PORT HOPE.

BEGINNING EARLY.—The Guide says:—A lad named Wm. Holman, belonging to Smith's Falls, was brought to town on Monday night en route to Penetanguishene. The lad was implicated, with another, who was sentenced to two years hard labor, in a burglary at Smith's Falls, and for his share in the crime will spend the next three months in the Reformatory. He passed last night in the cells. The detective put up at the Queen's.

OFF THE TRACK.—On Monday a freight engine on the Midland Railway jumped the track near Midland village. The engineer reversed, and then, along with the fireman, jumped for life. The engineer alighted unhurt, but the fireman had his face badly cut.

NARROW ESCAPE.—The Times says:—This Riding came within an ace of losing its valued member of the House of Commons on Monday. Col. Williams was being driven towards the market from John street, and the rig was going down the hill near Blackham's hotel. A Midland train came along at a pretty good rate of speed. The driver failed to whistle or ring the bell, and before they were aware the horse's nose was up against the engine. Fortunately the animal was perfectly docile, and did not run away. This is another warning to railway officials to signal when near crossings. We are glad that the Colonel and his coachman succeeded in pulling up in time, and we trust that nothing will befall our representative, who is needed in Parliament on and after the 12th.

California Minstrels.

The Montreal Star thus speaks of the California Minstrel troupe which will perform at the Opera House on Friday evening:—"A fair house greeted the first appearance of the Original California Minstrels at the Theatre Royal last evening, which enjoyed the splendid bill prepared for it, as was evinced by the repeated encores which followed the specialties of the well-known 'burnt cork artists,' such as Cool Burgess, Ned Wambold, Alf. Lawton, Frank West and J. W. Morenton, the latter assuming the role interlocutor with much success. The introductory overture was a grand medley and is worthy of special mention, while the Crimmin's Brothers, in their clog specialties, and the Weston Brothers in their performances on different kinds of instruments were frequently applauded."

Daily Evening Review

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1880.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA BY-LAW.

OUR readers are already aware that the County Council, in response to a request of the Directors of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, have submitted a by-law to the people for the purpose of making certain amendments in the conditions attached to the bonus voted by the County to this company in 1875. As a matter of course, the submission of this by-law will bring to the front all the arguments which can be used against the scheme itself, as well as any that may be either fairly or unfairly used against the real issue now before the ratepayers. Upon one point, however, all will be agreed, viz.: that the by-law is an important one, and should be carefully considered from every point of view before being voted either for or against.

The question now before the ratepayers of the County naturally divides itself into two issues, namely:—Is it expedient, under any circumstances, to grant $150,000 for this undertaking; and secondly, are the alterations now asked for such as can be granted with safety? The people having already, by a large majority, given an affirmative answer to the first question, we may be pardoned for assuming for the present, at least, that they are of the same opinion still, and proceed at once to consider the second.

As in the discussion of any question it is all-important to begin with the right facts, we deem it advisable to begin by stating fully and frankly the alterations which the new by-law, if passed, will make in the original.

In the first place, it cannot be too strongly impressed upon the mind of the reader that the by-law now before the ratepayers makes no alteration whatever in the amount of bonus to be given. That, in the future as in the past, will be $150,000. Then as to the alteration of conditions: This by-law proposes to repeal sections six, seven and eight of the present by-law, which read as follows:—

> 6. That the said debentures when so issued shall in pursuance of the requirements of the Act incorporating the said Company be deposited with the Trustees named or to be named in accordance therewith but shall not be disposed of by such Trustees or converted into money until Municipal aid by way of bonus to the extent of the sum of one million of dollars towards the construction of a Railway connecting Toronto and Ottawa as hereinbefore mentioned shall have been actually voted by the Municipalities by By-laws containing similar provision as to commencement and completion of Railway as herein contained and the debentures of such Municipalities deposited with the said Trustees as required by the said Act.
>
> 7. That should such Municipal aid as in the last section mentioned not be actually voted by Municipalities within two years from the time hereinafter fixed for this By-law to come into force then and in such case this By-law and all the provisions thereof shall become actually null and void and of no effect and the debentures issued in pursuance thereof shall be null and void and shall forthwith after the expiration of such two years in that event be returned to the Treasurer of the said County of Peterborough to be cancelled.
>
> 8. This By-law shall become void and of no effect and debentures issued hereunder shall be not valid unless the construction of the said Railway as to that part thereof within the County of Peterborough shall have been actually and bona fide commenced on or before the first day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy seven and unless such construction shall have been so commenced such debentures shall forthwith thereafter be returned to the Treasurer of the said County of Peterborough to be cancelled.

And in the next place it proposes to amend section "C" of section 10, by substituting therein the words "Town of Peterborough" for the "City of Toronto," which will make it read as follows when amended:—

"And to the proceeds of the balance of fifty thousand dollars when the said railway is completed and in running order from the said Town of Peterborough to the said City of Ottawa, for the carriage of freight and passengers, and when workshops of the said company of the capacity hereinafter mentioned, have been erected and completed, and not till then."

That is, instead of reserving the last $50,000 until the road is completed from Ottawa to Toronto, it becomes payable whenever it is completed between Ottawa and Peterborough, and our eastern outlet fully secured—the first $100,000 being payable, $60,000 so soon as the road is "properly graded and bridged and ready for the railway ties and iron from the Town of Peterborough to the eastern boundary of the said township of Belmont, including bridging of the Otonabee River at or near Peterborough," and $40,000 "so soon as the road is properly graded and bridged as aforesaid from the Town of Peterborough to the City of Ottawa" or Carleton Place, with running powers over the Canada Central from there to Ottawa. The only other provision of this by-law is the substitution of a new clause regarding workshops, whereby it is provided that one-half of the men employed on the road shall be employed in workshops in Peterborough, instead of a minimum number of 200 hands as in the original by-law. Summarized then, these alterations amount to three, namely:

1. Doing away with the requirement, that $1,000,000 of municipal bonuses shall be voted before one bonus is available.

2. That the whole amount shall be payable so soon as the road is completed with workshops, and running between Ottawa and Peterborough, instead of waiting for its completion to Toronto; and

3. That instead of being bound to employ a minimum number of 200 men in the Peterborough workshops, they shall be bound to employ the same number as are employed at Ottawa.

Let us take a glance at the practical effect of these amendments. With regard to the million dollar clause, we have always looked upon it as a useless one, and cannot therefore regret its elimination. The question for those voting the bonus is not what other municipalities give, but what will it pay them to give, and next that it shall only be paid when reasonable guarantees are afforded, that they will get what they give their money for. Now, what the people of this county propose to give their $150,000 for, is to get a road which will take their produce to market cheaper than present routes, and to better markets. That bring the case the question to be answered is:—Are the conditions attached to the several payments such as will ensure the construction of the road if the money is paid under them? Let us see: the first $60,000 is to be paid when the road is ready for the ties and iron from the Town of Peterborough to the Eastern boundary of Belmont—a distance of 40 miles, and including a costly bridge over the Otonabee, and also right of way. The cost of this would scarcely fall short of an average of $7,000 per mile, which would amount to $280,000 of expenditure before one dollar of our bonus would become available, and then the most they could get would be the County and Town $60,000 each, or $120,000 in all, leaving $160,000 to be invested of private capital, an investment not likely to be made without ample confidence that the road will be completed. Then the next $40,000 only becomes payable when the road all the way to Ottawa is in an equally advanced state and requiring an even larger proportionate increase of expenditure of private capital, and the balance only when the road is completed and running the entire distance, and making altogether conditions which as well nigh guarantee us the road if a dollar of our money goes into it, as it is possible to do.

The second point is one practically of the value of direct connection with Toronto. So far as the farmer is concerned such a connection is in our opinion valueless, if not detrimental. Every article he produces finds a market in the east, and every article he consumes comes from the same quarter. Moreover, so far as the local market along the line is concerned—and this road would open up a large local market for farm produce between our own county and Ottawa—it would be much better for the farmers of this county that the road should terminate at Peterborough, because it would give them almost a monopoly of the same, and prevent the farmers further west competing with them on equal terms. As it is their own interest they should look out for, it seems to us that this lopping off of the Toronto part of the scheme should be looked upon as a gain instead of as a disadvantage.

And lastly, as to the alteration in the workmen clause, it seems a reasonable one, inasmuch as in bad times the company could not be expected to keep men doing nothing, while in good times every increase would, as it should, be shared in by Peterborough.

A DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

TWO STORES BURNT IN ONE OF OUR MAIN BUSINESS BLOCKS.

Others More or Less Damaged—Some Goods Destroyed and Others Removed—Firemen Hurt.

Peterborough was visited by the fire fiend this morning, resulting in the destruction of a large amount of valuable property. At about one o'clock fire was discovered issuing from the store formerly occupied by John Elder and now by Messrs. W. W. Farley & Co., of Toronto, containing dry goods and fancy goods. The Town Hall bell was quickly struck and the firemen turned out with alacrity. The steamer was taken out of the house by the firemen and drawn to the Simcoe street bridge before the horses could be got to the scene. The hose was stretched and ready long before sufficient steam was made. The fire was started in the basement, and must have been burning some time before it was observed, for almost as soon as it was discovered the whole building was on fire. The flames shot up through the sky-light opening between the first and second storeys, setting the whole in a blaze almost instantaneously, thus rendering it utterly impossible to save anything from the burning building, or for the firemen to get any control over it. Owing to the delay in getting water, and the bursting of some 300 feet of hose, the fire got great headway, and the adjoining buildings were in imminent danger of being destroyed. The active exertions of the firemen, however, prevented the spread of the fire beyond the burning of the upper portion of the next building to the north, and the bad scorching of that on the south side. It is said to have been one of the worst fires to handle that Peterborough has had in several years. Messrs. J. G. Macdonald and S. H. Henderson are spoken of by the strangers in town, who were present, as deserving of special mention for their thorough business-like way of handling the department, which duty mostly fell on them, owing to the absence of the Chief Engineer, who was unable to be present.

The weather was intensely cold, and ice made rapidly. Several of the firemen were badly frozen and considerably burned, but none were very seriously injured. They will, however, suffer for a season, although they will not be laid up by their hurts.

The fire is supposed to have been caused by the careless throwing away of a lighted match after lighting a pipe, and letting it drop into the basement through the broken panes of glass beneath the grating in front of the store. W. W. Farley & Co. lose about $5,000 worth of goods. It is not known if they are insured, and it is thought they had not renewed their expiring policies on account of the closing out of the business here. Mr. Farley will arrive in Peterborough this evening. The next store north was occupied by Mr. James Best, and contained about $13,000 worth of dry goods, which were in great part removed to the store opposite in a damaged condition, mostly by water and smoke. Mr. Best's loss will probably reach $5,000; he is insured in the Lancashire, of London, Eng., for $4,000. The store next to the burning building south was occupied by Messrs. Oliver & Co., dealers in boots and shoes, and contained $4000 worth of fine work. The stock was removed to the vacant store opposite. It is not known what amount of damage it has sustained, and it cannot be ascertained until it has been overhauled. What damage there may be was caused by water principally. Mr. Henry Best's stove and tinware emporium, adjoining Mr. James Best's dry goods house, suffered somewhat by water. He estimates his loss will not exceed $200. He has a heavy stock of goods, and is insured for $6,000—$3,000 each in the Lancashire Insurance Company, of London, England, and the Western, of Toronto.

The buildings belong to the Dixon estate, and are damaged to the extent of about $12,000, the middle building having nothing but the walls left standing, while the others are more or less damaged. The insurance upon the buildings is $1,000 each in the Canada Fire and Marine Company, of Hamilton, and $2,000 each in the Royal, of London.

It is the intention of Messrs. Rowe & Stevenson to rebuild the stores as soon as the insurance can be adjusted. They are already making the necessary arrangements to go on with the work, so that no time may be lost.

FORESTS AND THEIR PRESERVATION.

Their Commercial Value—Some Useful Statistics—Decline in the Growth of Pine—How Long Will it Last?

The vital importance of our Dominion lumber resources is so self-evident, as one of the principal sources of our national wealth, that it does not need any special wisdom in making the statement. To a considerable extent our timber supply occupies much the same position as coal bears to the internal wealth of Great Britain. It may be remembered that some ten years ago the question, "How long will our coal last," occupied the serious attention of some of England's most eminent commercial economists, statisticians and scientific men. Some anxiety was naturally felt until the result of their researches was made public. But their speculations differed so widely, varying from one hundred to two hundred and fifty years, that the nation relapsed into its former indifference so quickly—probably because there was no immediate danger of the precious article giving out in their generation, also for the other reason that the great wealth of the British capitalist could always give the highest price for it whenever it became necessary to purchase it elsewhere. So coal continued to be mined, explosions occurred at intervals, with their dreadful losses of life, and the public became used to them as of old.

The same question is beginning to be agitated in Canada, only instead of coal the query is,

"HOW LONG WILL OUR LUMBER SUPPLY LAST?"

The question to Canadians is even more vitally important than the question of coal is to Great Britain, because our lumber serves us in a threefold capacity: 1st. It supplies us with fuel. 2nd. It is our principal article of deal exports. 3rd. From it we also manufacture hemlock extract for tanning and ship the bark for the same purpose. True legislation provides, as much as possible, for future wants as well as for present needs, and the wisdom of permitting the enormous waste in our forests by the reckless use of the axe in order to benefit the comparatively few lumber kings, who grow rich by the operation, is questionable and open to discussion. For every hundred acres of forest land cut up, at least two hundred acres of young trees should be planted to supply their place. The subject, however, is so vast and multifarious in its bearing that within the ordinary limits of a newspaper article, only the most important references to it, and those of them of the briefest character, can be made.

We propose, therefore, to deal with the subject under three heads: 1st. Its commercial aspect. 2nd. Its economical aspect. 3rd. The preservation of our forests, and how it can be affected. The present paper will be devoted to the first of these considerations.

THE COMMERCIAL ASPECT OF OUR TIMBER SUPPLY.

It is strange to get anything like correct information. We should be compelled to go across the Atlantic, so to speak, in order to present Canadians with a true statement of the commercial value of our timber resources, yet so it is. In the report of the Select Standing Committee on Immigration and Colonization which sat at Ottawa last May, Mr. James Trow, M.P., in the chair, most valuable evidence was given upon British American winter exports by an English journalist, Mr. Stewart Thayne, who had made the subject a special study for five years, during which time he had been in Canada two years and a half. From his evidence we gather that Canadian pine is the most valuable of our soft woods to the British consumer, the dimensions of which are larger than can be procured from the timber-producing countries of Europe. The hard woods exported to Great Britain are oak, elm, ash, birch, &c., and the soft woods are white pine, red pine and spruce. The

CONTRAST IN THE DIMENSIONS

of square timber thirty years ago and now is significant because it speaks so plainly of the falling off in our lumber supply, corroborating a remark made in a pamphlet on "Forests and Forestry," written at the request of the former Hon. the Minister of Agriculture, by the Hon. H. G. Joly, in which Mr. Joly says, "If there is no sign of exhaustion, what is the meaning of the complaints that come over the seas to us every year louder and louder, about the falling off in quality and size of our pine hitherto considered the finest in the world?" Here we have two high authorities giving the same evidence, the one a Quebecer, the other an Englishman. Now what does Mr. Thayne say? He says, in answer to a question whether the size of the products of the present day equalled those of former years? "Not in the same proportion. Thus, as regards size, it was quite usual for the square timber shipped from the St. Lawrence thirty years ago to average from 70 to 75 cubic feet per log; whereas at the present day the average of the season's log crop does not range beyond 55 cubic feet! Then in regard to quality, it was no unusual thing at the period just referred to, for the pine rafts to yield from 70 to 80 per cent. of first quality of wood. I think it would be within the mark to state that the pine at present sent to the Quebec market does not furnish 20 per cent. of first quality. About two years ago I took the trouble to ascertain the quality of the stock wintering at Quebec, and the estimate I then formed was lower than the one just quoted; indeed, the deals, in my opinion, did not show 15 per cent. Perhaps, however, some slight allowance should be made for the fact, that this stock was that which was left after the seasons shipments." (a). Mr. Thayne goes back some thirty years. That is about five years over the time estimated in which a pine tree attains its maximum height. From the same authority we gather the following figures:

The value of Canadian wood imported in Britain in 1877, according to the British Board of Trade returns, was £26,000,000.

The total import of hewn timber into Britain during the same year was 103,980,650 cubic feet, of which quantity British North America supplied 24,266,000, or a little less than one-fourth, which included every description of wood, not sawn or split.

Of sawn wood there was imported the same year, 226,637,400 feet, of which the Dominion supplied 62,810,600 cubic feet. So that in rough numbers Canada supplied the United Kingdom with one-fourth of its timber imports, the estimated value of which, exclusive of furniture woods, is set down at £19,705,447, of which amount the Canadian goods were estimated at £5,500,000 sterling.

In 1831 the total importation of hewn wood into Great Britain amounted to 28,109,250 cubic feet. Of this British North America supplied 20,942,950.

In 1840 the total importation of hewn timber was 40,856,150, Canada contributing 32,497,650 cubic feet.

In 1850 it was 43,406,950 cubic feet, Canada sending 20,901,950. Sawn woods, total imports, 39,708,[illegible], including from Canada, 21,740,900 cubic feet.

Thus, the reader has the total exports of Dominion lumber to Great Britain from 1831 to 1877. If he wishes to make an approximate estimate of how many trees are actually represented in these figures, not including loss, he can ascertain them by adding up the totals and dividing the amount by 60 cubic feet, which is about the average size of the tree between the space of thirty years ago, when it averaged 72 feet long, and 1877, when it did not exceed 55 feet. Then, if he is desirous of obtaining the loss, add five per cent., which is rather within than beyond the estimate.

"HOW LONG WILL IT LAST?"

was a question put by Mr. Cockburn, M.P., in regard to the timber supply of Canada. Mr. Thayne, although declining to pronounce any opinion on this score, said:—"I feel bound to say every test I have applied to ascertain the quantity of merchantable timber, actually standing in any section of the country, has convinced me that the resources available are much smaller than public opinion supposes them, particularly of those woods adapted to the export trade. Over four-fifths of the square white pine shipped to the United Kingdom is manufactured in the Ottawa Valley, which area, drained by the Ottawa, covers about 8,000 square miles. The average area of timber lands in the Dominion is about 220,000 square miles. "There is, of course, great waste caused by the manufacture of square timber," said Mr. Thayne, "as one-fourth of the best part of the tree has to be left in the woods in the shape of chips."

With reference to the probable duration of the lumber supply in Michigan and Wisconsin, the Lumberman's Gazette gives it at fifteen to twenty years, and the United States Secretary of the Interior stated in a recent report that from all the information he could obtain there was not enough timber in the whole of the States to last twenty years. This is what he says: "The rapidity with which this country is stripped of its forests must alarm every thinking man. It has been estimated by good authority that if we go on at the present rate the supply of timber in the United States will, in less than twenty years, fall considerably short of our home necessities." Strange to say Sir John A. Macdonald in his report as Minister of Interior for 1878, does not say a single word in reference to the large depletion of our forests, nor is any allusion made to them in a commercial sense. The Government being so largely interested in the revenues derived from the sale of timber limits may be one of the causes for silence. The gross collections of the Department of Crown Lands in Ontario last year from woods and forests alone were $284,816.62. The amount derived from the same source in Quebec in 1877—the last report published—is given at $301,618.85.

PROPER DURATION OF HUMAN LIFE.

The philosophers' ideal of human health and the duration of human life which Dr. Richardson has distinguished himself so deservedly by expounding may be, with our present means and knowledge, Utopian; but it is a noble ideal to be kept before us. Quoting authorities, Dr. Richardson says that life extends naturally to five times the number of years required in the various orders of animals to arrive at maturity. The elephant is young at thirty, and lives to a hundred and fifty; the horse matures at five, and lives to twenty-five years; the lion and ox mature at four and live to twenty; the cat matures in eighteen months, and its full life is seven years and a half. Arguing from the body of ascertained facts of which these are specimens, Dr. Richardson says that in the case of man he arrives at maturity about twenty, and ought therefore to live to one hundred. The body ceases to grow at the end of twenty years, but it does not cease to increase till forty, at which age it reaches its most complete physical condition. During the next thirty years, or to the age of seventy, called the period of invigoration, all the functions become or ought to become more certain, all its organization more perfect. At seventy, old age should begin and last for about fifteen years; and from eighty-five to a hundred there should be ripe old age, not accompanied by disease or pain, but marked by a gradual subsidence of the vital functions. The possibility of gradually arriving at this great prolongation of the active, investigating, inventive, and thinking years of human life is the most limitless of all latent resources of civilization. With the present average longevity in Britain of forty or fifty years, the course of public policy, peace or war, wisdom or folly, is determined by men and women of the imperfect and misleading experience and reflection which are attained at about thirty. In a community living on the average twice as long as at present, the control of affairs would be in the hands of men fortified by the large wisdom of fifty or sixty years; and every question, public or private, would be judged by men and women undisturbed in the exercise of their faculties by defective health or distressing pain. Consider even now what a bound forward we should accomplish if for a single twelvemonth there was not a single headache among the English-speaking races. But not only would the absence of pain and disease prolong and render more productive in every material and mental sense the application of human labour and enterprise; but among its earliest effects would be the development of the degrees of symmetry and beauty in the human frame. Deformity is no part of nature, and to any one who observes it is plain that nature never ceases in its efforts to diminish or cure it; and, what is more, nature is ever on the alert to translate into perfection of faculty and form any improved circumstances of physical condition in food, clothing, shelter, or the abolition of degrading labour which may chance to be arrived at by a community; and so it comes about that the eye of reflective science, aided by the growing certainties of knowledge, can even now see that the tendencies towards a higher physical life within the reach of human powers are beyond the dreams of any of the popular philosophies. Pall Mall Gazette.

The Socialist Programme

The following intelligence has been received from St. Petersburg:—Although the police seized many copies of the Will of the People in the house where Deutche shot himself, the same issue of the paper has already been circulated in St. Petersburg. It contains a programme of the executive committee, stating the only way to gain the reforms they seek is to overthrow the Government by a forcible revolution or conspiracy. The Socialists would then transfer the Government to an Assembly elected by all Russians, irrespective of class. This is the general policy of the Socialists, by which they cast their lot with all oppressed Russians. But when the Assembly is elected the Socialists will recommend a programme in favour of permanent popular representation with full power over general state questions, wide liberty of local self-government, independence of rural communes, the principle that the land is the property of the people, the transfer of all works and factories to working men, complete liberty of speech, conscience, press, public meetings, and associations, and electoral agitation, and replacement of the standing army by a territorial army.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit.

Our food furnishes material for the growth and nourishment of the body by absorption and assimilation. In like manner Victoria Hypophosphites acts in the cure of disease. When swallowed, it is absorbed, taken up by the veins, and circulated through the system, with the blood, reaching the most hidden and remote parts. It is evident, therefore, that the whole system must feel the effects of the remedy. For sale by all dealers. wl&23-2w

COLD AS A TONIC.

We have said that cold, when it acts as a tonic, is an irritant. Every irritant produces a shock and causes an expenditure of the energy of the part irritated. The energy of the part irritated, therefore, becomes depressed; but this depression differs from that produced by a simple sedative, in that it is followed—provided the shock is not so great as to cause exhaustion—by a reaction to or beyond the condition in which the part was prior to the irritation. Thus, cold, as an irritant, affects the vaso-motor system and produces a shock which is followed by a reaction. In other words, this system is exercised, and all moderate exercise tends to strengthen the organ called into action, and permanently to improve its nutrition. Cold, then, is a vascular tonic, and may be used generally or locally. When the circulation is feeble and there is lack of muscular power, the general use of cold will arouse the heart, restore arterial tone, and thereby improve the nutrition of the whole body. For this purpose either the dip, shower, or sponge bath may be used, according to the strength of the patient, taking care never to cause exhaustion by its too frequent or too protracted use. A thorough reaction, as indicated by a glow of the skin, should always follow the bath, and never a sensation of lassitude or fatigue. When the irritant effect produced by the cold water alone is not sufficient, salt or some mild rubefacient may be added. If the patient is too feeble to bear even the sponge bath, simple exposure of the surface of the body to cold air will often prove beneficial. In all cases reaction may be assisted by friction with a rough towel.

A cold douche to the nape of the neck is indicated in the following conditions:

1. When, after sunstroke, the arteries of the head remain dilated, and there is headache or dizziness on exertion or exposure to the sun.

2. In all cases in which headache is confined to one side, and is attended by dilatation of one temporal artery and suffusion of one eye.

3. In false croup, or the crowing respiration of children.

4. In tinnitus aurium, when the throbbing is synchronous with the beating of the heart, and the tympanic arteries are distended, the cold douche to the nape of the neck, aided by the use of hydrobromic acid, may afford relief.

Sponging the chest of a phthisical patient with cold water lessens the susceptibility to cold.

Local applications of cold water are useful in promoting absorption of inflammatory effusions and exudations in the subacute and chronic stages; also in restoring the balance of the circulation in the liver and spleen when enlarged in malarial poisoning.

The hip or sitz bath is useful in hemmorrhoids, prolapse of the rectum, and congestion of the pelvic viscera.—W. H. Thompson, M.D., Professor of Therapeutics, N.Y.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 4.—The market to-day was very small and could scarcely be said to be a market. A few teams were in with beef left over from last Saturday's market, which found slow sale at our lowest quotations. Some of it, no doubt, will have to make another trial before sales are effected. A few potatoes and one or two lots of eggs constituted the general market. Hay and wood seem to form the bulk of to-day's sales. Wheat, oats and peas have not appeared in sufficient quantities this week to form a base for calculating prices. A new feature in our market to-day was a load of fish, comprising codfish, haddock and herring, fresh from Portland, Maine, offered by Mr. Smith, of Port Hope, at 7cts. per per pound.

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw51-1y

Among the Luxuries of Life.

But a brief period has passed since when a month's time was necessary to accomplish a journey of few hundred miles and then we went lumbering over the rough country, highways on springless seats. Now the same journey is made in sumptuous drawing room cars, with all the comforts and many of the luxuries brought to us by servants. Once upon a time when we found it necessary to our health we set apart a brief period to "doctor up" and then came a struggle with that awful Castor Oil. Now we sip it from the bottle while we continue regularly at our vocations. But it is Scott & Bowne's Palatable Castor Oil we take. It is one of the luxuries of life that is afforded at 25 cents. wl&21-1m

Swallowed a Baby.

When Thackeray visited this country for the first time and was invited to partake of a dish of oysters, the the size of our middle rocks astonished him. Accustomed to the small copper-tainted oyster of his own native isle, he paused. But only for an instant, and in one gulp it was down. "How do you feel?" asked a friend. "I feel as though I had swallowed a baby," was the reply. To the benighted foreigner our oysters are a revelation as is also Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil combined with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, which for debility, all bronchial affections and consumption stands unrivalled. It is also acceptable to the most delicate stomach. wl&21-1m

Midland Railway Bill.

The Midland Railway Bill was before the Railway Committee of the Ontario Legislature on Tuesday. The section providing for the issue of the bonds was passed, with a provision that creditors not already arranged with should be entitled to receive bonds for the face value of their debt, or 22½c. in the dollar. Sections giving the Company power to lease the road to other companies, or to lease other roads, to purchase other railways, &c., were struck out. Power was given to extend the railway, or to construct a branch, as might be available for the business of the Company. A proposition to remove the head office of the Company was strongly opposed by a deputation from Port Hope, and it was finally decided that the head office should remain in that town. The Bill was then passed by a vote of 22 to 4.

J. D. Flavelle, Skip.—23.	J. F. Dennistoun, Skip.—9.

The playing as a general thing has not been up to the standard, although some of the rinks exhibited considerable skill. The Toronto men made some very fine play in the morning. There was so much excitement kept up by the players that it became impossible to single out and note the particularly fine individual shots made. Orillia's No. 1 rink made a vigorous and sharp antagonist against Toronto's No. 1, the latter taking the game by only one point. Toronto's No. 2 also exhibited fine playing, as the result of much practice, and were too much for Orillia's No. 2 rink, winning by ten points. This gave Toronto the game by eleven points.

The contest between Port Hope and Bowmanville resulted in the success of Port Hope by six points. Port Hope's No. 2 rink made some fine shots.

In the afternoon the Cobourg club made some fine play, especially John Pratt's rink, reaching a score of 44 points. This match was won by the Cobourg club by 36 points. Newcastle's No. 1 rink made some fine shots, beating Cobourg's No. 1 rink by two points.

Lindsay's No. 1 rink, playing against Peterborough's No. 1 rink, Geo. Brown, Skip, won by four points, while Lindsay's No. 2, J. D. Flavelle, Skip, beat Peterborough's No. 2, J. F. Dennistoun, Skip, by 19 points, giving the game to the Lindsay club by 23 points.

THE DINNER.

Shortly after 5 o'clock p.m., play was suspended, when the members of the club and the members of the various clubs present from a distance, with a few invited guests to the number of nearly ninety, repaired to the large room in the rink where a bountiful and substantial repast had been spread, and to which more than ample justice was done. The chair was occupied by Mr. Adam Hall, jr., President of the Peterborough Club, and the vice-chair by Mr. A. H. Macdougall, Vice-President. After the inner man had been satisfied the Chairman proposed "The Queen," which, having been duly honored, the whole company joined in singing the National Anthem.

The VICE-PRESIDENT then gave "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family."

After which Mr. Gibbons, from Cobourg, sang "Pulling Against the Stream."

The next toast of "The Governor-General and Princess Louise" was proposed by the Rev. Mr. Cameron in a few well chosen and appropriate remarks, and it was duly honored.

Mr. McNEIL sang "Rocky Roads to Dublin" with so much satisfaction, that after repeated calls he was forced to follow it up with "Brown the Tragedian," which was loudly applauded.

CAPT. PERRY (Toronto) then briefly proposed the "Army, Navy and Volunteers," which was responded to by COL. CUBITT, of Bowmanville, who in doing so said he was glad to respond for the volunteers, with which he had now been connected for 47 years, and in whose victories on bloodless fields he had so frequently joined. If their fields, however, had been bloodless, they might fairly claim they had prevented people coming into the country who were not desired, even if they did not meet them. He believed they were still worthy sons of worthy sires, and to-day, as in days of old, the British arms always met with success. As a volunteer he returned thanks for the volunteers. As to the British Army and Navy, their deeds returned thanks for them. He then asked leave to propose a toast, and in doing so said they had met at the first bonspiel which he had ever seen to be a complete success,—the first one at which he had experienced nothing but pleasure. There had not been one disaffected rink; everything was good, the ice was good, the weather was good, and the Peterborough club was ready to do anything and everything their visitors desired to perfection, and they were greatly indebted to them for showing them how to conduct a successful "bonspiel." He concluded by proposing the "Peterborough Club," which was responded to with all the honors and three times three.

The PRESIDENT called upon Mr. J. F. DENNISTOUN to respond, and he did so in a happy and humorous vein, which it is impossible for one not au fait in the curler's language to report, but which was fully appreciated by those present. In concluding he said the Peterborough Club—and especially the committee—undertook to get up this bon-spiel with a good deal of diffidence. Happily the outside clubs had come to their aid and only two clubs—the Caledonia and Scarboro—which they had expected, had not come. It had been an anxious time for the committee, but fortunately they had been blessed with good weather and ice, and it was exceedingly gratifying to the Peterborough Club that every one, so far as they knew, was satisfied, and he trusted that this would not be the last time that they would have a similar pleasure.

The PRESIDENT then called upon Mr. G. H. BERTRAM (Lindsay), to propose the "Roaring Game," and in doing so he expressed regret that some one else had not been called upon. He said it was commonly supposed that this was a purely Scotch game. It was true he believed that the game originated in Scotland—where all good things came from—but Scotchmen would soon have to take a back seat at it. Jack Frost was the great king of the roaring game, and he favored Canada. Some of their most ardent curlers came from Ireland, and he ventured to say that the noisiest men on the rink to-day were Irish. It made business men better to have a good roaring game. The Lindsay club had met the Peterborough, Orillia and other clubs, all determined to win, and it would be found that the man who went at the roaring game determined to win was also determined to win in the battle of life. If a man once tried to be a curler he would soon find himself out of it. He was sure he expressed the warm feeling of all the clubs here when he congratulated the Peterborough club upon the success of their bonspiel. It was impossible to do more than they had done, and the other clubs should imitate their good example.

The PRESIDENT called upon the victorious skips to respond.

CAPT. PERRY, of the Toronto Club, came first, and said the Peterborough Club had a great deal of pluck to undertake such a difficult task as this bonspiel, but they had shown themselves the right men in the right place. They had been ready to give them ice inside and outside and on all sides. There had been no nigging and nagging, everything had gone well, and on behalf of the Toronto players he returned them their hearty thanks for what they had done on behalf of the "Roaring Game."

Messrs. Gamble (Port Hope), McMurtry (Lindsay), Pratt and Macnachtan (Cobourg), [illegible] (Orillia), Cubitt and Burden (Bowmanville), all responded to the toast, and all spoke in the strongest terms of the manner in which the bonspiel was being managed.

Mr. BURDEN then proposed the "Ontario Branch of the Caledonian Club," coupling with the toast the name of the Rev. Dr. Barclay, and in doing so made such a humorous speech as to prove Mr. Burden to be the right man in the right place on such an occasion.

The REV. DR. BARCLAY responded, and in doing so took the opportunity of impressing upon those present the advantages of keeping up their connection with the parent club in Edinburgh, which, although not under the same name, had a history of 400 years.

COL. CUBITT proposed "The Umpire, Mr. Innes," in most complimentary terms, which was duly acknowledged.

Mr. JOHN BERTRAM then called for a bumper for "Our Guests," and in doing so, said that in arranging for this bonspiel they had anticipated a good deal of pleasure, but it had afforded them more pleasure than even a good deal when a previous speaker was speaking of their "pluck" in undertaking to bring so many clubs together. He could not help thinking they might also have said "cheek," after the score which they, as a club, had made; however, he hoped soon to have them back again, when they would show them it was only because it would be "bad manners" for them to beat them this time that they had not done so.

The toast having been duly honored and responded to by Mr. RUSSEL,

Mr. DENNISTOUN said the success of the present meeting was chiefly due to one gentleman—Mr. McNeil, the Secretary of the Peterborough Club. He had worked for it from first to last, and if it had not been for him there would have been no bonspiel—no success. He therefore proposed his health, which was most heartily responded to.

Mr. MCNEIL briefly thanked them, and sang "Castles in the Air" as a response.

Play was then resumed.

CALEDONIA MEDAL.

In the evening Orillia and Peterborough played for the Caledonia medal.

ORILLIA VS. PETERBOROUGH.

No. 1.

W. H. Harvey,	J. F. Dennistoun,
T. A. Main,	R. N. Roddy,
Jos. Jackson,	R. S. Davidson,
Dr. McCosh, Skip.—18.	W. G. Ferguson, Skip.—17.

No. 2.

E. J. Brennan,	Geo. Dunsford,
Dr. A. H. Beaton,	A. H. Macdougall,
M. Miller,	Alex. Bertram,
John Perry, Skip.—12.	Geo. Brown, Skip.—17.

This gave the game to Orillia by one point. This match was closely contested, the Peterborough Club retrieving the prestige lost during the afternoon. Several practice matches were also played.

The addition of gas jets and the display of Chinese lanterns did not seem to add to the illumination. It is said that the frost had affected the main pipes, interrupting the flow of gas. But for this unforeseen cause the rink would have been most brilliantly lighted. There was a fair attendance of spectators.

WEDNESDAY.

The playing began this morning at half-past nine o'clock, and a spirited contest has been the result. The following is the score:—

TORONTO VS. PORT HOPE.

No. 1.

David Walker,	J. O. Clemes,
Rev. Dr. Barclay,	George Reddick,
Wm. [illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible], Skip.—[illegible]	E. Philp, Skip.—15.

No. 2.

T. McGaw,	C. Nixon,
Walter Gillespie,	G. T. Hall,
J. S. Russell,	Wm. Newman,
Capt. Perry, Skip.—18.	J. Gamble, Skip.—16.

The Toronto rinks foot up 35, and the Port Hope rinks 31, giving the victory to Toronto by 4 points.

LINDSAY VS. COBOURG.

No. 1.

Wm. Milne,	J. Henderson,
D. C. Trew,	John Sanders,
G. H. Bertram,	J. Salisbury,
S. A. McMurtry, skip, 19.	E. A. Macnachtan, skip, 10.

No. 2.

Jos. Cameron,	Wm. Hargraft,
Wm. Needler,	Jos. Greenwood,
Wm. McBurney,	P. McCallum, jr.,
J. D. Flavelle, Skip.—22.	John Pratt, Skip.—17.

The Lindsay rinks foot up 41 points and the Cobourg rinks 26, giving the game to the Lindsay Club.

In the afternoon the closing match is being played by the Toronto Club against the Lindsay Club. Considerable excitement was created by the substitution of Mr. Walker for Mr. Fish in the Toronto rink. He was, however, allowed to play. There was a large attendance, and great interest was manifested in the result of the contest.

Canada Safe.

At last the momentuous question has been decided. The "Band of Agitators" at Montreal may now dissolve; the thunderer of the Globe may smooth his ruffled brow; the Bystander may sell his plant, and our Dominion may settle down for another century at least of loyal dependence on the Mother Land. The great question of "Canadian Independence," which has lately been keeping the mind of the public on the rack, was on Monday evening last finally settled by the Peterborough Literary Association. After a long and animated debate, in the course of which much eloquence was displayed on both sides, the decision was left to the meeting, when the vote resulted in a "tie." The Chairman then summed up the arguments on both sides, and showed that those adduced by the negative were overwhelming, and by his vote decided that Canada should remain as she is, a dependency of the British Empire. It is very much to be regretted that so few members of the association were present at this debate.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Moderate to fresh winds; partly cloudy to cloudy weather, with light snow in some localities. Stationary or slightly higher temperature. Peterborough clear weather and light winds. The thermometer indicated this morning at 8 o'clock 16° above zero, gradually rising to 25° at noon.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

THE OPENING OF THE IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT BY THE QUEEN.

The Ministerial Programme—Measures for the Relief of the Distress in Ireland—South African Confederation.

Press Despatch to the Review via Cable and Montreal Lines.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Royal procession, preliminary to opening Parliament, took place in accordance with the programme announced.

The Queen arrived at the House of Lords at ten minutes past two o'clock. Upon receiving a copy of the speech from Lord Cairns, the High Chancellor, Her Majesty handed it back, and as usual Lord Cairns read the speech. The ceremony lasted 15 minutes. The speech was as follows:—

My Lords and Gentlemen:

It is with much satisfaction that I again resort to the advice and assistance of my Parliament. My relations with all powers continue friendly. The course of events since the prorogation of Parliament has tended to furnish additional security to the maintenance of European peace on the principles laid down by the treaty of Berlin. Much, however, still remains to be done to repair the disorder with which the late war has inflicted many parts of the Turkish Empire. A convention for the suppression of the slave trade has been concluded between my Government and that of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan. At the close of your last session I expressed the hope that the Treaty of Gundamuk had happily terminated the war in Afghanistan. In conformity with its provisions my Envoy, with his retinue, was honorably received and entertained by the Ameer at Cabul. While engaged, however, in the exercise of their duty, he and those connected with the Embassy were treacherously attacked by overwhelming numbers, and after an heroic defence, almost all were massacred. An outrage so intolerable called for condign chastisement, and my troops, which, pursuant to the stipulations of the treaty, either had withdrawn or were withdrawing from the territories governed by the Ameer, were ordered to retrace their steps. The skill exhibited in the rapid march upon Cabul and in the advances upon other lines of action reflects the highest credit upon the officers and men of my British and native forces, whose bravery has shone with lustre in every collision with the enemy. The abdication of the Ameer and the unsettled condition of the country render the recall of my troops impossible for the present, but the principle on which my Government has hitherto acted remains unchanged, and while determined to make the frontiers of my Indian Empire strong, I desire to be on friendly relations alike with those who may rule in Afghanistan, and with the people of that country. My anticipations as to the early establishment of peace in South Africa have been fulfilled. The captured position of the Zulu King and the breaking up of the military organization on which his dynasty was based, has relieved my possessions in that part of the world from the danger which seriously impeded their advancement and consolidation. In Basutoland a native outbreak of considerable importance has been effectually quelled by the Colonial forces, while the Transvaal has been freed from the depredations of a powerful chief who, having successfully resisted the former Government of the country had persistently rejected, our attempts at conciliation. I have reason to hope that the time is now approaching when an important advance may be made towards the establishment of a union or confederation under which the powers of self-government already enjoyed by the inhabitants of Cape Colony may be extended to my subjects in the other parts of South Africa. The papers on these and other matters will be forthwith laid before you.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I have directed the estimates of this year to be prepared and laid before you without delay.

My Lords and Gentlemen:

The commission which at the close of the session I informed you I had issued to enquire into the causes of the agricultural depression throughout the United Kingdom is pursuing its labours. Meantime the serious deficiency in the usual crops in some parts of Ireland has rendered necessary special precautions on the part of my Government to guard against the calamities with which those districts were threatened. With this view they have called upon the authorities charged with the duty of administering relief to make ample preparations for the distribution of food and fuel should such a step become necessary, and they have also stimulated the employment of labor by advances, on terms more liberal than those presented by the existing law. I feel assured you will give your sanction to the course which has been adopted, where it may have exceeded the power entrusted by Parliament to the Executive of the Government. A proposal will be submitted to you for providing the funds required for these exceptional advances on the security of the property administered by the Church Temporalities Commissioners. I trust you will be able to resume the consideration of the criminal code and of the improvement of the law of bankruptcy. Bills will be laid before you for enlarging the powers of owners of unsettled land, for consolidating and amending the lunacy laws, and for simplifying the practice of conveyancing. I commend to you these and other measures which may be submitted for your consideration, and I trust the blessings of Almighty God will attend and direct your labors.

Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury were not present at the opening of Parliament. The Queen's reception by the crowd in the streets was very enthusiastic. Seats to view the Royal procession fetched heavy prices. There was the usual search for Guy Fawkes in the cellars of the House of Commons this morning.

The article says that Russia cannot remain inactive, but will also increase her army.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THE STANDING COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR THE CURRENT YEAR.

Appointment of Inspector—Reports of Committees—Proposed Reduction of the Collegiate Institute Staff and Salaries.

The new Board of School Trustees for the current year held their first meeting at the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday evening last, 3rd instant.

Present—Messrs. Denne, Dumble, Burnham, Rutherford, Stevenson, Hughes, Toole, Menzies, McClelland, Wrighton and Shaw.

MR. STEVENSON mentioned that Mr. H. Best was unable to be present, being prevented through the illness of his brother.

APPOINTMENT OF CHAIRMAN.

MR. MORROW, the Secretary of the Board, took the chair, and intimated that the new members having taken the oath of office, the first duty would be the selection of a chairman for the current term of office.

Mr. SHAW said he had great pleasure in nominating Mr. Jas. Stevenson as chairman for the present year. He complimented that gentleman on the manner in which the position had been filled by him for may years past.

Mr. DUMBLE seconded the nomination, and alluded to the extent to which the affairs of the Board trespassed on the time of Mr. Stevenson, irrespective of the regular meetings.

Mr. RUTHERFORD said that Mr. Stevenson had presided over the Board for the past six years in succession, which was proof that the Board had the greatest confidence in his ability for the position.

The appointment of Mr. Stevenson as chairman was confirmed by the unanimous vote of the Board.

Mr. STEVENSON thanked the members and hoped to have the cordial co-operation of the Board in conducting its affairs. He alluded to the admirable manner in which the business of the County Council was conducted, and trusted the School Board would follow so good a model.

APPOINTMENT OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

On motion of Mr. TOOLE, Messrs. Dumble, Wrighton, Shaw, Menzies and the mover were appointed a Special Committee to strike the Standing Committees for the present year, and the members withdrew to make a draft for submission to the Board.

After an interval of twenty minutes the Committee returned, the Chairman submitting the following report:—

The Committee appointed to strike the Standing Committees for 1880 beg to report as follows:

FOR FINANCE COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Shaw, Menzies, Wrighton, Denne and the Chairman of the Property Committee.

FOR COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.—Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Denne, Toole and Burnham.

FOR PROPERTY COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Hughes, Rutherford, Wrighton, Menzies and Best.

SCHOOL SUPERVISION.—Messrs. Dumble, Cox, Shaw, Burnham and Carlisle.

On motion the report was adopted.

The minutes of last meeting were then read and confirmed.

ENQUIRIES.

In reply to a question from Mr. Rutherford, Mr. TOOLE said that the duties of the Board of 1879 ceased upon the appointment of a chairman for the present term of office.

In answer to an enquiry from Mr. McClelland, the CHAIRMAN said that the last meeting of the Board was strictly legal and within the requirments of the School Act, as amended.

In reply to a member, the CHAIRMAN said that the portion of school taxes accruing to the Town from the Township of Douro had all been collected and was in the hands of the Secretary.

Replying to an enquiry from Dr. Burnham, Mr. DUMBLE was of opinion that if a member of the Board absented himself from the meetings of the Trustees for three consecutive months, his seat became vacant. The law was explicit on this point. Still it would only be respectful to call the attention of such absentee to this rule before taking any steps to fill the vacancy. Mr. Geo. A. Cox was the member referred to.

APPOINTMENT OF INSPECTOR.

On motion of Mr. SHAW, seconded by Mr. McCLELLAND, Mr. James Stratton, sr., was appointed School Inspector for the present year.

Mr. TOOLE approved of the appointment, but thought it might have been left over until the following meeting. It was in contemplation to ask from Mr. Stratton some increase of duties which would call for additional remuneration in addition to the salary heretofore paid the Inspector.

ACCOUNTS.

Toker & Co., advertising, stationery, &c.	$17 85
Ormond & Walsh, ink, &c.	19 60
W. H. Robertson & Co., advertising	4 25

These accounts were referred to the Finance Committee to be paid if found correct.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The SECRETARY said he had received a communication from the Department, acknowledging the receipt of the petition which this Board had sent, in conjunction with that of the Clinton High School and others, asking for an increased grant to Institutes.

From Mr. T. Braden, stating that he had provided and paid a teacher to take up his duties during his illness, and requesting the Board to reimburse him for such outlay. Mr. Braden called the attention of the Board to the clause of the School law bearing on this matter.

The communication of Mr. Braden was referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication from Miss Preston, asking to be reimbursed for outlay incurred by her in providing a substitute during her illness, was also referred to the Finance Committee.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

Mr. JEFFERS handed in the report of attendance at the Collegiate Institute, the Central School and the First and Third Ward Schools for the past month, which is summarised below:

	No. on Roll.	Av. Att.
Collegiate Institute	176	[illegible]
Central School	[illegible]	[illegible]
First Ward School	[illegible]	[illegible]
Third Ward School	211	182
Auburn School	68	46
	1126	968

A supplementary report was given by the PRINCIPAL, showing the number of pupils and subjects taught by the several teachers in the Collegiate Institute for January, 1880.

The PRINCIPAL, besides having supervision, teaches in French 72, in German 3 pupils, and in Chemistry 1.

Mr. CAMPBELL, the Classical Master,—in Latin, 83; Greek, 6.

Mr. DICKSON, Senior Mathematical Master,—Arithmetic, Algebra, and Euclid, 100; Statics, 22; Trigonometry, 7.

Mr. EARL, Senior English Master,—History, Grammar, and Literature, 100; University work, 9.

Miss PANTON, Junior English Teacher,—History and Geography, 107; and in Grammar and Literature, 72.

Mr. McKEE, Junior Mathematical Master,—Arithmetic, 107; Algebra and Geometry, 72.

SUPPLIES OF STATIONERY.

Mr. SHAW, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read a statement of the amount of stationery, etc., which had been used by the Institute and Schools for the past year, and suggested the advisability of asking for tenders from the several local stationers for the supplies necessary for the present year. The Board directed that this should be done, and the tenders submitted to the Committee on School Supervision.

REPORT OF PROPERTY COMMITTEE.

Mr. WRIGHTON, in the absence of Mr. Errett, Chairman of the Property Committee for 1879, to whom had been referred the matter of the Janitorship of the several Schools, read the report, and, moved, seconded by Mr. MENZIES,—That it be adopted.

To the Board of Education for the Town of Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—The Property Committee of your Board, in the matter of the appointment of janitors for the several schools, report as follows:

1. That in accordance with your instructions your Committee advertised for applications from parties willing to become Janitors, and have received applications from the parties mentioned in the paper marked "A" annexed hereunto, which shows the amount asked by each person tendering.

2. Your Committee recommend that Wm. James (whose tender is the lowest) be appointed Janitor of the First Ward School at a salary of eighty-five dollars per year.

3. That Alexander T. McGregor be appointed Janitor of the Third Ward School, salary ninety dollars a year, (his tender being the lowest).

4. That George Tighe be appointed Janitor of the Central Schools at a salary of three hundred and forty dollars a year. There are two tenders lower than Mr. Tighe's, but your Committee for, reasons which they deem sufficient, do not see fit to recommend either of the parties for the appointment.

5. Janitors to be appointed are to do and find everything mentioned in written contracts now in existence with present Janitors, and to keep snow cleared off sidewalks in front of their several school lots.

6. These appointments (if carried out), will effect a saving of two hundred and seventy-five dollars a year to the ratepayers, a sum nearly, if not quite sufficient, to provide fuel for all your schools.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. W. ERRETT,
Chairman.

Mr. McCLELLAND moved in amendment, that the report just read be referred to the Property Committee for 1880, for their consideration, before taking action thereon. He thought it a hardship to remove the present Janitors without just cause, and understood that they had agreed to retain their places at the salary named in their request for reappointment.

Mr. TOOLE said it was wholly a matter of economy, and the people looked to the Board to practice economy wherever consistent with efficiency. It might bear the appearance of injustice to dismiss the present janitors, but if it had the effect of saving some $275.00, it was a strong reason why the report just read should be adopted.

Mr. McCLELLAND asserted that Mr. Toole had made no reasonable answer to his contention.

The CHAIRMAN asked Mr. McClelland for a seconder to his amendment.

Mr. RUTHERFORD asked to have the resolution read, authorizing the Committee to take action in this matter.

Mr. SHAW believed that the Committee who had the application under consideration were inclined to give the preference to the old Janitors, if their tenders had been anything like the minimum fixed by the Committee. In point of fact they had made no offer at all, from which the Committee inferred that they wished to be reappointed at their former salaries. It was of course desirable to have these duties performed efficiently as well as cheaply.

Mr. WRIGHTON said Mr. Johnston had made no tender, merely asking to be reappointed, without stating any sum, and the presumption was that he expected his former salary if he was appointed.

Mr. HUGHES agreed with Mr. Toole, and was convinced that the parties who had been appointed by the Committee would be fully competent for their duties.

The report was adopted, the Secretary being authorized to give present Janitors such notice of discharge as the Property Committee might deem necessary.

NOTICES OF MOTION.

Moved by Mr. TOOLE, seconded by Mr. MENZIES,—That the notice of motion submitted at the last meeting of this Board, relative to a change in the management of the Collegiate Institute, be referred to a special committee, consisting of Messrs. Burnham, Shaw, Denne, Rutherford and Wrighton, with instructions to consider the matter and report to this Board at its next meeting.

Mr. DUMBLE wished to call the attention of the Board to another matter before discussing Mr. Toole's motion. While he was confident that good work was being done in our schools, and that they were in a state of great efficiency, yet it was the wish of many of our citizens and business men that the school should afford there sons such an education as would enable them to be of use to their fathers in conducting there business, such as book-keeping and the elements of a commercial education. Book-keeping was already taught, but it should further include an education in the elements of commercial law, similar to that taught at the Commercial Colleges. If Mr. Toole would consent to let his motion stand he had a resolution which he would offer the Board, which he felt assured would meet with there approval.

Mr. Dumble's resolution being of a similar nature to one moved by Mr. Shaw, which follows below, was withdrawn, Mr. Dumble having accepted Mr. Shaw's in preference to his own.

Mr. RUTHERFORD then moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. DENNE,—That Messrs. Shaw, Toole, Dumble, Wrighton and the mover, be a special committee to take into consideration the advisability of reducing the number of teachers now engaged in the Collegiate Institute, and also to advise whether it would be advisable to reduce the salaries paid to teachers, and report to this Board; at its next meeting and also that the Principal and Chairman be requested to attend the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN was about to put Mr. Toole's motion, when that gentleman consented to withdraw it, considering that the action therein proposed was covered by that of Mr. Rutherford, which was again read by the Chairman.

Mr. DUMBLE urged that his resolution be taken as an amendment.

The PRINCIPAL asked to be heard, and on motion his request was granted.

Mr. JEFFERS said he felt sure that the suggestion embodied in one of the resolutions, that "the management of the school should be taken into consideration," was an inadvertency, as the Government Inspector had approved of the staff and organization, and the Board had passed resolutions of confidence. Such reflections as these got abroad were noted elsewhere and often a wrong construction was placed thereon. If it was a proposal that the staff should be lessened or the salaries reduced, he hoped it would include no reflection on the manner in which the work of the school was performed.

Mr. TOOLE said he had no intention of reflecting on the management of the school as referred to by Mr. Jeffers. He had been willing to withdraw his motion, but his seconder had not consented, and now it must stand.

The CHAIRMAN pointed out that the Board had consented to its withdrawal. However, it could be re-introduced as an amendment.

Mr. RUTHERFORD was sure he had no fault to find with the management of the schools, but if they could reduce the staff and expenses of the school without impairing its efficiency, it was desirable that it should be done. Salaries were being reduced all over the country, and he was pledged to see that the ratepayers got the value of their money.

Mr. SHAW said that when he first became a member of the Board he had held the opinion for some time that the staff of the school could be reduced—had in fact been chairman of the committee appointed to make enquiry with that object in view. He had found, however, that he had been doing the schools an injustice, as there was being done in the Collegiate Institute a large amount of advanced common school work. To have this work done in the common school would necessitate a higher grade of teachers, and in the end lessen the Government grant to the Institute. In point of economy we could not save more than $300 by reducing the salaries all round, while as compared with other schools we were paying very little more. As an offset to this outlay, we were assured by the Inspectors that the management of the school was efficient, and the instruction imparted of a superior character.

He would move, seconded by Mr. DUMBLE,—That inasmuch as we have and is desirable to keep a thorough and efficient staff of teachers in our Collegiate Institute, to impart superior education, it is also desirable that this Board should use every effort to keep them fully employed. Be it therefore resolved, that from and after the 1st inst., applicants for admission from outside the County be admitted at one dollar per month, and that the Principal of the School take the necessary steps to form a class for book-keeping and commercial arithmetic.

Mr. McCLELLAND endorsed the remarks made by Mr. Shaw. He had been a member of the Board at the same time as Mr. Shaw referred to, and had entertained opinions of economy with regard to dispensing with certain teachers, but he was now confident that the changes proposed would tend to break down the Institute.

Mr. RUTHERFORD taunted Mr. McClelland with going back on his promises of economy made previous to the elections.

Mr. DUMBLE said if Mr. Rutherford's pledges of economy were no more numerous than the vote he received, then he was not pledged very deeply. He always found new members zealous with professions of economy, but it was zeal without wisdom. This stereotyped resolution for the reduction of salaries invariably made its appearance at the first meetings of the Board. There was no cry of economy from the people, and he came as much in contact with the citizens of the town as any member of the Board. Many people thought that the poor man paid to educate the rich man's children—no greater fallacy ever existed. While $3,000 were expended for the support of our Collegiate Institute, $9,000 were expended on the Common Schools. He gave his reasons for supporting Mr. Shaw in retaining the present staff of the Institute and schools intact. A great deal of advanced Common School work was being done in the High School, and for reasons of policy and in the interests of the people these teachers should be retained. It would pay us in every sense to have our Collegiate Institute crowded with pupils, as thereby our County and Government grants would be largely increased. Our truest effort of economy would be to endeavor to add as many more pupils as possible, and by getting their fees and larger grants, without adding one more teacher, and endeavor to make the Institute a self-sustaining institution. He was certainly against a resolution similar to that introduced by Mr. Rutherford, and hoped with respect to the opinions of the older members of the Board, the resolution would be withdrawn, as it was mischievous and disturbing to our School interests.

At the request of Mr. MENZIES, the resolution moved by Mr. Toole was again read by the Chairman.

Mr. MENZIES said he could see nothing mischievous or disturbing in that resolution—in fact it was the only one of the resolutions that could be taken as free from reflection. It simply asked to refer the matters in question to a committee who could make their enquiries in private, and report to the Board any recommendations they had to make. He did not consider Mr. Shaw's motion as an amendment at all, as it introduced an entirely new matter, which had no bearing whatever on Mr. Toole's motion or the notice of motion given by Mr. Errett at a previous meeting of the Board. He asked the Chairman for his opinion whether he considered it as an amendment or not, and stated that he would be very happy to vote for Mr. Shaw's as a new motion if Mr. Toole's was allowed to pass.

The CHAIRMAN, after some hesitation, gave his opinion that it could be taken as an amendment.

Mr. SHAW's motion, being the amendment to the amendment, was put first, Mr. Toole claiming that it was not in order. The motion was lost, four members voting for it, and six against it.

Mr. TOOLE's motion was then put, the vote resulting in a tie, when the Chairman voted against it, defeating it.

The CHAIRMAN then submitted Mr. Rutherford's motion, which was carried on the following division:—

YEAS—Messrs. Rutherford, Toole, Wrighton, Denne, Burnham and Menzies.

NAYS—Messrs. Hughes, Dumble, McClelland and Shaw.

THE COUNTY GRANT.

Mr. DUMBLE called the attention of the Board to the grant made to the Institute by the County Council, and moved, seconded by Mr. SHAW,—That this Board gratefully acknowledges the act of the County Council in voting to this Board the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars towards the maintenance of the Collegiate Institute for 1880, and this Board, while acknowledging the grant, would intimate a wish that the united and harmonious efforts of the town and county, which have insured such a prosperous and successful High School, may be continuous until it is fully realized that the Peterborough Collegiate Institute is in the broadest sense a county as well as a town Institute for superior education, and that the Secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution with an intimation that the grant be accepted in the terms imposed.

TAKING THE CENSUS.

Moved by Mr. TOOLE, seconded by Mr. WRIGHTON,—That the Chairman of this Board be authorized to make arrangements with the town assessors for taking the census of the children within the town limts, according to the School Act.

SCHOOL REQUISITES.

Upon the representation of the Principal, the Property Committee were instructed to procure a number of desks for the school, to provide increased accomodation for pupils who had entered the school since the beginning of the year.

The INSPECTOR spoke of the advisability of procuring certain maps for the use of the junior pupils. The Secretary was instructed to order such as were needed from the Department.

The Board then adjourned.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

SETTLERS AND LUMBERMEN.

TORONTO, Jan. 30.—The second reading o the Free Grant Amendment Act, allowing the lumbermen a longer time to cut timber on settled land within their limits, caused much discussion. There was a division, which was carried by 41 to 24, many Ministeralists absenting themselves.

A DISCLAIMER.

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—Mr. Pardee denied a report in the Mail, and said that he had no interest, direct or indirect, in any timber limits.

OLD CANADA ACCOUNTS.

Mr. Pardee, in answer to Mr. Young, said the difficulties in the way of the settlement of the accounts of the old Province of Canada were with the Dominion and Quebec Governments, but they could not be avoided, and probably would be soon settled.

SCHOOLS AND MUNICIPALITIES.

Several bills proposing to amend the School or Municipal laws were discussed.

SUPPLY.

TORONTO, Feb. 3.—The House went into Committee of Supply and a number of articles were passed after some criticism, especially as to the campaign sheet issued from the Treasury.

LAKEFIELD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LAKEFIELD DAM.

Messrs. Poussette, Hull, Wigg, Urquhart and Graham, the Lakefield deputation, left here on Wednesday, the 4th instant, for Toronto, to wait upon the Hon. the Commissioner of Public Works, to urge the necessity of the Government taking control of the Lakefield dam in the public interest. Messrs. Urquhart and Graham go especially charged to look after the public interest in the navigation of the waters between Lakefield and Young's Point. They are in every way competent, and we have no doubt but that they will give a good account of themselves. The navigation of these waters is of paramount importance to the people in the north part of the County of Peterborough. The Government have in the past spent a large amount of money in building locks at Young's Point, and are spending more or less money every year in repairs and in improving the navigation above referred to. The public interest has always been prejudiced by the dam being controlled by private parties. The present is a very favourable opportunity for the Government to gain possession and control of this dam, and hence of the navigation of these waters. The Government will only be doing its duty by acceding to the appeal of the deputations sent by the public, and also by the County Council. We hope to be able to announce next week that success has crowned the efforts of the deputation, and that the navigation of the back lakes will no longer be effected injuriously at the whim of any person, but that it will in future be controlled by the Government for the public benefit.

THE OTTAWA AND PETERBOROUGH RAILWAY.

There seems to be but little excitement in Lakefield about this important railway scheme. Lakefield gave a majority against the by-law when it was passed before, but it is hoped that such will not be the case on the amending by-law. Lakefield is intensely interested in the Trent Valley Canal scheme, and the Town of Peterborough is just as intensely interested in the success of the Ottawa and Peterborough Railway. Lakefield requires the assistance of Peterborough to secure the canal via Lakefield, and Lakefield should assist Peterborough in obtaining this Railway. The two places can together, by throwing away mutual jealousies and concerted action, greatly assist each other in securing lasting material prosperity. The present is no time for envy and rivalry, but united action. If by means of these great schemes Peterborough becomes a city, then Lakefield will become a town. If the carriage of grain and goods between Montreal and Peterborough by this railway become less, then less also between Montreal and Lakefield. Lakefield's share of the amount of the bonus given by the County to this railway is so unimportant that the advantages to be gained by Lakefield, though not so great as Peterborough, are more than commensurate. We would suggest that a public meeting should be held in the Council Chamber, and that Mr. Dumble and others from Peterborough should be invited to discuss this important subject at as early a day as possible.

STILL DOING BUSINESS.

Mr. Chapin sold out his stock of furniture, &c., on Thursday, the 29th of January. Mr. Gilbert was the auctioneer, and the sale was satisfactory. Mr. Chapin has changed his mind with regard to leaving Lakefield, and does not now intend to give up business. Having retained the lease of the premises, he has begun to manufacture furniture, and in a few days he will be able to supply his patrons with goods of improved style and workmanship. We understand also that our village baker is not going to leave Lakefield, but that he will continue his business. Mr. Peterson gives satisfaction in his line, and his patrons will be pleased to learn that he is to remain. People are not now leaving Lakefield. Times are looking up, and the future business prospects of the village are brightening.

"JOLLY GOOD FELLOWS."

The Lakefield Grange had a sort of reunion, consisting of music, dancing, supper, &c., in the Grange Hall, Lakefield, on Friday evening last, in consequence of which a prayer meeting in the church near by was a failure.

SNOW.

The fall of snow on Tuesday last has made very good sleighing around Lakefield, and has given a very lively appearance to the principal streets of the village. People are taking advantage of it in earnest, drawing wood, logs, grain and other produce into the village.

RECOVERING.

Mr. George McIlmoyl, who has been ailing for some time, we are glad to be able to state, is fast recovering under the treatment of Dr. Bell, of Lakefield.

CHANGE OF HOTEL BUSINESS.

We understand that arrangements are now being made to change the proprietorship of the American Hotel in Lakefield, by which Mr. German will run the hotel at Burleigh Falls and Mr. Darcy the American Hotel in Lakefield.

POSTAL FACILITIES.

Our business men, and in fact the whole village, are rejoicing at the new postal arrangements, by which we get two mails a day, to the great convenience of all who receive letters.

The regular monthly meeting of the Municipal Council of the Village of Lakefield will be held in the Council Chamber next Monday evening at 7.30 sharp.

YOUNG'S POINT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

OUR ROADS TO BURLEIGH BRIDGE.—The Township Council when it meets next Monday should take into consideration the state of the roads from here to Burleigh Bridge, and be a little more liberal than they have been in former years, and grant a sufficient sum of money to put them in a proper state of repair; also supervise the work and see that every dollar is laid out to advantage.

FALSE REPORTS.—A great many falsehoods are getting circulated of late by some malicious persons, no doubt for the express purpose of trying to injure those in business here. The sooner this want of veracity is put a stop to, the better it will be for the welfare of the place.

SLEIGHING.—We have now got some of Vennor's snow to make things lively once more. The last few days hard frost was just the thing that was wanted for the swamps and lakes, so the lumbermen and others interested have much to be thankful for.

BURLEIGH ROAD.—Mr. George Chalmers' shanty on the Burleigh road is getting on splendidly. He has engaged more men to hurry up the winter's work. The stuff is all drawn to Eel's Creek, and the roads are excellent for drawing.

DEFEATED SCHOOL TRUSTEE.—The defeated school trustee informs your correspondent that I was in error in stating in my last report re the late election for trustee, that it was not on account of his not being elected that the split occurred among his co-religionists, but that it was owing to the re-engagement of Miss Shields as teacher, without the voice of the ratepayers (which is a disputed question on that point with a good many on the other side). But now when they have got a Separate School of their own, it is to be hoped they will all work harmoniously together and not be sorry for being in too big a hurry; the expense will be greater than when we were all united, as time will tell.

STIRRING TIMES.—There is a good deal of talk about putting up a steam grist and saw mill. An agent from Peterborough, having an eye to business has been here twice, having learned that a small section around here have got a grudge against Mr. Chalmers, and by way of retaliation are going to put up mills to run by steam. Those that are interesting themselves, unless they have no other use for their money, should look before they leap. It is one thing to erect the mills, the next grand thing is to secure the customers to make it pay. Mr. Chalmers grist and saw mill runs by water power, and is all that is needed to meet the requirements of the surrounding country for some time to come.

SAW MILL.—Mr. Chalmers having engaged a new sawyer for his mill, it has got quite an overhauling and is now turning out splendid work. This mill, along with the grist mill, is working early and late with custom work. Farmers are coming here with grists from two and three miles below Lakefield, and also from near Bridgenorth. They soon get to know where they get good flour, bran, &c.

BURLEIGH BRIDGE HOTEL.—There is some talk of the above hotel changing hands shortly and we hope it will be for the mutual advantage of the parties if the present talked of arrangements are carried out.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT.—The members of Ethan Grange gave their second annual concert in their Hall, on Thursday, Jan. 29. The hall was crowded to inconvenience, but the audience was well repaid by the performance. The Mitchell Brothers sang several duets in their usual good style and were loudly applauded. Miss Ada Huston and Harry Huston obtained encores for their well-rendered character songs. Miss Nettie Martin, upon appearing on the stage, was greeted with rounds of applause, and the reception was decidedly well-deserved, her songs being more than once encored. Miss Galletly sang the songs allotted to her in the programme in a manner that was well appreciated, and as it was nearly her first appearance before a public audience, her success is the more worthy of commendation. A humorous reading by Mr. Payne was well received. Mr. Fowler sang several comic songs, so as to provoke calls for a repetition. Mr. W. Gilbert gave a negro sermon with a comic force, which took the Grangers by storm. Being loudly called upon, he responded by giving a Yankee sketch which fairly convulsed his audience with laughter. Mr. Sydney Henthorn, as a Dutchman and a "swell," sang in a manner to bring down the house, and was repeatedly recalled. Mr. J. Haggart's reading of Father Prout's sermon excited laughter from the beginning to the end. In compliance with a recall he gave another Irish sketch with equal success. Mr. Galletly's singing need not be particularized, his ability as a vocalist being so well known. Miss Pafford presided at the organ, with her usual taste and skill, contributing greatly to the success of the concert and the enjoyment of the evening. At the conclusion of the performance the company were very kindly entertained at Mr. Braley's residence.

Irish Relief Fund.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 3.—Active canvassing for Irish relief is proceeding. Some contributors object to having the funds diverted to the purposes of political agitation. John Dillon, on behalf of Parnell, wrote from Rochester, asking that the Baltimore funds be forwarded to Drexel, Morgan & Co., and denouncing the Mansion House Relief Committee. The Baltimore Committee replied that it had already arranged for the proper distribution of the Baltimore contributions.

THE Toronto Bridge Company has contracted during the last year for 1,800 lineal feet of iron bridges. The principal one being the C. V. R. bridge at Galt, over the Grand River, which, as we have already noted, is composed of five deck spans of 150 feet each and is the largest iron bridge ever built in Canada. Some of these contracts were for carriage and waggon travel.

What is Catarrh?

There is perhaps no complaint so common as Catarrh or cold in the head. It occurs in both winter and summer. Symptoms—pain in the limbs and back lassitude, and a sense of tightness across the forehead, repeated snuffing, watery and inflamed eyes, increased discharge from the nose; in fact the whole mucous surface appears to be affected and coated with phlegm. In the first stages use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which will remove the phlegm and allay the irritation. Also use Hagyard's Pills or some other mild purgative to remove the tightness across the forehead, etc. Full directions accompany each bottle, price 25 cents. w5d22-2w

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. Price 25 cents. w6d30

Our food furnishes material for the growth and nourishment of the body by absorption and assimilation. In like manner Victoria Hypophosphites acts in the cure of disease. When swallowed, it is absorbed, taken up by the veins, and circulated through the system, with the blood, reaching the most hidden and remote parts. It is evident, therefore, that the whole system must feel the effects of the remedy. For sale by all dealers. w5d22-2w

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Irish Relief Fund.

The Central Committee of the Irish Relief Fund will meet this evening at half past seven o'clock in the Council Chamber.

Proposed Summer Resort.

We have heard a rumour that there is some probability that a summer hotel will be built at the locks at Young's Point early in the spring. It is intended to make it a first-class place for a summer resort, a thing that is much wanted in this district, and it should be a successful enterprise.

Sleighing Again.

Runners took the place of wheels yesterday on a fair sleighing track. The snow has been very much drifted, and much sand has been mixed with it, making the sleighing heavy. Good use of what we have is being made by the teamsters having logs, wood, lumber and other heavy hauling to do.

St. John's Church Bazaar.

As the curlers and those interested in the bonspiel had not an opportunity of attending the St. John's Church Bazaar, it was resolved to keep it open to-day for their especial benefit; others, however, will not be refused admission. There will be an excellent dinner or tea at six o'clock, and lighter refreshments all the evening.

The Late Fire.

We have received a letter as to the action of the Fire Brigade on Wednesday morning, but as no name was sent with it, in accordance with our rule, we are unable to publish it. Those who wish to criticize, if they do not not care to give their names to the public, should at least send them to the editor, as some guarantee of fair dealing.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh to brisk south-westerly to north-westerly winds: partly cloudy to cloudy weather, with light local fall of snow; stationary or slightly lower temperature. Peterborough—north-westerly to south-westerly winds; clear to cloudy weather, the thermometer indicating at 8 o'clock this morning 12°, and at noon 28° in the shade and 34° in the sun.

The Coming Carnival.

On Friday, the 6th, the grand Skating Carnival of the season comes off at the rink, and bids fair to surpass all others that have preceded it. In the afternoon Prof. Williams, of New York, will give an exhibition of his skill in the use of skates. In the evening the masquerade and fancy dress carnival will be enlivened by the exhibition of Prof. Williams and others. The skating contest will be one of the principal features of the evening. Mr. G. Geddes, of Molson's Bank, Millbrook, Mr. J. A. Barron, of Lindsay, a gentleman from Barrie, Mr. E. Hartley, and others will compete for the prizes, of which there are three offered. There will be three prizes for ladies' costume and two for gentlemen's.

POLICE COURT.

BLASPHEMOUS AND PROFANE LANGUAGE.

THURSDAY, Feb. 5.—David Montgomery was brought before the Magistrate, charged with using blasphemous and profane language on the 30th of January, on the complaint of William Bell. The complainant being examined by the Magistrate, gave evidence showing that the defendant, while in his house on the day mentioned, pulled off his coat and wished to make a fight with another man who was in the bar-room, using abusive, profane, and blasphemous language. The Magistrate fined the defendant $2.00, with 70 cents costs, to be paid forthwith or to go to jail.

THE CURLING BONSPIEL.

TERMINATION OF THE GREAT CURLING MATCH—TORONTO VICTORIOUS.

A Tie for the Deciding Game—The Lindsay Club Nearly Winners—General Satisfaction at the Arrangements.

When the idea of a grand bonspiel in Peterborough was mooted, it was thought to be a rather presumptious attempt even by some of our most enthusiastic curlers. Thanks, however, to the exertions of Mr. McNeil, the Secretary, Mr. A. Hall, the President, and other officers of the Curling Club, and to the readiness with which other clubs welcomed the invitation, the affair has proved a complete success.

If neither our home club nor those of our neighboring towns have carried off the palm, and Toronto has again asserted its claim to supremacy, our curlers and their guests have had the pleasure of a keen but friendly contest, and the benefit of seeing what others could do.

Though the weather interfered with the original intention of playing on the Little Lake, there was the compensating advantage of displaying the capabilities of our rink. There are few towns which could provide accommodation under cover for a match on such a scale.

On Wednesday afternoon the great bonspiel having narrowed down to a contest between the Toronto and Lindsay Clubs, the interest in the playing of the contestants increased, and the excitement ran high. There was some exceedingly fine play, and the game extended far beyond the time set down for it. The game was hotly contested throughout. The Lindsay rinks kept ahead of Toronto, with an occasional tie; but towards the end of the game the excitement became so great that it was impossible to say which club was ahead until the conclusion, when the scorers footed up the lists and discovered that there was a tie. After some considerable discussion, during which it was suggested to leave the settlement of the contest until the next bonspiel, it was determined to conclude the contest by the two clubs playing an end. The managers then cleared the rinks and platform of all but the players and the representatives of the press, the spectators taking to the promenade balcony, when the playing was renewed amid great excitement among the onlookers. The respective rinks played with great caution, and some very fine shots were made, Lindsay keeping well ahead until the skips took their position, when by an admirably calculated shot Captain Perry displaced Mr. Flavelle's stone, leaving four points to score for Toronto. Mr. Riddell having beaten Mr. McMurtry by one point, giving the Toronto Club the game by five points, amid loud and prolonged cheering. The following is the score:—

TORONTO VS. LINDSAY.

Toronto	Lindsay
No. 1.
David Walker,	Wm. Milne,
Rev. Dr. Barclay,	D. C. Trew,
Wm. Bayly,	G. H. Bertram,
J. Riddell, Skip—20	S. A. McMurtry, Skip—10.
No. 2.
T. McGaw,	Jos. Cameron,
Walter Gillespie,	Wm. Needler,
J. S. Russell,	Wm. McBurney,
Capt. Perry, Skip—10.	J. D. Flavelle, Skip—20

Resulting in a tie. The contest was, after consultation, concluded by playing a single end, which resulted in giving J. Riddell's rink one point and Capt. Perry's rink four points, thus ending the contest in favor of the Toronto Club by five points.

The contest has thus ended in a victory for our provincial metropolis, but every member of the losing rinks expressed complete satisfaction with the arrangements, and with their reception by their Peterborough brethren.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

The Annual Meeting at Millbrook—The President's Address—Election of Officers.

The sixth annual meeting of the Central Exhibition Association for this district was held at Millbrook on Wednesday, the 4th day of February, in accordance with the constitution, the following delegates from the societies named being present, viz:—

Peterborough West, John Carnegie; Peterborough East, W. E. Roxburgh; Victoria South, Col. Deacon, Thos. Smithson; Northumberland, H. Lapp, John Isaacs; Durham West, S. Wilmott, M. Porter; Durham East, Col. Williams, M.P., E. A. Powers, Robt. Vance, J. S. Ceasar, Rich. Howden, Michael Sisson, Isaac Preston, Jas. Caldwell, P. R. Randall, Jas. Kerr, John Foott, Morris Fanning, Asa Choate, Johnston Beatty, Rea Dickson; delegate from Hope Agricultural Society, Jas. Curtis.

The retiring President, James Campbell, Esq., having taken the chair, the minutes of the last annual meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. CAMPBELL then read the following:

GENTLEMEN,—Since this Association was first organized, five years have passed away, five annual exhibitions have been held under its auspices, and the second round of our annual gatherings has been successfully entered upon. As was to be expected, experience soon made it apparent that the financial basis upon which the association was first organized would have to undergo considerable change so soon as the first circle of exhibitions had been completed, in order to retain that public sympathy and support by which alone the association can continue to exist, and to this end at our last annual meeting a new basis was adopted which, although somewhat imperfectly framed, has, I am glad to say, worked satisfactorily during the past year, and gives promise of fairly meeting the circumstances under which our association exists.

The system then adopted of making each year, of exhibition, stand upon a financial basis of its own, and also throws the chief financial responsibility, as well as management, upon the members of the executive residing in the locality of the exhibition for the year, has proved highly satisfactory in Peterborough, and I have not the slightest doubt but that it will prove equally satisfactory elsewhere, and be productive of that economy of management by which, as an association, we can alone hope to retain the support and sympathy of the public. Believing that experience is our best teacher in the management of such exhibitions, as it is indeed in most things, permit me to direct your attention to a few facts and figures in connection with our operations during the past five years. Necessity compelled a considerable reduction in the amount of prizes offered last year as compared with the amount offered in the three preceding years, and the result, I venture to think, goes to prove that the amount and value of the individual prizes offered does not affect the revenue to the extent that might be supposed. By reference to the auditors' report for the several years I find that the prizes

Paid in 1875 were	$1,785 25
And gate receipts	2,186 82
Showing a surplus of	$400 57
Prizes paid in 1876	$2,626 75
Gate receipts	2,287 69
Showing a deficiency of	$339 06
Prizes paid in 1877	$2,543 25
Gate receipts	2,964 39
Showing a surplus of	$421 14
Prizes paid in 1878	$2,628 75
Gate receipts	2,362 80
Showing a deficiency of	$265 95
Prizes paid in 1879 (including services of Band)	$1,773 25
Gate receipts	2,237 92
Showing a surplus of	$464 67

Now, with the exception of the exhibition held at Lindsay in 1877, it will be noticed that the money taken at the gates has not varied $100, while the amount of prizes actually paid has varied over $800. Of course, the variations which have taken place in the amount paid for prizes is partly attributable to the fact that at both Port Hope and Cobourg those offered for live stock were much more largely taken up there than at either Lindsay or Peterborough, and I cannot help suggesting that the propriety of doing away with the third prizes for all live stock except horses, is worthy of the serious consideration of the incoming Executive. The more particularly as the animals receiving the third prize are generally of an inferior quality. But after making due allowance in this respect for the larger amount paid one place than another, I incline to the opinion that the prize lists issued at both the first and last exhibitions at Peterborough were more in accordance with the means and requirements of the Association than the more liberal scale adopted at the other exhibitions, and the point to which I deem it my duty to direct attention is the cost of management. Owing to the manner in which the accounts were kept for the exhibition of 1875, it would be somewhat difficult to draw what might be considered a just comparison between the expenditure on that occasion and that of succeeding years. I therefore omit it and take that of the last four years, including therein everything except the expenditure for prizes, and the special expenditure of $190 for turn-styles in 1876, and the payment for the band last year, which I have already added to the prize account for 1879, because in previous years music had been obtained by means of a band competition, and the following is the result:—

In 1876 this expenditure was			$1,168 90
" 1877	do	do	1,123 63
" 1878	do	do	1,114 61
" 1879	do	do	851 15

These figures prove that contrary to the usual course of such expenditures, ours during the first three years named showed a steady if not great decrease, and that last year our working expenses decreased nearly twenty-five per cent. on that of the preceding year, a result which I believe is largely attributable to the basis adopted last year.

In bidding you farewell, I desire to express the hope that this Association has many years of usefulness and prosperity before it. During its brief career of five years it has, without any direct Government assistance, distributed no less than $11,268 in the way of prize money; it has been the means of bringing the prominent workers in our Agricultural Societies in seven out of eight electoral ridings, of which this district is composed together in the great work of promoting our agricultural and manufacturing prosperity, and although the time at these hurried meetings is far too short to afford an opportunity for that discussion and rubbing of ideas together which is always so beneficial, I believe that so long as this association exists, it will continue to exercise a beneficial effect upon the many interests common to the old Newcastle district; and that none of those who took part in the inauguration will soon have occasion to be ashamed of their child.

Certainly not so long as the same disinterested management guides its course in the future as has in the past.

JAS. CAMPBELL,
President.

On motion of Mr. FOOTT, seconded by Mr. POWERS, a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Campbell for his address, and he was requested to allow it to be published.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. FOOTT moved, seconded by Mr. POWERS,—That the following gentlemen be a committee to select the officers and members of the Executive Committee for the current year, viz:—Messrs. Carnegie, Deacon, Beatty, Choate, Foott, Lapp, Wilmott, Col. Williams and J. S. Ceasar.—Carried.

The committee then retired and subsequently brought in a report recommending the following appointments:—

PRESIDENT.—Col. A. T. H. Williams, M. P.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—M. Porter.
SECRETARY.—R. Dickson.
TREASURER.—John Foott.
COMMITTEE.—W. E. Roxburgh, John Carnegie, Thos. Smithson, Col. Deacon, H. Lapp, John Isaacs, M. Fanning, Asa Choate, Richard Howden, E. A. Powers, Isaac Preston, J. S. Ceasar and Johnston Beatty.
AUDITORS.—J. H. Knight and H. Wade.

The report was adopted.

Moved by COL. DEACON, seconded by Mr. PORTER,—That the remuneration of the Secretary and Treasurer be the same as last year, and bonds of security to the same amount be filed with the President by the Treasurer.—Carried.

Mr. WILMOTT addressed those present with reference to the position of the Agricultural Association, and deprecated the attempts now being made to do away with it altogether, and divide the grant now given to it among the Central Exhibitions. He hoped they would pass a resolution calling upon the Government to maintain the Provincial Board in its present state. He said great complaints had been made against the expenses of the Board, but even this year the number of members had been increased, and thereby the expenses would be proportionately increased in spite of the Board.

Mr. LAPP and Dr. CEASAR supported the views of Mr. Wilmott.

Mr. FOOTT said from the position occupied by him as a candidate for the Board, he might say that he had a warm side to the old institution. He did not advocate the division of the annual grant among the central exhibitions of the country. He thought much more good would be obtained by keeping the grant together, and as to the losses sustained this year, it had always lost money when it holds its exhibitions in the East. He thought the farmers should be jealous of giving their honours to others than themselves. They were allowing themselves to be crowded out.

Mr. LAPP said they had nobody but themselves to blame because they had the matter in their own hands.

Moved by Mr. CARNEGIE, seconded by Mr. PORTER,—That the thanks of this Association be given to Mr. Wilmott for the manner in which he has discharged the duties of representative of this Division on the Board of Agriculture, and that they endorse the action of the Board in presenting him with a gold medal on the occasion of his retirement.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. WILMOTT returned thanks.

Moved by Mr. FOOTT, seconded by COL. DEACON,—That in the opinion of this meeting the Board of Agriculture should be maintained as a representative body of the Agricultural interests of this Province, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Minister of Agriculture.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE.

Immediately after the above meeting the delegates appointed to elect a member to represent this division on the Provincial Board of Agriculture met, there being present James Campbell, West Peterborough; Col. Deacon, South Victoria; Mr. Porter, West Durham; John Foott, East Durham; and H. Lapp, West Northumberland; F. Birdsal, East Peterborough. Absent, the representatives of East Northumberland and North Victoria. Mr. Birdsall having been appointed chairman, Messrs. Foott, Deacon and Carnegie were proposed but none of them receiving a majority, on the first vote new nominations were taken, when Col. Deacon proposed Mr. Carnegie, and Messrs. Deacon, Birdsale, Campbell and Porter voting for him, he was accordingly declared elected.

COL. DEACON said while he was glad Mr. Carnegie had been elected by a majority of the votes present, he might inform them that as the representative of the society which had the largest number of members, he would in case of a tie have had the casting vote—a vote which he would have much pleasure in giving Mr. Carnegie had it been necessary.

Mr. CARNEGIE being present, returned thanks for the honor conferred upon him, and said he would endeavor to discharge the duties devolving upon him as their representative to the best of his ability.

No hostile demonstrations are apprehended during the winter, but no doubt is entertained that the war will be renewed as soon as spring opens and military operations become practicable. And whereas, Municipal aid to a very large amount has already been voted to aid in the construction of the said railway, but not quite one million of dollars, and it is expedient and desirable to facilitate the said Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company in their efforts to secure the speedy construction of said railway, notwithstanding that the said Company has not, and shall not have received aid by way of Municipal bonuses, to the extent of one million of dollars, as in the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth clauses of the said by-law No. 439 mentioned and provided for.

The said Company shall erect at the Town of Peterborough workshops of a capacity for, and shall thereat employ constantly not less than one-half of the mechanics and hands employed in the shops of said railway in the Town of Peterborough and the City of Ottawa and between these points, before they shall be entitled to payment of the debentures or monies last payable under the by-law aforesaid.

And it is declared and enacted that the said by-law number 439, as hereby varied and amended, shall be and is in full force and effect, notwithstanding the other municipalities therein mentioned may not vote or may not have voted aid to the said Company to the amount of one million of dollars, and notwithstanding any other municipality or municipalities may not have passed by-laws giving aid to said Company, as in said by-law No. 439 provided.

LACHINE.

CANDIDATES FOR THE COMMONS.—Hon. J. J. C. Abbott and Dr. Christie were nominated here on Thursday for Argenteuil. There was a large turn out of electors, the majority appearing decidedly in favour of Mr. Abbott's candidature. The National Policy is made the issue upon which the election contest is to be fought, and there is little doubt but Mr. Abbott will gain the day. The meeting was addressed by both candidates, Sir Chas. Tupper, and several other gentlemen. Polling takes place on the 12th and 19th.

MONTREAL.

THE FEELING AGAINST PARNELL.—The feeling in this city among the Protestants—particularly after what Parnell and Dillon have said and done to insult the Countess of Marlborough and discredit her fund—is that to this distributing point the contributions of all loyal Canadians should be sent in order that the money may not be diverted and prostituted to the political purposes of a small band of "fossils," self-styled patriots. Several prominent members of the Council—French as well as English-speaking—are of this opinion. Some blatant Irish agitators loudly call that now is the time for Ireland to strike for liberty while Parnell is agitating on this side of the Atlantic, his propaganda they claim being infinitely more to the purpose than all the collections and outbreaks that have heretofore taken place. Others are disgusted with him, and declare that if he comes there cannot be but trouble, it only requiring a little to rouse all the bad passions that have raged at particular times during several years. Parnell's announcement, on his arrival, that his chief purpose on this continent was political, not charitable, is stored up in many hearts. Not a few prominent men express regret that it had not previously been announced that the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society intended to take up subscriptions.

IRISH RELIEF.—The Bank of Montreal is remitting the subscription for the Irish relief fund to Dublin free of expense, and the Montreal Telegraph Company is sending cable messages in connection with the same fund gratis. It is understood that if Mr. Parnell comes to this city, the address of welcome will be presented by the President of the St. Patrick's Society, Mr. F. B. McNamee, and not by the Mayor. The Duchess of Marlborough having made an appeal to Montreal, in common with other cities in aid of the Irish sufferers, Mayor Rivard has caused a subscription list to be placed in the City Treasurer's office of the corporation, where contributions can be deposited.

OTTAWA.

COTEAU BRIDGE.—Col. Gzowski's report on the Coteau bridge is published in full. The report is against a drawbridge, and states that no other than a high-level bridge should be permitted. His objections to a drawbridge are several, but the principal one is that it will be a great source of danger to vessels, and, in consequence, will be a serious impediment to the navigation not only of to-day but of the future. The report concludes by the statement that "after having given all these subjects separately and collectively my best consideration, I fail to discover any engineering difficulty that exists to prevent a high-level bridge being built across the steamboat channel of a height to equal that of the Victoria bridge above the ordinary summer level of the water, and crossing the Beauharnois canal with a draw in a locality not far distant from the one selected, and answering all the requirements, for about the same cost as the proposed low-level bridge, taking into account the additional cost of the two draws over the cost of fixed spans in their stead, and the cost of working and maintenance of the two draws.

FRIGHTENED TO DEATH.—A shocking story has reached the city of a boy near Smith's Falls being frightened to death. He was engaged as a cook for a number of men. One evening he went to a neighbour's, and on returning found the shanty dark. He struck a match, but it was blown out. He did this two or three times, and finally looked behind him as he struck the match. He caught a glimpse of several dark objects, which were the men blackened and dressed to suit. His heart, as the doctor afterwards said, leaped from its stronghold, and fell into an unnatural position, and he ran to a neighbour's and died in a few hours.

PORT HOPE.

A MAN OF NERVE.—The Times says that while in New York Mr. Gilchrist, fishery inspector, had an experience which stamps him as a man of readiness and nerve. A common footpad trick in New York is to step up to a gentleman and ask him the time of day. Unsuspectingly, Mr. Gilchrist, on being so accosted, pulled out his valuable gold watch, when the fellow made a grab for it. The watch struck one and the footpad lay sprawling in the street, a consummation reached through prompt application of a heavy stick which Mr. Gilchrist carries.

MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.—The afternoon session of the Newcastle and Trent Medical Association, on Wednesday, was employed in receiving the report of the tariff committee, and the reading of papers on Gunshot Wounds by Dr. McDonald, Brighton; Medical Jurisprudence case by Dr. Herriman; and one on Jaundice by Dr. Hamilton, of Port Hope. The subject of Phthisis was generally debated, and the session was one peculiarly interesting and valuable to professional men. The next meeting will be held at Brighton on the first Wednesday in May.

IRISH RELIEF FUND.

Satisfactory Progress of the Collection—The Destination of the Subscriptions.

An adjourned meeting of the Central Committee was held in the Town Council Chamber on Thursday evening, Mayor Landy in the chair.

Several of the collectors brought in their reports from their respective wards, the total amount paid to the treasurer realizing the sum of [illegible]. This sum, with the grant voted by the County Council, makes a total, up to the present time, of $843.

When the canvass is completed and the money paid in, it is intended to publish a list of all the subscribers.

The Committee will meet again in the Council Chamber on Thursday next, the 12th inst., at 7.30 p.m., when it is earnestly hoped that those collectors who have not yet reported will bring in their books. All the collecting books, when completed, should be handed to the secretary, Mr. Garvey, for the purpose of having the entire list prepared.

The money will be forwarded to the Duchess of Marlborough, so that the subscribers may feel perfectly sure that it will reach its intended destination, namely, those who are suffering from the want of food and fuel.

PROPOSED SUMMER RESORT.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—A notice in your last impression conveys an intimation that it is proposed to build a summer hotel at Young's Point. In my opinion such an enterprise would be a great mistake, and would result in much disappointment, if not in considerable pecuniary loss to the promoters of it.

Clear Lake, the nearest lake to the locks, is, as most of your readers probably know, a large sheet of water, unbroken by a single island, and is constantly swept over by gales of wind, so strong as to render camping anything but agreeable or even safe. It is, moreover, a by no means favorable lake for sport, either with hound or gun or rod, and the scenery is very inferior to that of the upper lakes.

The very best spot for a summer hotel is Burleigh, a spot affording easy access to Stony Lake below and to Lovesick Lake above, in both of which lakes, as well as in Buckhorn Lake, is good hunting, shooting and fishing, accompanied by the very desirable additional charm of beautiful scenery.

While advocating Burleigh as the best possible site for a summer hotel, I do not pretend to say that the accommodation hitherto afforded on that island is at all equal to the requirements of the travelling public. What is wanted is a really respectable family hotel—above all without a barroom—an hotel, in short, kept very much as the Mount Julien Hotel was latterly kept when under the superintendence of Miss Montserrat.

I hope this letter will elicit an expression of opinion from other tourists, and that it will not escape the attention of those who purpose embarking in the business.

VACANCY IN THE SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Review:

SIR,—Having noticed a report of the proceedings of the School Board at its last meeting, I was induced to look up the question as to whether or not Mr. Cox is still a member of the Board, and I find by section 38 of the Public School Act it is provided, among other things, that if a Trustee absents himself from the meetings of the Board for three consecutive months without being authorized by resolution entered upon its minutes, &c., such Trustee shall ipso facto vacate his seat, and the remaining Trustees shall declare his seat vacant, &c.

It would appear from this that it is very questionable whether Mr. Cox can legally continue to act as Trustee, and for fear that some difficulty might hereafter arise by his so doing, I would suggest that the Council be requested to reappoint him. This would remove the objection which now appears to exist.

Yours, &c.,
AN EX-TRUSTEE.

COBOURG.

ACCIDENT ON RICE LAKE.—On Monday, while Messrs. Geo. Whittaker and E. Jackson were coming from Roseneath to Keene, in a buggy on the ice, they broke through. The horse was drowned, and Mr. Whittaker had a narrow escape.

FIRE, AND SAD EFFECTS.—The Sentinel-Star says:—On Tuesday morning last a fire occurred in the house of M. Atchison, on the outskirts of the town, through a defective chimney. Mrs. Atchison was so frightened that when she went into the house again, she fell to floor, and remained insensible until yesterday morning, when she died.

KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW HAND AT THE OLD STAND.—Mr. Davis Glover has rented his mills, known as the Allandale Mills, to Mr. Osborne, late of Colborne. He comes well recommended as a practical miller and an obliging man of business.

THE BURNHAM MILLS.—Mr. James Dixon, of Keene, has leased the Burnham Mills for another period of five years. Mr. Dixon, since coming here has made many warm friends, both in the village and country, by his very obliging conduct.

MATHERS' SALE.—Notwithstanding the inclement day the sale was good, as Mathers' name in connection with buggies, sleighs, &c., is a guarantee of a good article for the money.

THE SAW MILLS.—Want of snow has put a damper upon business, especially in the saw mills, for as yet very few logs have been brought in. Mr. Bennett, of Birdsall's mill, has received logs for a few days' sawing; also a quantity of railway ties. Hope's saw mill, above Allandale, has very few logs in, and the Keene saw mill is in much the same way.

THE ROADS.—On the 3rd inst. we had a rough day and some snow which, with a little more, would make sleighing sufficient to refresh mill business, and to allow the grain now in the barns to be moved to market. Business this month has generally been dull owing to the want of snow.

A MOVE IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.—Robert English, at the beginning of the year, commenced a strictly cash business, doing away with the time-honored custom of a year's credit, which was often extended to two or more years. The venture promises to do well; it is a pity that all the merchants do not do the same. It would be much better for all.

A SPECIAL CLASS.—Mr. Moffat, principal of Keene School, has a class of pupils in private training for the next examination for third class certificates. For the size of the place the class is well attended.

TOO COLD.—The quarterly services in connection with the Methodist Church were thinly attended on Sunday last, owing to the extreme cold.

OPENINGS.—There is a good opening in Keene for an obliging shoemaker, and one who understands his trade; also for a baker who would combine a butcher's stall with that business. There is a good cooper's shop empty.

MUNICIPAL.—At the last Council meeting Mr. David Nelson was re-appointed assessor, Geo. Reid clerk and treasurer, and William Gallon collector.

FINE LEATHER.—Mr. Nelson has last week been shipping some very fine leather from the tannery here.

NORWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

VILLAGE FATHERS IN SESSION.—A regular meeting of the Village Council took place in the Town Hall on Monday evening last. The Reeve and all the members were present. The appointment of the officials and their salaries were debated upon. W. H. Mullins, the Clerk, has been retained for another year with an increase of $20 in his salary. Wesley Defoe was appointed assessor at a salary of $20, and James Calder, collector, at a salary of $25. The caretaker was hauled over the coals; it appears he had not attended to his duties properly, and tenders will be received up to the next meeting for the office of caretaker. Walter Emery's tender for wood for the Town Hall was accepted; 8 cords at seventy-five cents per cord being the quantity wanted. The Council adjourned till the call of the Clerk.

THE PULPIT.—The pulpit of the Methodist Church was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Thom at both the morning and evening services. In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Fotheringham, the pulpit of the Presbyterian Church was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Bennett, of Peterborough.

LAMENTED DEATH.—The many friends of the Rev. T. F. Fotheringham will hear with regret that his father expired in Toronto on Saturday last. He had been ill for some time and his son was called to Toronto about two weeks ago. There seemed to be an improvement in his condition and the Rev. Mr. Fotheringham returned home, but he received a telegram on Friday that his father was worse. Hastening to him he found him very low, and he continued to sink rapidly, expiring on Saturday evening. The funeral took place in Toronto on Tuesday and was very largely attended.

BRINGING THE GAME HOME IN HIS HAND.—Our local sportsman, who owns the spotted dog, and a friend went out on a little hunting expedition one day last week, and on returning home our mutual friend either maliciously or carelessly blew some of his fingers off. The sportsman took him to the M. D. L. and had the fingers fixed up.

SERIOUS LOSS.—Mr. George Lipsett, living near the village, lost a very valuable mare last week. It appears that he keeps a team of pretty fast horses, and drove them to Peterborough last week. Coming home it is supposed he gave them an extra spurt, and the mare when nearly home gave out. He got her home, but she gave up the ghost when about half an hour in the stable.

SKATING CARNIVAL.—The carnival takes place in the rink on Friday evening next. It promises to be the event of the season. The object is a good one, the proceeds being for the benefit of the Band, which has made good progress of late, and would be a credit to places of larger pretensions. By all means see the carnival on Friday night, the prizes are worth competing for.

A MEAN ACTION.—One of our leading citizens applied to the manager of the skating rink for a free pass for his children to attend the rink. The request not being granted, the gentleman has done his utmost to prevent people from patronizing that place of amusement. His efforts have been of no avail, as the rink has been well attended, and the prospects are that the carnival will be a perfect success.

ANOTHER LOSS.—Mr. Briste Moffat, proprietor of the Norwood livery stables, lost one of his horses last week. He has been very unfortunate of late, having lost four horses in two years.

NEARLY A CONFLAGRATION.—As Mr. P. Reynolds was about to retire from his place of business on Monday night last, one of the lamps, hanging in a bracket in the middle of the shop, suddenly exploded. The coal oil ran out on the floor and caught fire. Things looked serious for a while, but the application of a few pails of water and a blanket smothered the fire. There was no harm done of any extent except badly frightening the proprietor, who recommended that a few pails of water should always be in readiness in such cases.

BREVITIES.—The new Councillors looked brave on Monday night....The machinery for a saw mill at Round Lake passed through here on Tuesday....Mrs. Douty left for Toronto to see her grand-children last Tuesday.... Mr. George Ostrom was in the village this week; he took some good orders and went his way rejoicing. George always puts up at the Norwood House, where they use him well....A butcher's shop is badly needed here ....The flower of the village will leave us soon ....The Presbyterians are preparing for their coming anniversary....Mr. Fred. Brennan is now school instructor at Round Lake; they have made a good choice....The prayer meetings are still continued in the Methodist Church....The health of the village is good.

WEATHER.—The weather of the past week has been clear and cold. On Tuesday a heavy snow storm set in, but it is drifting to-day, the prospects are that we will have sleighing right away. The roads are so rough that there has been very little traffic. Grain has a downward tendency: the country is full of oats, and the farmers are holding them for a rise, the price now is 25c.

LAKEFIELD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

U. C. BIBLE SOCIETY MEETING.

On Thursday evening in last week the annual meeting of the Lakefield Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the P. C. A. Hall at 8 o'clock. After the reading of the scriptures and prayer offered up by the Rev. Mr Clark, one of the Vice-Presidents, the officers for the present year were elected, and the reports of the Treasurer and Secretary were read by those officers and approved. Mr. Garbutt, the President, then called upon the Rev. Mr. Washington, who stated that as he had a severe cold, and as the time was getting late, he begged to decline detaining the meeting from hearing the address of the agent of the society. The Rev. Dr. O'Meara, the agent, was then introduced to the meeting. The learned doctor gave an interesting, instructive, and eloquent address, which lasted upwards of an hour. The collection was next taken up. The Rev. Mr. Guard was then invited to speak, but declined doing so owing to the lateness of the hour. The Rev. Mr. Washington offered up a concluding prayer, and the assembly was dismissed. There was an excellent attendance, and the singing was ably led (without instrument) by our esteemed friend, Mr. Graham. Inasmuch as complaint was made as regards the lateness of the hour at which the meeting was held, it would seem desirable that in future the committee meeting should be held on some other evening than that of the public meeting, and that the meeting itself should be commenced strictly to the time named in the bills calling it.

MILLBROOK.

MR. JAMES BREAKEY, a highly respected citizen of this place, dropped dead while in Guy's jewellery store at 5 o'clock this p.m. He has been Master of the L.O.L. No. 79, of this place for some years. It is supposed heart disease caused his death.

NORWOOD.

COUNTY ORANGE LODGE.—At the annual meeting of East Peterborough County Orange Lodge, held at Norwood on the 3rd inst., the following brethren were elected officers for the current year:—

W. W. Armstrong	County Master.
M. McFarlane	Dep. " "
Rev. W. M. Pattyson	Chap.
Geo. Kirk	Sec'y.
Chas. Stephenson	Treas.
H. Moore	D. of C.

The county procession will be held on the 12th July, 1880, in the village of Norwood, when it is expected there will be a large number of lodges present.

THE TAY BRIDGE ACCIDENT.

THE DIVERS AT WORK—MORE BODIES FOUND.

The excitement produced by the melancholy accident at the Tay Bridge has in a measure subsided. Day after day the diving operations have been carried on, and a vigorous search kept up along the river, and in the neighbourhood of the bridge, for the recovery of the bodies. A few additions have been made to the list already published. On Saturday the 10th inst. two bodies were recovered, on Sunday one more, and in all up to Thursday the 15th the total number was 29.

At the request of the Court of Inquiry, Capt. Robertson, the Harbour Master, with Fox, the diver, went out to the Bridge on Monday for the special purpose of examining the condition of the ends of the girders at the fifth broken pier from the south side. Fox made several descents to the bottom of the river, but reported that there was such a terrible amount of debris at the spot that he could ascertain nothing as to the state of the connection of the girders. The tide was very suitable for the operations, as the girders from the first broken pier to the fifth appeared above the surface of the water. In the neighbourhood of the third pier the girders were seen to be broken in seven places, all within 100 yards; and about fifty feet south from the fifth pier—where the engine is lying—the girders is broken right across. Harley and Simpson, two noted divers, have also made several descents. The former states that he again entered the first-class carriage which was much in the same state as when first discovered. It consists of three compartments, and every part of it, Harley says, he thoroughly examined, but found no bodies in it. The third-class carriage adjoining, he says, appears to have been telescoped into the first by falling with the girders, and that carriage he also examined, but without discovering any bodies. Below the first-class carriage there is a large hole, which has evidently been made by the shifting nature of the sand, or by the tide. This spot he made a strenuous effort to explore, but owing to the strong current he was unable to accomplish his object. He then passed round to the south of the fourth broken pier in order to make an examination on the west side of the bridge. In the course of his way Harley states that a little to the westward of the fourth pier he discovered the remains of a third-class carriage, but no bodies were seen. He had only been a short time at the west side when the tide began to flow, and he was obliged to desist from making examination. If his statements about the discovery of a third-class carriage on the west side of the bridge be correct, this will explain the futility of the previous searches on the east side for the latter and missing portion of the train, which consisted of a third-class carriage, a second-class carriage and a van.

Arrangements have been made for raising the girders. The work has been placed in the hands of Mr. Waddell, Edinburgh, whose experience as a railway contractor will no doubt be of great value in directing the operations.

It is understood that the North British Railway Company intend to apply to Parliament for permission to rebuild the bridge. The people of Dundee are generally anxious for it. Very few appear to question the propriety of the step. But if permission be granted to rebuild no doubt the errors of the past will be avoided, and a finer structure will in the future span the Tay.

HEALTH.

Look at that word, survey it as you will,
It adds no knowledge to the searcher's skill;
Only six letters that small word contains,
How great the import which that word explains.

'Tis God's great gift; it's origin we trace
From the creating of the human race,
It's full enjoyment tends to life and breath,
It's total loss is close allied with death.

Enjoying health, how seldom do we pause
To view it's worth or propagate its laws,
When all is well and health doth power diffuse,
How apt are we its goodness to abuse.

The blooming youth, the tottering hoary sage,
Give not to health due honor for their age;
Of strength and age they boast with selfish pride,
While health, the main spring, they oft cast aside.

Health, God's great blessing, thousands underrate,
Its priceless value none can estimate;
[illegible]
Grieve the possessor if he lacks good health.

'Tis not for sale, it can't be bought nor sold,
You cannot buy it with the purest gold;
God often grants you more than you deserve,
Oft what He gives you carelessly preserve.

Do you wish proof of what I here portray,
Let sickness seize you but one single day,
Or spend one night with fevered burning brains,
Then you will own the blessings health contains.

View that companion of your youthful days,
He joined the mirth in all your childhood plays;
Watch his weak step, his wan and deathlike face,
Health failed—disease in his sunk eyes you trace.

Come, gentle reader, will you condescend
To view the sick-bed of a suffering friend,
In health all beauty—but what is he now,
Gone on his pale cheeks and still paler brow.

Enquire of him, in whispers he will tell
How light he valued health when he was well;
Now if he owned this world and all its wealth,
He'd freely give it in exchange for health.

Boast not young man of strength—you vainly speak,
Young girl take pride not in your blooming cheek;
Health gives them both—without your feeble aid
In one short moment both may fall and fade.

If you are sick the worth of health you know;
If you are well 'tis God sustains you so;
If you are poor or rolling in great wealth,
Each hour you live think on God's blessing—Health.

A FATAL accident occurred on the Hamilton and North-Western Railway, near Creemore, on Tuesday night, by which a fireman lost his life, and an engineer and a brakeman were badly injured.

THE fact that Germany is massing 40,000 men on the Dutch frontier, ostensibly for the purpose of preventing smuggling, is taken, in the present unsettled and excited state of Europe, as an indication that Bismarck has in contemplation the annexation of Holland and Belgium.

THE Times Scranton special says Miss Ranck, whom it is reported Mr. Tilden is about to marry, is a sister of Mr. J. M. C. Ranck, a prominent member of the Scranton bar, and is said to be a young lady of unusual brilliancy and mental culture. Her meeting with Mr. Tilden was in Philidelphia, during the Centennial summer. The lady's relatives confirmed the report of the engagement.

A WORTHY North Carolinian was buried recently, in accordance with his expressed wish, in a walnut box seven feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. He was laid upon a feather bed and pillow, and was dressed in a suit of home-made jeans, with his boots placed at his feet, and his hat resting on his hands, which were crossed on his breast, and one of which held a pair of gloves.

SOME idea of the amount expended annually in patent medicines in England may be drawn from the accounts published of the last financial year, which shows that no less than 16,727,669 stamps were affixed to these medicines, the duty amounting to £132,385 19s. 4½d. As the duty at its highest rate is only 1½d. in the shilling, it follows that more than a million pounds must have been paid by the public for patent pills and other compounds.

THERE has been within a few years a revival of expository preaching. The importance of explaining what the Bible says may have been underestimated. But it is the enforcement, the application to the individual conscience and heart of the Bible truth, which is most needed. Preachers must not forget that it is their business to drive the truth home to the hearts of their people, as well as to illustrate and ornament it with scholarship. It is not vivid descriptions, but heavy strokes of the hammer on the anvil that do the work.

THE Dublin Mansion House Irish Relief Committee publishes extracts from letters from the Catholic and Protestant Bishops and Archbishops of Ireland in repudiation of Parnell's charge of discrimination against rent defaulters in the distribution of the fund. While these Church dignitaries highly commend the Committee's labours they characterize the agitator's statements as groundless and unwarrantable, and charge him, in making such assertions, with a crime against the suffering people of Ireland.

The Dangers of Sweethearting in Orkney.

A case came before Sheriff Mellis in the Kirkwall Court which caused some amusement to a large audience. Two brothers, Benjamin and Samuel Norquay, residing in the Island of Flotta, were charged with assaulting Jas. S. Barnett, jun., son of the postmaster. It appeared, from the evidence, that Barnett, along with his sweetheart and some companions, had been returning from a singing class on the Thursday evening previous, when he was seriously assaulted by some rivals to the lady's affections, the young men being disguised with pocket handkerchiefs tied round their heads, and their coats turned inside out. From the medical evidence given by Dr. Logie, it seemed the poor fellow had received two contused and two punctured wounds on the head, which had bled a great deal, and the blood vessels of the eyes were lacerated. The doctor was of opinion that the large wound above the eye had been made by the end of a closed knife or stone. Ann Sutherland, the fair maid in dispute, deponed that some of the young men were disguised, [illegible] ed by saying she was a liar. One witness for the defence, on being asked by the Procurator-Fiscal what brought him to the farm at ten o'clock at night, said a lot of chaps were going after the girl, and he went too; while another replied to the same question,—"I knew that Barnett was there, gotten with a sweetheart of mine, and I thought to speak to her after he let her go"—(laughter). Owing to the darkness of the night, however, it was difficult to identify the accused as the persons who had committed the assault, and the Sheriff found the case not proven, although he had no doubt there had been most disgraceful conduct on the part of some one.

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY.

ARREST OF NINE OF THE LEADING MEMBERS OF THE VIGILANCE COMMITTEE.

Apparent Indifference of the Prisoners—Funeral of the Victims—The Detectives Still Busy.

A NUMBER OF ARRESTS.

LUCAN, Feb. 5.—After the adjournment of the inquests last night, Chief of Police Williams drove through to London in company with three or four city police and county constables. He returned to this village at noon. When questioned as to his future movements, very little information could be obtained, his only answer being, "the bottom has not yet been reached; you will hear something startling before night." About noon several sleighs and cutters were ordered for use by the police, and the rumor got abroad that they were going out to arrest the supposed murderers. The detectives and constables, numbering nine in all, were detailed for duty in couples, and they started for the site of old Donnelly's house. In their possession were warrants for the arrest of the supposed ringleaders procured during the night by Chief Williams from Mr. Lawrason, Police Magistrate of London. Shortly after one o'clock county constables Pope and Hodge returned to the village with James Carroll, a constable. The news of the arrest created great excitement among the crowd of people assembled. Carroll was driven straight to the village lock-up, a substantial looking structure on one of the by-streets. His appearance denotes his occupation, a yeoman. He is a hard-featured man, apparently about forty years of age. He was very reticent, and appeared to take his arrest as a matter of course. His home is not very far from the ruins of the Donnelly homestead. That he suffered grievously at the hands of the vicious family is a fact well known among the people, and that he was one of the most active members of the vigilance committee was the talk of the residents of this place twenty-four hours ago. Carroll is a married man. The excitement caused by the arrest of Carroll had barely died away when it was learned that Officers Brown and Moore had brought in another prisoner, John D'Arcy, commonly called Dorcy. He, like Carroll, was driven to the lock-up, where close guard was kept on the two prisoners. The constables, in searching D'Arcy's house, found a shot-gun loaded with buckshot. It is said that the charge has the appearance of being recently put in.

HAULING IN THE COMMITTEE MEN.

By this time the people of the village had arrived at the conclusion that a clean sweep was going to be made by the police, and they openly anticipated the arrest of all persons known to be members of the vigilance committee. When Chief Williams and Detectives Phair and Murphy drove through the village to the cells having in charge John Kennedy, it was freely commented on that at least two of the principal members of the committee, Carroll and Kennedy, had been secured. This prisoner is also a farmer. He is a man of heavy build, standing over six feet in height, and is about 35 years old. His sister is the wife of William Donnelly, and he is known to entertain anything but kindly feelings toward the Donnelly family, who have, in their time, made him feel their presence in the neighborhood. When the three officers went to arrest him at his home, which is in the same concession where the old Donnelly homestead once stood, they found him absent from the place; and upon making enquiries it was learned that he had gone to the house of a farmer named Heenan, about a mile and a half distant. Thither he was followed and taken into custody. Like the other prisoners, his arrest did not appear to surprise him, and he is said to have acted in the coolest possible manner when taken in charge. When spoken to he preserved a strict silence on the fate of the Donnelly family. During the afternoon Detectives Phair and Murphy arrested one Martin McLaughlin, who resides about a mile from the scene of the shooting of John Donnelly.

A SILENT WITNESS.

In his house they found a repeating rifle with four cartridges in the chamber, which when filled contained seven. The ball which it fires is said to correspond in size and make with the one which killed John Donnelly, and which was removed from the body of the latter by William Donnelly the morning after the shooting of his brother. The bullet is now in the possession of Chief Williams. Phair and Murphy, after capturing McLaughlin, drove to the house of Patrick Ryder, Sr. The appearance of the police at this place was hailed by the Ryders with derision. The younger members of the family indulged in considerable chaff at the expense of the detectives, such as, "Wouldn't you like to know who are the parties?" &c. The father of the family was not found at home, but the officers having warrants for the arrest of his sons, Patrick and James, they were taken in charge. While driving towards the village the police met old Ryder, who is aged about 60 years, and he was also put under arrest, and conveyed with the others to the lock-up. James Maher, Sr. and Jr., were also arrested and locked up.

IN THE CELLS.

As seen in the cells to-night, the nine prisoners presented a rough exterior. If they really are the guilty parties, and Chief Williams says he can produce damaging evidence against them, little hope may be entertained of any of them squealing. The youngest members of the gang appear to take matters just as coolly as their seniors. There was a rumour set afloat in the village towards nightfall that an attempt would be made to rescue the prisoners. Chief Williams, who has received more than one threatening letter since his arrival here, looked upon the matter as a piece of idle talk.

OFF TO LONDON.

About eight o'clock the men were taken from the cells and handcuffed preparatory to their departure for London. Six of them, well guarded, were driven to Clandeboye station, on the London, Huron and Bruce railway, about four or five miles from this place, where they took the train for London. The remaining three, under Chief Williams, Detective Phair, and a county constable, drove through in cutters to London, a distance of about 16 miles. At the time of their departure, a crowd of sightseers had congregated in front of the lock-up, but no signs of disapproval were manifested at the proceeding, and Chief Williams, who had skilfully managed the affair throughout, was well prepared for the emergencies which might arise, and which, fortunately, if anticipated, did not come to a head. The people of London have just cause to feel pride in the executive abilities displayed by their Chief of Police. He is more than a figurehead decked out in a coat profusely adorned with "frogs." The nine prisoners will be brought before Police Magistrate Lawrason, of London, to-morrow morning, when they will be called upon to plead to a charge of murder, under which charge they were arrested. No evidence, however, will be taken, and an adjournment will be asked for until the coroner's inquest is concluded.—Mail.

Special to the Review.

JOHN DONNELLY'S FUNERAL.

LUCAN, Feb. 6.—The funeral procession left Connor's residence at 11 a. m. The body of John Donnelly was conveyed in the village hearse, followed by the remains of the four other victims in a double sleigh. The chief mourners were Wm. Donnelly and his wife, Mrs. Curry, the daughter, and her husband, Patrick and Robert, the other two sons, who are both unmarried. These and the relatives of Mrs. Wm. Donnelly constituted the mourners. The procession reached over half a mile, and contained seventy teams carrying five hundred people.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

FRIDAY, Feb. 6.—There was another drop in the wheat market to-day. Spring wheat, for local use, went off at $1.15, shippers fighting shy. The condition of the foreign, New York, and Chicago markets have thrown buyers all at sea, without a helm to guide them. Fall wheat still maintains quotations, although in sympathy with the spring wheat break; millers are only taking what they need for temporary use. Peas are coming in rather more freely at 60c @ 61c. Oats 33c., with few parcels arriving. Hay and wood, no change.

"German Syrup."

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthma, Croup, severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them. The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist, and ask what they know about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. dw51-1y

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam has a tonic effect on the stomach and the digestive organs, without any injurious effect on the system. It allays irritation of the bronchial tubes and stomach, removing the phlegm from the air cells to the lungs; at the same time healing the inflamed or irritated parts. We have never known it to fail in giving satisfaction, when used according to directions, for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Croup, or any other affection of the throat or lungs leading to Consumption. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. d31w7-2w

No Such Word as Fail.

The hectic cheek, the sunken eye, the hacking cough, betray the presence of that disease—consumption. If one of our friends or relatives is attacked with this disease, there is nothing that we would not do to give them relief, but leading physicians prescribe in vain. The only known remedy and one which stamps the discoverer as a public benefactor is GROVE'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA. Never, in a large and varied experience, has it been known to fail to give relief, and in most cases permanently cure. wdd201m

A bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worth more to the sufferer than the $50,000 pearl that Cleopatra drank. It proves a sure remedy in soreness of a part, or muscular pain, Stiff Joints, Contraction of the Muscles, culture Throat, Swelled Neck, Enlarged Glands, etc., and is unsurpassed as a remedy for Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, etc. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. d31w7-2w

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is twice to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. Price 25 cents. wd60

If the storm of adversity whistles around you, whistle as bravely yourself; perhaps the two whistles may make melody. If you feel an indisposition to exertion, weak nerves, pain in the back, etc., or are afflicted with any affection of the secretory organs, use Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. It improves the digestive powers and strengthens the weakened and debilitated secretory organs. For sale by all dealers, $1 per bottle. d31w7-2w

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Separate School Board.

The trustees of the Separate School met on Thursday evening, but only routine business was transacted.

A Zealous Agent.

Mr. Thos. Menzies, the agent here of the Grand Trunk Railway, has returned from his visit to Toronto to oppose the Toronto and Ottawa Railway bill. We have not heard that he was very successful in his effort to serve his employers.

Ice Packing.

A number of people are now engaged in cutting and hauling ice; there are others waiting for better and heavier ice. These latter may be disappointed, for the ice is probably as good and as heavy as it will be at any time this season, and all who expect to gather it had better not delay the work.

The Bonspiel.

In commenting on the recent bonspiel the Port Hope Times says:—

> "The home team is loud in its praises of the excellent arrangements made by their Peterboro' brithers for their comfort, especially of the President and the Secretary. Our curlers are to be congratulated upon the gallant fight they made, and we hope they will have better luck next time."

The Sleighing.

The light fall of snow last night, packing down and covering the loose sanded snow of Tuesday's storm, has improved the sleighing considerably, but two or more inches more are required to make good roads. A large number of parties were out enjoying a sleigh ride last evening, and the sleigh bells are jingling right merrily this morning.

Personal.

We copy the following from the Colborne Express of January 20:—

> "Mr. W. H. Osborne, for several years lessee of the Colborne Harbor grist mill, has rented the Allandale Mills in the County of Peterborough, and has already left for his new place of business. His career has been marked by industry and integrity which secured for him the good-will and confidence of all having dealings with him."

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Moderate to brisk winds; fair to cloudy weather; snow areas to-night. Peterborough, westerly to south-westerly winds, changing to westerly, and partly cloudy weather. The thermometer indicated this morning at 7 o'clock 10°, at 9 o'clock 15°, and at 12 o'clock 20°.

Ashburnham P. S. Honor List.

The pupils of grade 1, who obtained more than half the given marks for the past month, are:—Division 1, class 2,—Chas. Glover, 599; Maggie Dunlop, 584; John Malone, 571. Class 3,—C. R. Brown, 494. The full number of marks was 875. The marks are given on weekly written examinations, and 75% of the marks are necessary for a place in class 1, 62½% in class 2, and 50% in class 3.

A Good Appointment.

We are glad to learn that Mr. F. E. Hayter, B. A., Mathematical Gold Medalist of the Toronto University, and son of Mr. Alfred E. Hayter, of the Millbrook Messenger, has received a permanent appointment in the Auditor-General's office at Ottawa. Mr. Hayter is a young man who has already earned a reputation both for ability and industry, and he will no doubt make a good official.

A Warning.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star has the following item in relation to a practice which is not peculiar to that town:—

> "We understand that the Mayor has given instructions to the constables to take down the names of those who have been in the habit of disturbing public entertainments and meetings in Victoria Hall, by their shrill whistling, howling, and other extravagant demonstrations, intended to disturb, with a view of bringing them before the Police Magistrate. Legitimate applause is all very well, but such scenes as have been permitted lately are anything but a credit to the town. The Mayor is to be commended for his prompt action.

The California Minstrels.

The California Minstrels will give an entertainment in the Opera House this evening. The following extract from the Hartford Courant will give the public some idea of the character and standing of this excellent company:—

> The California Minstrels had a good audience last night at the Opera House, and they deserved it. In the number as well as the quality of the troupe they rank among the best companies travelling. Some of the features of the entertainment were considerably above the average in minstrel shows. The bass singer, Mr. [illegible], has a voice of rare power, which he uses well. Six "end men" furnish tambourine and bones accompaniments and the jokes. The well-known Cool Burgess is one of them.

The Midland Central Poultry Show.

The Midland Central Poultry Association will meet in the show room of the Old Music Hall this Friday evening at 8 o'clock, for the final arrangements for the exhibition which takes place on the 10th, 11th and 12th inst. It is important that every member should be present. It has been decided that on the last day of the exhibition the society will hold an auction sale of a large quantity of thorough-bred birds. This will afford an opportunity for farmers and others to obtain choice stock for future improvement in their poultry exhibits.

Pharmaceutical Examinations.

At the recent examination of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, the following names appear in the list of those who obtained the number of marks necessary to entitle them to registration as pharmaceutical chemists:—W. A. Fogerty, Port Hope; W. L. Wood, Omemee; T. McCarnes, Bobcaygeon; E. B. Gilbard, Cobourg; R. Ventress, Bobcaygeon; and T. J. Bird, Lakefield. The prize given by Mr. A. B. Bennett for the greatest proficiency in the departments of pharmacy, prescriptions and dispensing has been awarded to Mr. W. L. Wood, of Omemee.

A Rare Chance.

We have received copies of the engravings "Meeting of Wellington and Blucher" and "Death of Nelson," offered to every subscriber to the Canada Presbyterian, and they will undoubtedly prove beautiful ornaments to any home. The offer of this premium is still open to every person who subscribes for the Presbyterian, either directly or through this office. The Recent Fire.

The ruins of Wednesday morning's fire are still burning. The front wall of the middle building is thought by many to be in danger of falling. The stringers supporting the wall are badly burned, and the wall has sagged considerably. It has been suggested that the wall should be taken down or a proper guard placed in front to prevent people from passing directly in front of it. Several buildings on the opposite side of George Street were more or less damaged. The show window of Mr. Lech's hat store was badly shattered before the shutters could be put up. The show window of Mr. J. White's shoe store was completely riddled, and the glass in the upper portion of these buildings, including the one occupied by Mr. P. Connal was more or less broken by the intense heat. The wood work of these premises also sustained some damage.

Heroism in a Mine.

A very interesting ceremony was witnessed on the 21st at the Cutler's Hall, Sheffield, the occasion being the presentation by Lord Edward Cavendish of four medals of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, for bravery. The recipients of the medals were Mr. Stokes, her Majesty's Assistant Inspector of Mines for Derbyshire, who received a silver medal; Mr. John Hancock, manager of a mine, and John and Thomas Davies, miners, each of whom received a medal of bronze. In July last, a miner named Bagshawe was working in the deep drift of the Black Engine lead mine at Eyam. The drift was about to be closed against further operations. Just as Bagshawe was in the act of leaving that part of the mine, a fall of roof took place, and he became imprisoned. There he remained for five days and five nights, during the whole of which time Mr. Stokes, Mr. Hancock, and the two Davies worked in the deep drift in the hourly expectation of being themselves buried, or being killed with choke-damp. At the end of that time they were rewarded by opening up a communication with Bagshawe, who was found to be alive and uninjured, though in a terribly weak condition from want of food. Restoratives were sent down to him, and he was ultimately brought to the surface. The presentations were made in the presence of a numerous company. Lord Cavendish shook hands with each of the recipients, and complimented them on the bravery they had displayed. Bagshawe was amongst the spectators, and answered some questions put to him by his Lordship. The rescue was taken part in by about eighty men, and it was stated that the Order of St. John of Jerusalem had made a selection in the case of the persons named as having most distinguished themselves.

MIDNIGHT TELEGRAMS

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines

CABLE.

THE MONEY MARKET.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The rates of discount are hardening, partly in consequence of the general advance of prices and the improvement in business, and partly in consequence of the pressure on the money market by the sale of a million and a half of treasury bills, which were allotted yesterday at slightly above two per cent. premium, and by bids for the new South Australian Government four per cent. loan of three and a quarter millions, which at the minimum of 92½ was covered nearly five times over. No allotments were made below 92½.

PARIS IN DARKNESS.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Perfectly Cimmerian darkness prevailed in this city all last night. No denser fog ever held sway in the British metropolis. Nothing to resemble it in intensity has been seen in Paris for many a long year. At midnight it was impossible to see twelve yards ahead. The police, to facilitate the progress of befogged and belated citizens, through the streets, had fires lighted on the street corners, while sergents de ville were on the alert, occasionally posting themselves on the corners with flaring torches in their hands. No accident of serious moment is reported.

A MYSTERIOUS ARREST.

Le Gaulois announces the arrest of a lady of title and fortune, residing in the Eighth Arrondissement, who by her connections is closely allied with high political circles. Every effort was made by those interested to hush up the matter.

FAMINE IN KURDISTAN.

French missionaries in Mosul give painful accounts of ravages and famine in Mesopotamia and Kurdistan. Christians, Jews and Mahomedans are all suffering.

LOAN TO SPAIN.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The Societie Generale de Paris have offered to advance to Spain sixty millions of piastres, at six per cent., on a guarantee of the Cuban revenues.

A FRANCO-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—In the Gaulois to-day, M. Weiss has a long article on the over-fruitful subject, the situation in Europe. According to him, France and Russia occupy isolated positions at opposite ends of Europe. The question now is whether it would be practicable to unite them in bonds of offensive and defensive alliance. An event of this kind would undoubtedly have great force, but such an alliance, even though backed by Spain and Italy, would be, in the opinion of the writer, scarcely powerful enough to resist the united strength of Germany and Austria disgracing their cloth.

SUBTERRANEAN TELEGRAPHY.

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The Budget Committee proposes a vote of credit of 8,000,000 francs for the construction of subterranean telegraph lines.

GERMANY AND THE VATICAN.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—In the Prussian Diet to-day during the debate on the Public Worship estimates, Herr Windthorst complained that Herr Von Puttkamer intended to follow his predecessor's principles, and he had but little faith in the successful termination of negotiations with the Vatican. Herr Von Puttkamer, in reply, said he esteemed the Catholic Church, and regretted any conflict, but a compromise was only possible on the basis of existing Prussian legislation.

WICKED PRIESTS.

PARIS, Feb 5.—Priest Frere Dale has been fined fifty francs for brutal treatment of one of his pupils. The Abbe Berthon, who ran off with the wife of one of his parishioners, and took with him money belonging to the poor, has been sentenced to ten months' imprisonment.

ANOTHER IRISH AMENDMENT.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—In the Commons to-day, Mr. O'Donnell, Home Ruler, gave notice that he would move an amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's Speech, calling attention to the systematic neglect of Irish affairs, and also to the fectious misrepresentation of the acts of Irish members of Parliament by the Government and their agents.

PUNISHMENT OF OBSTRUCTIONISTS.

Mr. Newdegate, Conservative member for Warwickshire, gave notice of his intention to offer resolutions, providing for the suspension of members as a penalty for obstruction to legislation.

INCREASE OF THE GERMAN ARMY.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—A Berlin correspondent says:—"Intimation that an increase of the German army is intended, even beyond that already announced, namely, by the formation of special Alsace-Lorraine regiments, caused no little sensation. It is understood the Governor-General of Alsace-Lorraine supports the proposal as tending to create a national feeling in the annexed provinces."

SUSPENSION OF EJECTMENTS.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Mr. Sullivan, Home Rule member for Louth, gave notice that he would to-morrow move leave to introduce a bill for the protection of life and property in Ireland, by suspending the serving of writs of ejectment for non-payment of rent.

SPAIN AND CUBA.

MADRID, Feb. 5.—A Madrid despatch says, in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, Senor Elduayen said that Spain would furnish Cuba with 2,000 soldiers to insure her territorial integrity.

VISIT TO RUSSIA.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The Prince of Wales will shortly visit St. Petersburg. The alleged Russian intrigues with Persia are again attracting attention.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

GENEVA, Feb. 5.—The Great Council of the Canton of Appenzel has voted for the re-establishment of capital punishment.

AUSTRIA AND RUSSIA.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—From the fact that the Archduke Albrecht is to represent Austria at the 25th anniversary of the Czar's accession, the German press concludes a rapprochement between Austria and Russia is going on. The Archduke is the recognized friend of Russia.

SUPPRESSION OF A BERLIN PAPER.

The Berlin Zeitung has been confiscated for publishing a sharp attack upon the Government. This is the first instance for many years of a non-Socialistic paper being suppressed.

PRESS REFORMS IN RUSSIA.

A Berlin correspondent asserts that one reform to be instituted on the occasion of the Czar's twenty-fifth anniversary, will be to allow the frequent insertion of leading articles in the official Gazettes of the Provincial capitals.

A HOME RULE AMENDMENT.

Mr. Shaw, the Home Rule member for Cork, will, on behalf of the Irish members, move an amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's Speech at the earliest moment, condemning the Government's failure to take efficient measures to relieve the distress in Ireland, and will call upon them to do so. The amendment concludes with a statement that it is essential for the peace and prosperity of Ireland to legislate immediately and comprehensively on questions relative to land tenure, the neglect of which duty is the true cause of the constantly recurring distress in that country.

BLIND TOM, when at his Georgia home, remains alone with his piano, in a building apart by himself, and plays day and night like a mad man. He now plays about 7,000 pieces, and picks up new ones everywhere. It is a curious fact that he will not play Sunday-school music if he can help it, having a great dislike for it.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A young man named Cutt, living on the 6th concession of Biddulph, who had his leg broken by the fall of a tree where he was chopping in the woods, is dead this morning. The unfortunate man lay in the woods some four hours before being discovered, and the effects of the cold caused congestion of the brain, to which disease he succumbed early this morning.

LOST HIS FINGERS.—A young boy, the son of W. Walker, an innkeeper at the Grand Trunk Railway station here, lost the two middle fingers of his right hand this morning, by their coming in contact with the knives of a cutting box, which he was using.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A LITTLE GIRL shut up as a punishment for some fault in her father's barn at Band (Morbihan) in France, was killed by a wolf, which by climbing a rubbish heap was able to enter by the roof.

A WEALTHY MAN of Augusta, Ga., carried a great deal of money in a very old pocketbook, and is glad he did so, because the pickpocket got only the worthless wallet, while the roll of bills slipped out and remained behind.

OF RICH PHILADELPHIANS who died last year, Asa Packer left an estate valued at over $8,000,000; Thomas H. Powers, about the same; Bloomfield H. Moore, over $3,000,000; Kossith Benson, $1,500,000, and George Falls $1,325,000.

LEOPOLD I. of Belgium had an effective way of meeting discontent. He intimated on more than one occasion that kinging it was a matter of very small moment to him, and that due notice being given he was quite ready to go at any time, if the people, through their representatives, expressed the wish that he should do so.

CHECKMATED.—Those who know Lord Rosebery and his calm precision in calculation of results never feared that he would take the responsibility of bringing Mr. Gladstone to Midlothian without making his election a certainty. As a set-off to 160 faggot voters created by the Duke of Buccleugh, he has, as if by a sudden touch of enchantment, thrown up 160 cottages near Edinburgh, on the Tyne side, to house 160 workingmen and add 160 to the Liberal constituency. The work was pushed on in a few weeks in a most picturesque and energetic manner, four contractors taking each forty tenements, and a force of 500 masons, bricklayers, laborers, and so forth, relieving each other in relays night and day. The work has been carried on pretty much as the Jews built Jerusalem, only, in place of anthem and psaltery, the workmen have been stimulated by cheers for Gladstone and orations delivered by the light of naphtha lamps.

BURGLARS OF HIGH STANDING.

LONDON, Conn., Feb. 7.—William Cheeseboro and Daniel Tift, young men of high standing, and influential members of Mystic Baptist Church, were arrested last summer charged with complicity in numerous burglaries of the residences of wealthy New Yorkers in Mystic. Tift pleaded guilty on Wednesday, and was sentenced to five years' imprisonment. At Cheeseboro's trial yesterday, Tift testified against him. He was convicted of receiving stolen goods, but was acquitted of burglary, and he was sentenced to ten months in jail.

RUSSIAN TREACHERY.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—The blue book on Afghan affairs has been issued. General Roberts reports that he had a conversation with Yakoob Khan in October, 1879, in which the latter stated that the British Mission under Sir Neville Chamberlain was turned back by the advice of the Russian envoy at Cabul, M. Stolietoff, and that when Shere Ali quitted Afghanistan in Dec., 1878, he issued a firmen to the authorities at Herat, declaring that Stolietoff had written him as follows:—"The Emperor desires that you should not admit the English into your country, and like last year you are to treat them with deceit until the cold season passes away. Then the Almighty's will will be made manifest to you; that is to say, the Russian Government will come to your assistance. Either by diplomatic action we will entirely cut off all English communication and interference with Afghanistan, or events will end in a mighty and important war."

RUSSIAN ASSERTIONS.

A blue book respecting affairs in Central Asia has been issued. It shows that on July 9th, of 1879, Lord Salisbury, Minister of Foreign Affairs, asked Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, whether there was any truth in the report that the expedition from the Caspian intended to occupy Merv. Schouvaloff said the expedition was directed against the Tekke Turcomans; that he entirely disbelieved the existence among any section of Russian statesmen of a wish to advance upon Merv. On July 16th last DeGiers, of the Foreign office, repeated these assurances to Lord Dufferin, the British Ambassador to Russia, in a most positive form.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A Berlin despatch says the North German Gazette denies a statement by a Russian journal, the Novoe Vremya of St. Petersburg, that Prince Bismarck intrigued with the Polish Revolutionary Government in 1863, and declares that the publication of such fabrications shows the hostile feelings existing in Russia against Germany.

A Berlin correspondent asserts that Count de St. Vallier, after repeated interviews with De Freycinet and Gambetta, has concluded to retain his post as Ambassador to Germany. A Paris correspondent confirms the report.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—In the diplomatic correspondence laid before Parliament to-day was a despatch from Lord Dufferin, Minister at St. Petersburg, stating that the Czar said he had no disposition to occupy Merv so long as England confined operations in Afghanistan to the eastern part of the country. It is understood that Lord Dufferin presented to the Russian Government a despatch from the Secretary of State for India tantamount to a proposition to divide Afghanistan between England and Russia, and to establish the prominent outposts of either side respectively at Cabul and Herat.

THE AUSTRIAN ARMY.

VIENNA, Feb. 6.—The Austrian delegation has adopted the army and navy estimates of the Government without amendment. Relative to the rumoured intention of the Government to fortify Vienna, the Minister of War said that the question of the defence of the whole monarchy had been disposed of two years ago, and had not since been re-opened.

SPANISH COLONIES.

MADRID, Feb. 6.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the Minister for the Colonies said the Government had decided that Cuba and Porto Rico should be placed in a position equivalent to that of the Spanish provinces.

A HURRICANE.

Official despatches have been received, giving further details of the recent hurricane in the Phillippine Islands. Twenty-five vessels of various classes were wrecked, including four foreign frigates. A large number of other vessels were damaged. Forty persons were drowned.

AN ENGLISH HOME RULER.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 6.—The interest attached to the contest for the seat in Parliament, arising from the fact that Lord Ramsay, the Liberal candidate, had made a bid for the Home Rule vote by pledging to support an enquiry into the question of Home Rule, brought out a remarkably heavy vote. Whitely, Conservative, was elected by a majority of 2,390.

GREAT TURF FRAUDS.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Walters, one of the principals in the great turf frauds, in connection with which Benson, Kerr, and the three detectives, Meiklejohn, Druscovitch, and Palmer, were convicted in 1879, has been arrested in London.

MEDICAL AND SCIENTIFIC.

DIVISIBLE PRINTING ROLLERS.—Mr. Muller, of Mannheim, has patented an invention according to which printing machine rollers can be disjointed and reattached as may be necessitated by the size of the type form. Both the composition and the iron or wood rod on which the former is mounted are divisible into as many as six parts. The invention is plausible, and might prove of practical service, yet the difficulty that suggests itself to us is the varying condition—depending on the greater or less use to which each may have been put—in which the component parts of the roller might be when jointed and used together. The inventor alleges that by means of this invention several colors may be printed simultaneously.

A CLEANSING AND RENOVATING POLISH.—Take of olive oil one pound, of rectified oil of amber one pound, spirits of turpentine one pound, oil of lavendar one ounce, and tincture of alkanet root one-half ounce. Saturate a piece of cotton batting with the polish, apply it to the wood, with soft and dry cotton rags, rub well and wipe off dry. This will make old furniture in private dwellings, or that which has been shop worn in warerooms, look as well as when first finished. The articles should be put into a jar or jug, well mixed, and afterwards kept tightly corked. This is a valuable receipt, and not generally known.

LIVER PADS.—Formula is as follows:—Pulv. Resin, 2 oz.; Pul. Fœnugrek, 1 oz.; Pulv. Fennel Seed, ½ oz.; Oil Juniper, 5 minims. The following is a better formula:—

Galbanum pulv	ounce.
Myrrh pulv	"
Camphor pulv	"
Ammoniac pulv	"
Benzoin pulv	"
Sandal Wood	"
Fœnugrek	[illegible] ounces.

This mixture put up in pads (diamond shape is a good one) of four ounces, with title printed on pad, and buyers address; each pad in a neat box with colored label on top, with extended directions.

CURE FOR SLEEPLESSNESS.—The following is recommended as a cure for sleeplessness:—Wet half a towel, apply it to the back of the neck, pressing it upwards towards the base of the brain, and fasten the dry half of the towel over so as to prevent the too rapid exhalation. The effect is prompt and charming, cooling the brain, and introducing calmer, sweeter sleep than any narcotic. Warm water may be used, though most persons prefer cold. To those suffering from over-excitement of the brain, whether from work or pressing anxiety, this simple remedy is an especial boon.

THE PRESSURE OF THE WIND on the night of the Tay Bridge disaster was estimated at from 40 to 50 lbs. on the square inch.

FOR WATERPROOFING BOOTS take eight parts of raw linseed oil, ten parts of boiled linseed oil, eight parts of suet, eight parts of beeswax; melt all well together and apply hot.

TO HARDEN plaster of Paris to imitate marble for table tops, mix the plaster with alum water instead of pure water. This plaster will require a longer time to set, but will eventually become exceedingly hard.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

The following is an extract from the report in the Post of the proceedings of the Victoria County Council:—

Mr. Bell moved, seconded by Mr. MacKenzie, that this council grant the sum of $200 to form a fund to be expended in paying the preliminary expenses of furthering the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, such fund to be subject to the order of the Warden and Mr. C. Fairbairn, Reeve of Verulam.

Mr. Bell stated for the information of new members that $500 was voted for the advancement of this project some years ago when Mr. Boyd was urging its construction, but the scheme not having then taken shape the money was not drawn. He considered the scheme now in a fair way of being undertaken, and as this council was deeply interested in it the money should be voted. He asked Mr. Fairbairn to give a brief account of the reception of the delegation by the Government.

Mr. Fairbairn stated that the deputation had been very cordially received by the Government, and the impression of the members of the deputation was that the work would be gone on with. He was not anxious to be placed in trust of this fund as he had a good deal of private business to attend to, but if appointed, he and the Warden would see that the money was properly expended.

The motion was carried.

TRENTON AND THE T. V. CANAL.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—When you drive from the station at Trenton to Frankford, on the west side of the River Trent, and cross over to the east side and take the road leading to Stirling, you will observe that the banks on both sides of the River Trent are high, and behind them are hills of some magnitude, of which the "Oak Hill" is the highest, being several hundred feet high. The latter extends several miles north-east from Frankford, passing south of Stirling. The "Nine Mile Rapids" referred to in the letter hereinafter mentioned, stand nearly opposite the middle of the Oak Hill. Well, imagine the surprise of every person who knows that locality, when he reads the letter you copied in your paper of the 31st ult., from the Bobcaygeon Independent, calling public attention to the desirability of making Belleville the outlet of the Trent Valley Canal, and stating that it could be easily done by describing that from the head of the Nine Mile Rapids "seven miles would carry the canal into Belleville." [illegible] Grand Junction Railway is obliged to make a long detour to the north of the Oak Hill before it could turn towards Stirling, so that it is 19½ miles long by the railway from Belleville to Stirling, and the distance between these places by the gravelled road running over the Oak Hill is 15 miles, but Stirling is still 2 miles distant from the Nine Mile Rapids. Again, if it be suggested to run the canal from Frankford, the engineering difficulties are still insurmountable, and Frankford is 14 miles from Belleville, while Frankford is but 5½ miles from Lucas Island, in the River Trent (opposite the station at Trenton) up to which the River "Trent" is navigable and very deep too. Indeed, the "Trent" up to Lucas Island is on the same level with the Bay of Quinte. The station just above Lucas Island is 1½ miles from Trenton.

F. M. Hamel, C.E., and party, who were surveying the harbour and river three years ago under the instructions of the Dominion Government, found the river to be an average of 17 to 19 feet, and even 22 feet deep in the middle. The "Trent" is over 1,000 feet wide, thus making a splendid harbor. The length, width, and depth of the river give almost unlimited room for wharfage—extending over two miles! It is the candid opinion of many friends of the Trent Valley Canal that the land on both sides should be secured for such purposes, which they think can be had cheap now. Again, such unlimited room for wharfage may also be had below the bridge at Trenton. Belleville cannot show such unlimited accommodation for dockage as Trenton.

When the writer of the letter declares that the idea of "Port Hope wishing to make the Trent Valley Canal outlet at that place is simply ridiculous," the same may be said of the one at Belleville—both are equally impracticable, owing to the intervention of high banks and hills, to say nothing of the enormous outlay that would be unnecessarily incurred thereby.

I formerly resided at Belleville, and I am therefore well acquainted with the river "Moira." During summer the "Moira" is almost an empty creek, so that I often walked dry-shod across the river above the upper bridge at Belleville—thus showing that the "Moira" can never feed a canal of such a magnitude as the Trent Valley Canal.

Several Civil Engineers state that the "Trent" from the Nine Mile Rapids can be easily deepened so that splendid stretches of water from 1½ to 2 miles long may be had—the latter above Gordon's Bridge—as the banks on both sides of the Trent are very high, so that locks need only be had at each dam, thus avoiding such cutting through solid rock, high banks and hills for miles, or even the "Oak Hill" itself, as unwittingly suggested by the correspondent of the letter you copied in your paper.

As to the cost of the Trent Valley Canal, one not less than six feet deep, is estimated to cost $8,000,000, and many friends of the canal are of opinion that it is better to have one of that depth than one only 5 feet deep, which will cost between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000. The extra outlay is very small compared with the great advantage that the Trent Valley Canal will have over the Erie Canal, as though they both have the same depth of water, yet the former will have longer locks.

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY.

A MOVING SCENE AT THE FUNERAL OF THE VICTIMS.

What the People say About the Donnellys—More Arrests Made—Justice not to be Obtained.

THE FUNERAL.

LUCAN, Feb. 6.—The mournful procession, which was over half a mile long, wended its way to the Roman Catholic Church at Ryan's Corners, about two miles distant from the village. It was met at the church door by Father Connolly, who preceded the coffins up the aisle, where they were rested during the impressive services that followed.

A SOLEMN AND MOVING SCENE.

After prayers and Holy Sacrament there ensued a scene that probably stands unprecedented in the annals of Canada.

This ceremony having been concluded, Father Connolly took up his position at the foot of the altar, and facing the congregation began to address them. It was evident that he was labouring under intense emotion, and his first words were uttered with a low and choking voice.

THE REV. FATHER'S SERMON.

"My beloved brethren," he said, "you are in the presence of the most solemn scene that has ever been brought before the gaze of humanity. I have beheld many solemn scenes, but this is the most solemn I have ever witnessed." Here the feelings of the rev. gentleman overcame him, and amid a flood of tears he exclaimed,

"MY HEART IS BROKEN."

He turned his back to the congregation, and, leaning on the holy altar, wept like a child. At the same time sobs broke forth from Mrs. Curry and the woman sitting next to her, while Patrick and Robert Donnelly, who sat in the seat before them, although they managed to suppress their tears, were observed to shake like branches in a gale. William Donnelly's features were tightly set, showing the iron will that he is possessed of, but still he was not unmoved. Many of the women in the congregation joined in the weeping, and for two or three minutes the scene was touching in the extreme. Father Conway was the first to banish his tears, and resumed his former position.

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY.

Mr. Wm. Stanley, Reeve of the village, was fearless in stating that two years ago the Donnellys were the terror of the township. On being questioned as to Father Connolly's accusations that the magistrates neglected their duty, he said that although the boys were often arrested on various charges it was very difficult to secure a conviction. In fact it was impossible to get evidence, as the people seemed to fear that if they swore against the Donnellys their barns would be burned down, or they would be made to suffer by other depredations. This fear at last reached some of the magistrates, and they declined to receive information against any member of the family. Hence it was, Mr. Stanley says, that

JUSTICE COULD NOT BE ADMINISTERED.

While making these statements Mr. Stanley characterized the murders as most atrocious and outrageous, and expressed the hope that the murderers would be sternly dealt with. He, along with the other residents of the village, is indignant at the newspapers designating the murder as "the Lucan horror," whereas it was committed in the separate municipality of Biddulph, at a distance of five miles from here. They are afraid that Lucan will suffer considerably from the wrong impression the public has probably formed of the village on this account.

MORE ARRESTS.

Two more men, Michael Heenan and John Purtell, have been arrested by the police.

INTERVIEW WITH A LUCAN MAN.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Nothing is talked of here but the Lucan tragedy. The Advertiser to-night prints the following sensational interview with a prominent man from that place. He gave what may be called the anti-Donnelly view of the tragedy, and his opinions, calmly expressed, reveal a curious state of affairs. He said he had no doubt the murderers were well known to many.

"Can that be proved?" asked the reporter.

"No, I think not. There is no doubt in my mind that the Vigilance Committee is in the secret, but they will keep it. Moreover, the people of the neighborhood are under a debt of gratitude to them for their action to rid the place of the Donnellys, and no one will testify against the Committee."

"But how do they justify such a course?"

"Well, it was necessary. Our barns were burnt, our horses' tongues cut out, our cattle disembowed, and no one was safe who ever said a word against the Donnellys."

Reporter—"But I should suppose that the people who could plan and deliberately execute such a horrible crime would be as bad as the Donnellys ever were."

Lucanite—"No, siree. If the truth were known it will be found that the murderers are the most respectable people in the township, good farmers and honest men. But they had to do it. There was no other way."

Reporter—"Was there no law?"

Lucanite—"Law; well, I'll be——. Law, where did anybody ever get the best of the Donnellys in law? Why, we never saw them up and get their deserts. If they happened to be found guilty the sentence was ridiculously light. Look at the two years for shooting Everett."

Reporter—"How do the people regard it?"

Lucanite—"Well, they felt that it had to be. There was no other course. The Donnellys had to be killed. Perhaps it was a mistake that Bill was not killed, but that can't be helped. They were a bad family, and the only difference between them and a dog was in the shape."

Reporter—"Then you think the murderers won't be found guilty?"

Lucanite—"Why, they can't be. There will be any amount of money at their back; the best counsel will be procured, and nothing will be left undone. The murderers, as you call them, are respectable men, who would not harm a fly; but they had to kill the Donnellys just as they had to kill a mad dog. People cannot live in a state of terror for ever."

Reporter—"But the woman?"

Lucanite—"There need be no sympathy for Mrs. Donnelly. She was kind-hearted, and did lots of little acts of kindness, but she had a wicked mind. Why, it is said that she prayed on her knees that the souls of her sons might be ever and ever frizzle in hell if they ever forgave an enemy, or failed to take revenge."

Reporter—"But still all that does not alter the legal liability of the murderers."

Lucanite (with a shrug)—"Well, perhaps not, but they ain't caught yet."

Special to the Review.

THE POLICE ACTIVE.

LUCAN, Feb. 7.—The chief and a portion of his staff were here from London at an early hour this morning, and are quite on the alert. The prospects are that some more arrests will be made during the day. It is almost impossible to get any information from the chief and his staff, they are so reticent as to their movements, but it is reliably stated their mission to the settlement is for the purpose of collecting evidence, chiefly among the relatives and friends of those already under arrest.

PRISONERS REMANDED.

LONDON, Feb 7.—The prisoners Heenan and Purtell, from Biddulph, were to-day brought before the Police Magistrate and were remanded for examination till the 14th inst. No evidence was taken.

PORT HOPE.

DON'T WORK.—The Guide says:—The Peterborough steam fire engine don't work worth a cent on a big fire. Peterborough will not be safe until she avails herself of the natural advantages she possesses and secures good waterworks. With such means for extinguishing fires as we have in Port Hope the fire that bothered them would have been drowned out in ten minutes, and thousands of dollars worth of property saved.

FIRE.—About noon yesterday a fire broke out in the addition in the rear of the house occupied by Mr. John Hagerman on Protestant hill. The flames gained rapidly, and at one time threatened the complete destruction of the building, in which case some six or seven frame buildings adjacent would no doubt have been consumed. No alarm was given, but neighbours flocked to the spot, and, after a hard fight, succeeded in subduing the flames.

A GREAT ENGINEERING FEAT.

The completion of the new railway from the Indus as far as Sibi, on the road to Quettah, is a notable instance of what can be accomplished by engineering skill and energy in these times. Brother Jonathan boasted much formerly because he had made a certain portion of the Pacific Railway at the rate of a mile every twenty-four hours. On the present occasion we have beaten that great performance easily, the railroad to Sibi having been constructed at the average rate of a mile and a third per diem since it was first taken in hand. Sibi lies due east of Dadur, the most important town on the old road between Shikarpoor and Quettah. The line was taken to the eastward to avoid certain obstacles, and to obtain a good starting-point whence to run it on to Quettah. Only some seventy or eighty miles remain to be completed before it reaches our cantonments at the latter place, and we may therefore reasonably expect, as the plant is all in readiness, that the steam horse will astonish the Khelatees by the middle of March. We believe the line in its present condition is but lightly ballasted, and that a good deal remains to be done before it will be available for the transport of troops. But it will serve sufficiently well to bring up rails and materials for completing the Sibi-Quettah portion, thus saving time and expense. The total cost of the railway is estimated at two and a half millions sterling, but we should be inclined to doubt whether that sum will provide it with sufficient rolling stock. Fortunately, the finances of India promise so well that, should nothing untoward happen between this and the end of the financial year, the surplus will cover expenditure on the railway up to that date. When the line once gets into thorough working order, it ought to find considerable traffic passing over it. The bulk of the large trade between Central Asia and India will assuredly choose this route in preference to that through Cabul and the Kyber, when once it becomes known that a railway terminus exists in the Khelat State. If, however, we may trust current talk in India, the line is to be continued to Candahar itself, and, in that case, the western capital of Afghanistan would be likely to completely supercede the eastern as a commercial centre.

CHURCH DEBT.

The following lines were sent to Mr. S. Carsley, the well known dry goods merchant of Montreal, by a clergyman of that city. Mr. Carsley has strong faith in the value of printers' ink, and is a large and persistent advertiser. He has been filling up his advertising space in the Montreal papers with strong condemnations against the mercantile agencies, and is now turning his attention to the more serious subject of church debts. The lines are worth reading:—

AIR:—"Sing a Song of Sixpence."

Sing a song of dollars,
Only very few
Coming for the church debt
From the wealthy pew;
When the book is opened,
Someone there will see
That the house we boasted
[illegible]

Someone asks, "Who did it?"
No one will expose;
What is on the debit,
No one will disclose;
Carsley's bound to find it,
If it takes a year;
Keep a steady outlook
Till he makes it clear.

You, that would make money,
Like an honest man,
Take a hint, my honey,
Follow out this plan—
Give no person credit,
Make them pay the cash;
Those who do not do it,
Surely go to smash.

Let us have the churches
Pay their honest debts,
Keeping them but [illegible]
Desolate and frets,
Worrying church officials,
How to make display,
Meet the load of interest,
Sweep the debts away.

Give us cosy buildings,
Neither long nor "loud,"
Let us have them roomy,
Gather in the crowd,
Don't go mad a painting,
This will prove a curse,
Set good spirits fainting
Make the bad but worse.

Don't go in for music
Like a concert hall,
Let Jehovah's praises
Rise from one and all.
Show us your religion
Through and through the week,
Such a man "in meeting"
Is the man to speak.

No one praises brilliants
Made of Frenchy paste
Set us an example
By your quiet taste;
Rest in your apparel,
"As your purse can buy,"
Not expressed in fancy
For the vulgar eye.

Decent and in order,
Let your maxim be,
Don't forget the mandate—
Rise, and "follow Me!"
Shun a church sensation
Calmly, day by day,
Show a quiet fervor,
But without display.

TAKING A CHILD'S BRAIN.

An Extraordinary Instance of Imprudence.

A case of remarkable memory, of great folly and atrocious cruelty, is brought to my knowledge. There is no doubt that the facts are as you will be prepared, when you have read them, to believe that the party in fault deserves severe censure, and perhaps punishment. But the case ought to be made public as a warning to teachers and parents and children.

In a class of one of our Sabbath Schools was a little girl of fine promise, bright, studious, serious, and fond of the school and the Bible, which she read with attention. She was in the habit of committing large portions of it to memory, and reciting them with fluency and correctness. This led her teacher to encourage the child, exciting her pride and ambition, as well as fostering the idea that nothing was too hard for her to accomplish. A few weeks ago the teacher proposed to the girl to commit to memory the proper names in the Bible so as to repeat them at one recitation!!!

Anything more absurd, more foolish, and more cruel in the way of a Sabbath-school lesson, it would be hard to invent. No possible benefit could be derived from the knowledge were it obtained. What good would it do for a minister or anybody else to be able to repeat all the names of men, women, cities, countries, rivers and peoples mentioned in the Bible? If the child had a concordance of the Scriptures, in which all these words are arranged as in a dictionary, she could work at them more readily than by taking them as they stand in the Bible itself. But it is quite likely that it would aid the memory to the use of the text of the Bible, and have the association with chapter and verses. I am not informed as to the mode in which she undertook to work out the useless task. But she came to her class as usual, and the pious teacher, taking the Bible in hand, listened and watched, while the little martyr stood up bravely to the torture and went through it from beginning to end! And swooned away. On recovery she was led home to her mother, a pitiable, perhaps ruined child.

Now I have no words of indignation adequate to express the censure which this injudicious teacher deserves for inflicting such a task upon a child, or permitting her to undertake it, or even allowing her to repeat the result of it. It may be that the teacher will say the child proposed it, or performed it of her own choice without being told to do it. But it is of little moment whether this particular task was self-imposed or not, the girl was made a martyr to her memory, being encouraged in these feats until she taxed her brain to a degree that will probably result in life-long weakness, if not early death. It would have been quite as wise, Christian and kind, to have put the child in a walking-match, to see if she could walk six days running. The physical strain would soon show for itself the injury done, and the victim would be rescued. The mental strain does not appear in the suffering until the task is accomplished, and then comes the reaction, revealing the fatal effects of the folly and sin.

In Sabbath schools, as a general rule, the child's memory is not employed as much as it should be. Instead of, or in connection with, answers to questions in a book, every child ought to repeat six verses of Holy Scripture every Sabbath day. This may be easily attained by the admirable habit of learning one verse every day in the week, reviewing and repeating them all on Sabbath morning, and then going with them to the school, there to be recited to the teachers. These verses thus treasured will be more precious than rubies as long as life lasts. In this way I learned in childhood some of the Psalms that are now like pearls. "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," was one of them; the 23rd Psalm, and the 103rd, were also learned in the same way, and—mark this—what portions of Scripture I did not learn then, I have never learned! The study of the Bible since has doubtless made me acquainted more and more with its meaning, its breadth and depth and power; but when I would repent, or seek communion with the author, or would soar into regions of divine contemplation, the portions of God's word that were ingrafted before I was 12 years old, refresh me as did the old oaken bucket that hung in the well, when, a heated and wearied boy, I took its waters on my parched lips. Sweet as, yea, sweeter than the honey-comb are words that have lived in memory half a century, while they who taught me are with David and Mary in the kingdom of glory. It would be a blessed reaction and reform if our Sabbath schools would encourage and require every scholar to commit to memory six verses of the Bible every week. But, that does not mitigate the folly of the teacher who puts upon a child the absurd task of learning to repeat by rote the proper names of the Bible!

Have mercy on the children. Spare their infant brains the labour of holding what is of no value, and may greatly injure them. When I see children on the street taking home their books, maps, &c., after 5 or 6 hours in school, I am tempted to complain of their teachers and parents to that useful institution for the "Prevention of Cruelty to Children." It is very well to invade the circus and theatre and rescue acrobats and ballet dancers; it is very well to stop Italian beggar boys from following monkeys and organ-grinders; but better and humaner [illegible] of mothers and others to the sinful folly of overloading the young mind with the lore of books, when what they more need is beef and fresh air.

And if the S. P. C. C. will arrest and punish the Sunday school teacher whose indiscretion inspires this epistle, I will pay the expenses of the prosecution.—Irenæus in N. Y. Observer.

BUSINESS LAWS IN DAILY USE.

The following compilation of business laws contains the essence of a large amount of legal verbiage:—

If a note is lost or stolen, it does not release the maker; he must pay it, if the consideration for which it was given, and the amount, can be proven.

Notes bear interest only when so stated.

Principals are responsible for the acts of their agents.

Each individual in a partnership is responsible for the whole amount of the debts of the firm, except in cases of special partnership.

Ignorance of the law excuses no one.

An agreement without a consideration is void.

A note made on Sunday is void.

Contracts made on Sunday cannot be enforced.

A note made by a minor is void.

A contract made with a minor is void.

A note obtained by fraud or from a person in a state of intoxication, cannot be collected.

It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

Signatures made with a lead pencil are good in law.

A receipt for money is not always conclusive.

The acts of one partner bind all the rest.

"Value received" should always be written in a note, but it is not necessary.

No consideration is efficient in law if it be illegal in its nature.

Checks or drafts must be presented for payment without unreasonable delay, and during business hours.

A note endorsed in blank is transferable, by delivery, the same as if made payable to bearer.

If the time of payment of a note is not inserted, it is held payable on demand.

If a letter containing a protest of non-payment be put in the post-office, any miscarriage does not affect the party giving notice.

Notice of protest may be sent, either to the place of business, or to the residence of the party notified.

The loss of a bill or note is not sufficient excuse for not giving notice of protest.

If two or more partners are jointly liable on a note or bill, due notice to one of them is sufficient.

An endorsement may be written on the face or back.

An endorser may prevent his own liability to be sued by writing "without recourse," or similar words.

All claims that do not rest upon a judgment must be sued within six years from the time when they arise.

An oral agreement must be proved by evidence, a written one proves itself.

Joint payees of a bill or note, who are not partners, must not join in an endorsement.

"Acceptance" applies to bills and not to notes.—Chronicle Whitmore.

COL. SIR CHARLES K. PEARSON, K. C. M. G., C.B., late 3rd Buffs, the hero of Ekowe, will, it is said, succeed to the command of the Belfast District, vacated by Brigadier-General Sir E. Wood.

FORTY tenants on the Conyngham estate in Clare have applied to the Land Court for permission to purchase their holdings, under the Bright course. The total of the purchase money will be £30,000.

ON Jan. 10th, a farmer living near Kilfenora, Clare, was stopped near Ennis by two men armed with guns, who threatened to shoot him if he took any land lately surrendered by Lord Inchiquin's tenants. He is unable to identify the men.

A threatening notice has been nailed to the door of the bailiff on Mr. Nicholson's estate, near Belleek, county Armagh. A hole was dug at the rear of his house, and lying on a mound at the side was the notification: "This is your grave."

ON Jan. 12th, J. Persse Groom, Esq., the oldest Justice of the Peace in the county, died at Parsonstown. The deceased attained the patriarchal age of ninety-nine years, and was universally respected throughout the district. He was moving about up to a short time ago.

A PROJECT has been set on foot to improve Wicklow Harbor, and from the way in which it has been taken up by the local bodies, and the support it is sure to receive from the various landed proprietors of the country, it is likely to result in the greatest success. It appears that Mr. Strype estimates the cost of the whole work at £50,000, half of which the Government would give a free grant of, the other half to be borrowed.

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

SATURDAY, Feb. 7.—The market to-day has been an unsatisfactory one. There were few purchasers for even the small supply of the general commodities. The sleighing was anything but good this morning, and wheeling was equally bad or worse. Hence farmers were not disposed to make the journey; and as it turned out they were wise in not venturing on account of the lack of purchasers. The bulk of the offerings consisted of beef, which appeared in abundant supply, far beyond the requirements, and much of it had to be taken home again. Some fine quality of beef, hind quarters sold at $5.00 per cwt., while the price may be quoted at $3.50 for the fore quarter and $4.50 for the hind quarter. Several fine hogs were brought in to-day and $6.00 per cwt. was paid for them. Corned beef sold at 5 to 7c. per lb. Mutton was in light demand at 5 to 6c. per lb. Turkeys were offered at $1.00 each, large and fine, but found no takers at that figure. They were sold from 60cts. to 90cts. each. Butter in kegs sold at 18c.; roll at 18c. to 19c. Eggs were plentiful far in excess of the demand, and sold at 14c. to 15c. per dozen. Tallow, 5c. per lb. Hay and wood steady. Potatoes, no change to note; the supply was equal to the demand; 60c. to 65c. per bag was paid. There were no apples in. No poultry was offered. Oats have become a bone of contention and the price was run up to 35c. The disposition of some of the grain buyers to control the market and grab everything, compels them to pay prices which are ruinous to the party purchasing. The excitement to-day became very great and at one time it was thought blows would be struck, however, up to noon no serious outbreak occurred. Wheat went wild while the fight went on, and as high as $1.20 was paid for spring, while the market could not stand an advance above $1.15. Fall wheat, $1.18. Peas suffered through the same cause; 63c. was paid for several lots. 10,000 hand-made shingles were offered at $1.50 per thousand.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

T. V. C.

Mr. Stark, C. E., is again in town with the view of making investigation on behalf of the Dominion Government into the water supply for the Trent Valley Canal.

Market Excitement.

Great excitement was created in the street market among the commission buyers and some very sharp words passed. At one time a collision was imminent, but happily the better judgment prevailed, and we have no bloodshed to chronicle.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Fresh to brisk northerly to westerly winds; gradually clearing colder weather. Peterborough, morning, snow storm lasting several hours; wind westerly, and the thermometer indicating at 8 o'clock 16°, at 10 o'clock 22°, and at noon 26°, and clear weather.

The California Minstrels.

Last evening the California Minstrels performed in Bradburn's Hall to an audience which would have been larger but for the rival attractions of the skating masquerade. The singing was very good, one quartette with a chorus, in particular, being excellent. They have a very strong company, and the instrumental playing, dancing and acting were also all of a high character. Cool Burgess, the prince of the burnt cork artists, was as usual inimitable with with his acting, singing and stump oratory. He says that be has performed in only three halls in this continent that equal ours in their acoustic properties.

MADOC.

OCHRE.—Specimens of red and yellow ochre from the Wallbridge mines in this township were sent to-day to Messrs. Clark & Co., chemists, Belleville, where they will be placed on exhibition. This article is in great demand as a fire-proof paint, and we are informed the supply at the above mines appears inexhaustible.

LINDSAY.

SUPERINTENDENT OF LOCKS, DAMS, SLIDES, ETC.—The Post says:—We understand Mr. Thomas Walters has been appointed to the position of superintendent of locks, dams, slides, etc., in connection with the provincial public works on the Trent, Scugog, Gull river and other northern waters. The appointment is an excellent as well as a popular one. Mr. Walters is a man of practical ability and experience and thoroughly understands the nature of the work to which he has been assigned. He has, in fact, had supervision in a temporary way of many of these locks, but the importance of the interests concerned renders a permanent appointment advisable. The estimates mention a salary of $1,200.

EQUALIZATION APPEALS BOARD.—The County Council have appointed Mr. E. D. Orde a member of the board for hearing and entertaining appeals against the equalization of assessment.

LIGHT BREAD.—The police have been making a raid upon the bakers and seized a number of light loaves.

ENGLAND.

In the Court of Arches, the Dean suspended from his office for two years the Rev. E Miller, vicar of Harlow, Essex. The defendant is eighty-three years of age, and has occupied his benefice for a long time. Latterly he has drunk port wine freely between the morning and afternoon service, without taking food, with the result that his manner of conducting the afternoon service created great scandal. As he had refused the offer of a friend to provide him with a curate, and had declined to resign, the parishioners were compelled to institute the proceedings which have ended in his suspension.

THE SKATING CARNIVAL

SECOND MASQUERADE OF THE SEASON AT THE SKATING RINK.

A Brilliant Display of Costumes—Professor Williams' Skating Exhibitions—The Amateur Skating Prize.

The second Skating Carnival of the season came off at the Peterborough Curling and Skating Rink on Friday, Feb. 6th, and proved to be a great success. In the afternoon Prof. Thos. A. Williams, of New York City, gave a skating exhibition in the presence of a number of ladies and gentlemen, including his most difficult figures, receiving the hearty applause of the entire assemblage.

THE EVENING GATHERING.

To say that the Carnival was a success would but partially convey the meaning. It was a success in every way. At an early hour the doors were thronged with people waiting their time to get tickets, and for an hour the doorkeepers were kept busy receiving tickets and scrutinizing the arrivals. Before 8 o'clock the lobby and promenade balcony were thronged with spectators.

THE ICE.

The ice was in fair condition. The close following of the Carnival upon the Bonspiel rendered it impossible to fill up breaks caused by the curlers, otherwise it would have been as fine as at any time during the season.

THE DECORATIONS.

The decorations were the same as for the bonspiel with a single exception. The gas main had been thawed out and there was a clearer flow of gas, giving a great brilliancy to the rink. The Chinese lanterns were hung higher than at the previous carnival, which was a decided improvement.

THE ARRANGEMENTS.

The arrangements for the comfort of the audience, as well as of the skaters, were improved, and every one who was present on the former occasion quickly noticed the change. All were pleased with the management.

ARRIVAL OF THE SKATERS.

The skaters in masks and costumes began to arrive at seven o'clock, but not in such numbers as was desired until at half-past seven, when the rink began to fill rapidly, and by eight o'clock there were a large number of skaters flitting to and fro upon the ice.

PROF. THOS. A. WILLIAMS.

It having been decided by the management to defer the skating exhibition until all had arrived, the ice was given to the merry skaters until near eight o'clock, when Prof. Williams, of New York City, the champion skater of America, appeared and gave a portion of his programme. The promenade balcony had by this time become crowded with spectators.

THE PRIZE CONTEST.

The first part of the prize contest was then proceeded with under the guidance of the Professor, who led off the figures as they were called out by Mr. Jas. F. Dennistoun, President of the Curling and Skating Rink Company. The following gentlemen entered for the contest:—Mr. G. Geddes, of Millbrook, Messrs. E. J. Hartley, H. Thompson, Wm. P. Shaw, and Chas. Shaw, of Peterborough. A half-hour was devoted to this part of the programme, when the ice was given up to the general skaters.

THE COSTUMED SKATERS.

The Company being now all assembled, the rink presented a picturesque appearance. The ladies were out in full force, and many of them were very richly dressed. The various styles and colors of the dresses, together with the decorations, and the flitting to and fro of the many really elegant skaters formed a delightful panoramic view.

RESUMPTION OF THE CONTEST.

After a half-hour had been given to the skaters, the ice was again cleared, when the prize skating contest was resumed, the Professor again leading off with some very difficult feats, which were attempted by the contestants with considerable success, many of the figures being loudly applauded by the spectators. These figures were followed by movements according to individual preference, before the Judge's stand, while the managers opened the curling rinks, which were speedily taken possession of by the skaters. This added greatly to the beauty of the scene.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE AWARDS.

Mr. Joseph Meagher, of Montreal, the Rev. V. Clementi, Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, Dr. Boucher and Mr. G. E. Shaw acted as Judges, and having determined who were entitled to receive the prizes, called upon the chairman, the Rev. V. Clementi, to announce the same.

Miss Dollie Ulyot,—first prize, dressed in a coat of mail representing "Joan of Arc."

Miss Georgina Burnham,—second prize, dressed as the "Snow Shoe Club Girl."

THE SKATING PRIZE CONTEST.

Mr. G. Geddes, first prize; Mr. E. J. Hartley, second prize; Mr. H. Thompson, third prize.

RACE PRIZES.

The following prizes were awarded in the racing contests:—hurdle race, Harry Connors; wheelbarrow race, Morty Huston; barrel race, John Harvey.

THE COSTUMES.

Besides the ladies receiving the prizes for costume, the following were especially worthy of mention:—"Spanish Lady," "Little Blonde in Blue," "DAILY EVENING REVIEW," "Japanese Lady," "Mary, Queen of Scots," "Iceberg," the "Quakeress;" and of the gentlemen, "Red Cross Knight" and "Court Page."

THE FIRE BRIGADE BAND.

The band was out in full force and was early in attendance, giving a fine programme. It is unnecessary to speak of them particularly, as the excellence of their music and the carefulness of their selections are so well known.

CLOSING SCENES.

The company began to disperse at 10 o'clock, seeming reluctant to leave the scenes of the evening's enjoyments. It was almost eleven before the last of the spectators left the building—everyone expressing themselves gratified.

The management deserve great credit for the satisfactory manner in which they performed their several arduous duties.

The boys, who were out in great force, merit praise for their good deportment throughout the carnival.

CONTRARIETIES OF MEDICINE.

There is not a person now in the downhill of life, says Blackwood's Magazine, but who must recollect when the principles now in the ascendant were dominant once before. Half a century ago, say in 1825, a starving system of diet was in fashion and was vaunted as a great secret of preserving and restoring health. "Live on sixpence a day and earn it," was a maxim in universal favor, thought to be potent against the most violent or the most insidious forms of disease. Anon it was discovered that the whole community was being wasted by abstinence, and the cure of all disease involved a generous—nay, a very high—diet; and it was explained to us that we were all starving ourselves. We have now reverted again to the starving system. The lancet, which was in such universal use in the last century, has not yet been reintroduced; but there is no sort of security that it will not reappear as soon as its former reign may be sufficiently forgotten to allow it to come back as a novelty. For fashion, not science, rules everything in medicine. One lucky man with a good name starts away on a task which is oblique to the prevailing mode. His good fortune is noised abroad and the whole pack follows him, shouting his cries and reciting his maxims, until another bold and lucky innovator is able to turn the current once more and lead off on a new course. Is this a hard judgment on the profession? We think not. But let us consider one of the practices to which we have alluded, and ascertain how it may support or contradict the criticism that we have ventured to pass. Blood-letting, which was a universal practice a century ago, and is altogether discountenanced now, must be either right or wrong. If it is right, then the whole profession is to-day following like a flock of sheep an erroneous and vicious fashion. If it is wrong, still, while it was in the fashion, all followed it without hesitation. If it had only been an accidental error in the career of true science some able and honest men would have lifted up their voice against it. The faculty would have been divided, and truth would at last have prevailed. But there is not the least reason to suppose that, until the fashion had pretty nearly worn itself out, any one doubted the efficacy of blood-letting. All went for it as unanimously as all now oppose it. Nobody was against it then; nobody is for it now. This looks much more like ignorance guided by fashion than like science searching for solid truth. We are aware that the opinion which we have ventured to express has been met by an explanation intended to vindicate the purely scientific practice of medical men in the last century and in this. "Mankind are not the same now," says the apologist, "as they were a hundred years ago. Copious bleeding on almost all occasions was the right thing for constitutions of that day; but modern constitutions require a totally different treatment. Blood-letting was salutary then, but it is decidedly destructive now."

This generation is expected, then, to believe that habitually and copiously to deplete their veins was good for mankind seventy years ago, but that in the present day it is undesirable to deprive a human being of a drop of his blood. Be it remembered that it is not a modification of a practice that is under consideration, but a total reversal of it. It might be intelligible that blood-letting is not as extensively or as profusely required as it was two or three generations ago; but that is not at all the doctrine we are taught. Modern practice is, in regard to blood-letting, diametrically opposed to the practice of the eighteenth century. Does anybody believe we are so entirely unlike our fathers and grandfathers as to require a diametrically opposite treatment to that which was good for them? The whole race cannot have so changed in this remarkable particular. The same defence may be made of the alternative starving and feeding; but can we accept the argument? Was there a radical change in Englishmen's bodies from 1800 to 1840; another from 1840 to 1865; and another from the last date to 1879? If not, why does medicine vacillate so? Two doctors manage to meet each other with steady countenances, and we have no doubt two augurs could always manage to do the same, notwithstanding Cicero's jest on the subject. Men can compose their facial muscles when their bread depends on their doing so. We adopt to-day what we discarded yesterday and esteemed the day before. The lancet will have its turn again without doubt. Some bold man will open a vein and effect a cure. He will vaunt his method, and the profession will run after him. It is in the nature of man to be fond of novelty; more especially is it in the nature of sick men to be eager for change. The invalid can judge of the insufficiency of that which is, and hail with delight something different from the long unsuccessful remedies—something which once more revives the hope of recovery. Thus any practice which has been long enough in abeyance to have been forgotten can be revived and go through another probation, to be again rejected and to be superseded by some other revival, possibly by the very fancy which supplanted it before.

A BY-LAW to amend By-law No. 439, of the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the County of Peterborough, called a By-law to aid and assist the Huron and Quebec Railway Company, etc.

WHEREAS, the Municipal Council of the County of Peterborough on the Eleventh day of November, A.D., 1875, by their By-law No. 439, granted aid to the Huron and Quebec Railway Company, now the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, to the amount of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, subject to certain conditions therein named.

And whereas, Municipal aid to a very large amount has already been voted to aid in the construction of the said railway, but not quite one million of dollars, and it is expedient and desirable to facilitate the said Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company in their efforts to secure the speedy construction of said railway, notwithstanding that the said Company has not, and shall not have received aid by way of Municipal bonuses, to the extent of one million of dollars, as in the Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth clauses of the said by-law No. 439 mentioned and provided for.

Be it therefore enacted by the Corporation of the County of Peterborough, and it is hereby enacted, that By-law No. 439 aforesaid, be and the same is hereby amended by striking out clauses Six, Seven, and Eight, and by substituting in subsection "c" of Section Ten, the words Town of Peterborough for the words "City of Toronto."

The said Company shall erect at the Town of Peterborough workshops of a capacity for, and shall thereat employ constantly not less than one-half of the mechanics and hands employed in the shops of said railway in the Town of Peterborough and the City of Ottawa and between these points, before they shall be entitled to payment of the debentures or monies last payable under the by-law aforesaid.

And it is declared and enacted that the said by-law number 439, as hereby varied and amended, shall be and is in full force and effect, notwithstanding the other municipalities therein mentioned may not vote or may not have voted aid to the said Company to the amount of one million of dollars, and notwithstanding any other municipality or municipalities may not have passed by-laws giving aid to said Company, as in said by-law No. 439 provided.

This by-law shall come into force on the first day of July, A.D. 1880.

That the Clerk of the Council of the said County of Peterborough shall sum up the number of votes given for and against this by-law at his office, at the Town of Peterborough, at the hour of Eleven o'clock in the forenoon of the twenty-eighth day of February, A.D. 1880.

That the appointment of persons to attend at the various polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk respectively on behalf of the persons interested in opposing or promoting the passage of this by-law respectively, will take place at the office of the said Clerk of the County of Peterborough, in the said Town of Peterborough, at the hour of Eleven o'clock in the forenoon of the Fourteenth day of February, A.D. 1880.

THE CARNIVAL.

REFUSING RELIEF.

Boston, Feb. 7.—The report of the meeting of the Balla (Mayo) Tenants' Defence Association is entirely correct. Messrs. Egan, O'Sullivan and Biggar were not present. The Herald's informant, who is the correspondent of the Dublin Times and Freeman's Journal, was present and took part in the meeting. Both the Times and Freeman of the 20th say that about a hundred almost starving heads of families attended the meeting and made application for relief, as it was rumoured that some money had been received by the Land League. Mr. J. A. Walshe, the president, being informed that rent had been paid by many of the applicants, proposed that no relief should be granted them. This was carried by a majority. The report was published in the newspapers throughout the Kingdom from January 29th, and has remained uncontradicted to the present moment. The same reporter, telegraphing to-day, says that the Balla report is correct. John Radeff, tenant of Sir Robert Blosse, applied to the committee for relief. Mr. Walshe asked if he had paid rent, and being informed that he had paid it, Mr. Walshe proposed that no relief be granted in consequence of his rent having been paid. This was adopted by the committee unanimously.

THE DISTRESS SUBSIDING.

Dublin, Feb. 9.—The past week has added but little to the evidence of extreme distress, while it has largely augmented resources of the Relief Committees and the provisions of the Government. The beneficial effect of the grants of the Relief Committees is seen in the quieter tone of the press, and the cessation of the cry of alarm. There are still deplorable accounts from some districts, but generally a more hopeful spirit prevails. The extent to which the landowners have embraced the opportunity of obtaining loans on easy terms is a sufficient proof that the supposed barrier of red tape has not been thought insurmountable. In the past week the number of new applications has reached 300 and the amount applied for £111,000, which makes an aggregate of £376,000 since the 22nd of November.

The recent cold snap has removed all apprehensions of an ice famine along the Hudson.

OFFICES FOR BRIBES.

A Washington special report to the Times quotes Sherman's recent statement, in which he denies that he promised offices to secure delegates, and says that this statement made by the Secretary of the Treasury is absolutely false, and that when he made it he knew it to be absolutely false is very conclusively proved by the following fact. The Times then gives details of conservations alleged to have taken place with Sherman and his alleged agents, which, it is claimed, prove this assertion.

DECLINING A DUEL.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 9.—A correspondence is published between W. C. Elam, editor of the Whig, and Charles W. Button, editor of the Lynchburg Virginian, which is the sequel to a recent controversy between the two papers. Elam challenged Button to fight a duel, but the latter refused on moral grounds, saying he considered his life worth more than Elam's.

SAW MILL BURNED.

Ft. Edward, N.Y., Feb. 9.—Bradley & Underwood's steam saw mill is burned. The loss is $30,000. The fire was probably incendiary.

LONGSHOREMEN'S WAGES.

New York, Feb. 9.—Three steamship lines on the East River employed new longshoremen at 20 cents per hour, and informed the old employees that they would be paid 40 cents no longer. The old longshoremen struck and the new ones are working under police protection.

THE BOYD-ELLIOTT RACE.

Boyd the Winner—His Estimate of the Canadian Champion.

Press Despatches to the Review via Cable and Montreal Lines.

BOYD WINS EASILY.

London, Feb. 9.—Boyd won his race with Elliott easily.

FOUR LENGTHS AHEAD.

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Feb. 9.—The race between the scullers Elliott and Boyd for £200 a side over the Tyne championship course was won easily by the latter, who was four lengths ahead of Elliott. The betting was 5 to 4 on Boyd.

OUR CHAMPION'S POWERS.

London, Feb. 9.—Boyd and Elliott, the two English cracks, will row on the Tyne to-day for a stake of £200 a side, and it is probable that Hanlan will have to meet the winner. The betting at Newcastle on Saturday night was 6 to 4, and as high as 13 to 8, on Boyd, who is in better trim than ever he was before in his life. Both men, however, are very confident, but as far as can be seen Boyd's chances are certainly the best. Elliott has quite recovered from his illness, and has been doing good work, although as a matter of fact he is not, although he says he is, rowing faster than when the Canadian champion beat him so easily in June last. In an interview to-day, Boyd said he thought he would win, but that it would be a barren victory, as he could not hope to wrest the championship from Hanlan, who, he said, "can outrow any two of us mile for mile in a two mile race, or any three of us in a six-mile race, each of the three to row two miles against him." The race to-day will be rowed over the regular Tyne course.

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY.

THE VIGILANCE COMMITTEES—THEIR ORGANIZATIONS AND ACTIONS.

The Bad Record of the Donnelly's—A Blood-thirsty Woman—Action of the Authorities—A Lawless District.

THE VIGILANTES.

LUCAN, Feb. 7.—There was somewhat of a commotion late this afternoon in the neighbourhood of the brick school house, at the intersection of the 8th and 9th concessions of Biddulph, the place of meeting of the Vigilance Committee. It seems that heretofore they have made this school house their rendezvous, and from the number of men seen congregated there this afternoon it was supposed they were about holding a meeting, for what purpose of course could not be divined, unless it was for making provision for the defence of the thirteen prisoners now in London goal. Those who seem to be pretty well posted here have very little faith in the power of the authorities to get evidence sufficiently strong to convict the prisoners, because it is now an acknowledged fact that this Vigilance Committee was a secret society, bound together with the most terrible oaths to protect each other. This I learned this afternoon from a party who had an interview with one of the prisoners, who seems to be weakening, and may split at any moment in order to save himself. He states that the Society used to lock the door, and, having assured themselves that no enemy was present, transacted business without a chairman or secretary, and consequently each member was equally responsible and liable. When it was necessary to come to a vote on any question they counted hands, but made no record of their proceedings, fearing that it might fall into unfriendly hands.

RUMOURS.

The Chief of Police of London and the County Crown Attorney, Mr. Hutchinson, of that city, returned to the village this afternoon for the purpose of making arrangements for hauling in a few more Committeemen to-morrow. It is hinted that half a dozen have yet to be captured, but the time for their arrest has not yet arrived. To-morrow or next day may develop something further of importance. It was reported that the prisoners would not be brought back from London to the inquest, which commences at noon on Wednesday, but I learned to-night that they willall be brought back for that purpose. This is the legal way of transacting the business, which will then be before the Coroner, and the authorities will not shrink from their duty in this respect. Hints have been thrown out that in case the prisoners were brought here on Wednesday an attempt will be made to rescue them, but Chief Constable Williams is not a man to be trifled with, and will take the necessary precautions to hold in security his prisoners. In case of a disturbance he will have a sufficient force close at hand to overpower any turbulent spirits in the neighborhood. It was supposed that he and the Crown Attorney would remain here all night, but they returned to London at a late hour. Some apprehension is felt here that the bottom has not yet been reached and that the committeemen have not finished their work, and many residents of this village hint at the probability of a couple of other victims in case a favourable opportunity should present itself. Naturally enough, people mysteriously point at the unfortunate Wm. Donnelly as being in a dangerous position, inasmuch as he was the party whom the committeemen intended to despatch when they shot his brother John. He has taken precautions for safety, however, and does not run unnecessary risk. It is expected that there will be at least four important witnesses at the coroner's inquest, and it is just possible that the evidence may be strong enough to cause some of the principals to weaken and turn Queen's evidence, in order to escape the vengeance of the law.

THE VIGILANCE COMMITTEE OF '76.

Having heard a great deal of talk concerning the "hanging up" of the man Richardson by the Vigilance Committee of 1876, a Mail reporter conversed with one of the members of that committee, who freely discussed the matter, but desired that his name should be withheld.

"Is it true," asked the reporter, "that Richardson was really taken from his house in Lucan by the Vigilance Committee, and strung up to a tree until he confessed to several robberies and other such offences?"

"Yes; I think it is true, although many in the village doubt that such a thing actually occurred. I was a member of that committee, but I can assure you I had no hand in 'dancing' Richardson."

"Some ten or a dozen members of the Committee were, I believe, arrested for having been concerned in the affair?"

"Why, I was one of the unfortunates myself. We were not actually under arrest, but were summoned to appear at London to answer the charge. I will tell you the whole circumstances. In 1876 affairs were pretty bad in Lucan; barns, stables and houses were burnt, and robberies were committed nearly every night. Suspicion rested on this Richardson, who was said to be in with the Donnelly gang. He was taken from his house, and strung up to a tree for the purpose, if possible, of getting from him the names of the actual perpetrators. As I said before, I was not there; and, therefore, I cannot give you the full and true particulars. Not that I should have any compunction about helping to pull the rope, for I tell you we were a leetle desperate just about that time. Richardson is said to have confessed, and he was lowered to the ground and allowed to go home. Bill Donnelly was told of the work of the Committee, and he went to London and gave information against twelve or fourteen of the principal people of the village, whom he suspected of having maltreated his chum. At the London assizes he failed to appear and give evidence, and we were all discharged. I don't think any of the persons called on to answer the charge were guilty of the offence, as the affair was kept a profound secret by those who worked the job. Richardson left the village shortly after the rope adventure, and since that time we have been comparatively quiet here. That Vigilance Committee was disbanded.

THE DONNELLYS DESCRIBED.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 7.—Chief McKinnon describes the Donnellys as fine looking, muscular men, with an air of cool desperation that awes at first sight. They may be the worst of the Biddulph gang, but they are not the only criminals in that neighborhood. Their mother was a woman of masculine will. She once told the chief that not until each of her sons had murdered his man could she die in peace. She was "on the war path" for several days after the arrest of her boys, looking for McKinnon, and vowing vengeance at first sight. Jno. Donnelly, who was shot it is supposed in mistake for William was not the harmless creature he has been represented. The chief considers him equal to the rest in crime, but less demonstrative.

A BAD RECORD.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—In the official returns of the administration of justice for the quarter beginning 1st of January and ending 31st of March, 1876, I find the Queen vs. William, James, John and Thomas Donnelly, on among others, the following charges:—Misdemeanour, assault and doing grievous bodily harm, and shooting with intent. In that quarter the amount paid the County, including the amount payable by the Government for the one item of witnesses in these cases against the Donnellys, was $693.65.—This is exclusive of all the costs incurred for constables' attendance, preliminary hearings, &c. The expense of the administration of justice on account of that lawless faction in Biddulph in the last four or five years has been at least $1,800.

THE JURY DISAGREE.

Not an uncommon occurrence—nor, when it occurs, should it be unexpected. Questions usually referred to juries are such as in civil cases the parties interested are not able to agree upon themselves, and in both civil and criminal are usually covered with masses of conflicting evidence of persons who are willing, perhaps, but unable to see the same things in the same light. And what is the edict of the law? It says you shall see alike, no matter what your organization, your power of sifting evidence, your ability to judge of the trustworthiness of witnesses from their general appearance, or to reject the sophistries and special pleadings of the attorneys. The law says you must and shall think as the men on your right and on your left think, or failing to do so, you shall be kept as prisoners during the pleasure of the Court, which has the power to confine you day and night without fire or food, or without beds or bedding, or even comfortable places to sit, until you force your conscience to such a point as to be willing to tell a lie in the cause of justice (!) and say one thing when in your inmost soul you believe another.

He who writes this has sinned with the rest, and from his experience in a jury-room is of the belief that not one verdict in ten gives the true opinion of one-half of the jurors. Verdicts in civil cases are usually the results of compromises, especially where damages or other money awards enter into them. All who know about them are well aware that it is not unusual to take the sum each juror thinks right and proper, add them together and divide them by 12, to arrive at a just and legitimate conclusion, on the ground that the average of the opinions is likely to be nearer right than that of any one, and on that ground individuals excuse themselves from receding from their conscientiously formed beliefs. In criminal cases where the verdict must be guilty or not guilty, it might seem that an agreement would be more easily reached. But this is not so; there is in the mind of every man a fear of doing an injustice that cannot be undone. The Court instructs that the prisoner shall have the benefit of any doubt. Much, if not all, of the evidence of guilt must be circumstantial, and circumstances which to one would seem to be overwhelming proof, to another are not worth a moment's consideration, and both are equally sincere and honest. It is not the possibility of their nature to see things alike—but the law says they must. Sometimes they defy the law and remain in a state of disagreement until the Court discharges them, leaving the case in the same condition as before the trial commenced.—Rural New Yorker.

SCOTLAND.

"CANADA and the North-West" was the subject of a lecture delivered by Lord Elphinstone in the Musselburgh Town Hall on the 13th January.

IT is announced that about half of the creditors of the City of Glasgow Bank have fallen in with the arrangement whereby they could receive at once their principal without interest.

THE police, on breaking into the house of a woman in Kinning Park, who had not been seen by her neighbors for some days, found her lying dead beside her bed, with ears, lips and face eaten by rats.

ON the 12th January, at Airdrie, two colliers, named Wm. and Alex. Leckie, and Alex. Miller, were severely burned by an explosion of gunpowder which was caused by opening a flask of powder in mistake for tea.

ONE of the most successful blasts which ever took place in the district was fired on the 15th Jan. at the Bonawe Granite Quarries. About four tons of powder were used, and the quantity of rock removed was immense.

IT has been decided by Sheriff Orr Paterson, at Ayr, that lost property found in a railway carriage by a passenger is, if unclaimed, the property of the person who found it, not of the company in whose carriage it was found.

BARBARA IRVINE, North Dyke, Sandwick, when on her way home from Stromness, on the 17th January, missed the road, and in the darkness must have walked over the craigs in the neighbourhood, her body being found next morning fearfully mangled.

ON the 17th January, in a certain church in Aberdeen, the clergyman intimated that the collection on a previous Sunday had amounted to 17s. and a peppermint lozenge. Probably, the minister said, the person who put in the peppermint lozenge intended to give a sixpence or a shilling; but, at all events, on application at the vestry, he could have his confection returned.

THOSE who know Lord Rosebery, and his calm precision in the calculation of results, never feared that he would take the responsibility of taking Mr. Gladstone to Mid Lothian without making his election a certainty. As a set-off to 160 faggot votes created by the Duke of Buccleuch he has, as if by a sudden touch of enchantment, thrown up a 160 cottages near Dalkeith, on the Tyne side, to house 160 workingmen and add 160 to the Liberal constituency. The work was pushed on in a few weeks in a most picturesque and energetic manner, for contractors taking each 80 tenements, and a force of 500 masons, bricklayers, labourers, and so forth, relieving each other in relays night and day.

THE PASSION FOR BEGGING.

Always Trying to get Something for Nothing.

The Church is in danger of becoming pauperized by this growing disposition to receive rather than to give: to beg rather than to work: to get something for nothing. It is the secret of gambling. The same sentiment is at the root of all the substitutes for Christian charity, or benevolence, with which the Church and society are infested. In this spirit the lottery for religious and literary purposes was invented. By appealing to the covetousness of the people that principle which makes all the thieves, defaulters, forgers and swindlers, it is proposed by a lottery to tempt covetous persons to risk a little money to gain a great sum without paying anything like an equivalent. So when it is proposed to build or enlarge or improve a church building, it is not asked among the people, "Are we willing to pay the expense?" but the question is, "What means can we use to get help outside?" Then begins the begging letter business. As the marriages and deaths mentioned in the newspapers are carefully noted by enterprising tradesmen, and offers of furniture for the living and the dead are instantly tendered, so the mention of a rich man's liberality brings to him hundreds of letters informing him where he may bestow his goods greatly to the satisfaction of his unknown correspondent. The least of this nuisance is the annoyance to which the begged is subjected. He can stand it. Indeed if any man will leave me a million, I will consent to receive a million of begging letters daily. But the evil is done to the writer, the cause, and the Church at large. It is a breach of good manners, showing a want of courtesy, which is divinely commented as a virtue. It is often impertinent and offensive. It is the fruit of laziness, a substitute for hard work and self-denial, which are the conditions of success in business. And it is so largely the resort of cheats and swindlers, that a letter from a stranger is properly looked upon with suspicion as if it is a plea for money.

Yesterday an elegantly dressed lady called upon me to say that a Christian gentleman had been reduced by adversity from wealth to penury, and she wanted me to rouse the Church to come forward and give another fortune to the brother in distress. And she soon told me that she despised such Christianity as would refuse to do it. In vain did I tell her that Christians give according to their ability and views of duty to such objects as their enlightened judgment approves, and I could see no reason why this individual case should be presented to the whole brotherhood of saints. A solid hour of priceless time she stole from me in denouncing such religion as mine, and went away rustling in her silks and decrying the Church.

As it is a well settled rule not to give money to a begging stranger, so it is a judicious rule not to answer a begging letter from a stranger. It ought also to be a rule with every Christian never to write a begging letter to a stranger.

"Ah," you say, "if you knew my necessities, you would not lay down such a rule, but would pardon me for trying to get help from whatever source."

But, dear friend, it is not important that you should have all you want. To be happy, to be well fed and clothed, to have books and riches and friends, are all good things if God gives them in reward of our labor, but they are not the things in which a man's life consists. Enjoyment is very equally distributed among the good, in this world, riches not always increasing it and poverty by no means destroying it. A very good man once learnt to be content in any condition. Whether he abounded or was in want, he knew it was well. His name was Paul. And if the Church had his spirit and that of his Master who had no bed when the universe was at his command, there would be far less begging and far more giving.—Irenaeus in N. Y. Observer.

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know of it for their benefit."

NEIGHBOR JONES.

I'm thinking, wife, of neighbor Jones, the man with the stalwart arm—
He lives in peace and plenty on a forty-acre farm;
When men are all around us with hearts and hands a-sore,
Who own two hundred acres, and still are wanting more.

He has a pretty little farm, a pretty little house:
He has a loving wife within, as quiet as a mouse;
His children play around the door, their father's heart to charm,
Looking just as neat and tidy as the tidy little farm.

No weeds are in the cornfield, no thistles in the oats,
The horses show good keeping by their fine and glossy coats;
The cows within the meadow, resting 'neath the beechen shade,
Learn all their gentle manners from a gentle milking maid.

Within the field on Saturday, he leaves no cradled grain
To be gathered on the morrow for fear of coming rain;
He lives in joy and gladness, and happy are his days;
He keeps the Sabbath holy; his children learn his ways.

He never had a lawsuit to take him to the town,
For the very simple reason there are no fences down;
The bar-room in the village for him has not a charm;
I can always find my neighbor on his forty-acre farm.

His acres are so few that he plows them very deep;
'Tis his own hands that turn the sod, 'tis his own hands that reap;
He has a place for everything, and everything in its place;
The sunshine smiles upon his fields, contentment on his face.

May we not learn a lesson, wife, from prudent neighbor Jones,
And not sigh for what we haven't got—give vent to sighs and groans?
The rich arn't always happy, nor free from life's alarms,
But blest be those who live content, though small may be their farms.

A REMINISCENCE OF OLD MONAGHAN.

THE JAIL.

Bastiles, fortresses, prisons, penitentiaries, reformatories and bridewells, court houses, military and police barracks, are monuments or landmarks in proof of the scriptural doctrine of human depravity. As pure christianity prevails the necessity for them will diminish. We have it on the highest authority, however, that they will be more or less indispensable until the day of judgment. The tares and the wheat will grow together until the harvest, which is the end of the world. Cruelty or undue severity to prisoners was a great wrong, and is abandoned as nations become civilised; severity tempered with mercy has been the best deterrent from crime.

Baron McClelland, a late judge, who often travelled the north-east circuit in Ireland was a terror to evil-doers; by the the severity of his sentences he made future calendars comparatively light.

Leniency to prisoners has been a mistake, by listless idleness or occasional unremunerative employment, they become a burden on the community by purposely committing petty crimes; the reckless and improvident seek such prison life as a relief from the hardships of poverty brought on themselves by misconduct.

Prisons, as far as practicable, should be self-sustaining, in some places they yield a profit. I lately visited one in the city of Detroit, U.S., and was surprised at the classification, regularity and industry of the different trades in the workshops. There is a plausible objection, however, to this kind of employment as it diminishes, to a certain extent, the demand for honest, skilled labor, but it is to a very small extent when we compare the few prisoners so employed with the whole population. Men will reflect before they run the risk of long confinement and unremunerative employment on meagre fare for some temporary gratification. Heavy fines are good deterrents. The best way to punish a man is through his pocket.

I have a distinct recollection of the dismal old jail of Monaghan, the very sight of which was enough to deter hardened sinners from criminal acts; to induce some, known to be halting between two opinions, to pursue an honest course; to put thieves and vagabonds in such dread and fear of its hungry corridors and dingy cells that they became scarce in the town and neighbourhood. Many a man got free passage from it to Botany Bay. Many a man came out of it a worse man than when he went into it, and many a man was dislocated from it to a country from whence no traveller returns. It stood on the site of the present handsome court house, in the then New Diamond (now Church Square) opposite the leading thoroughfare in the centre of the town, an ugly eyesore to the decent citizens and their families, who daily saw repulsive, rioting, thieving characters marched to and from it.

There the ancient fabric used to stand
With Johnny Short in full command,
Well known to rascals far and near,
And every class for many a year.

Without reference to age, sex, nationality, persuasion, politics or position, Johnny gave free entry and the run of the house to all who came in proper company, provided they furnished him with the requisite credentials. The qualifications for admission were undue interferences with life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, the candidates being instigated thereto by the governor of the infernal region. Johnny, with all his cuteness, admitted the wrong man on one occasion. A J.P., residing within a few miles of Monaghan, was looking out of his bedroom early one summer morning, and saw a sneak thief, whom he knew, robbing a clothes hedge. He kept quiet until noon, when he wrote a committal thus:—"Mr. John Short, Jailer, Monaghan: Detain the bearer until further orders." This was duly dated and signed, enclosed in an envelope, sealed and addressed. He then rode carelessly past the domicile of the thief, called him and said: "Peter, here is a letter which I wish you to take to town at once, as it is of importance," at the same time handing him a shilling. "Begorrae, I'll take it with pleasure, yer honor," said Peter, and away he went. When nearing the town he began to smell a rat. He handed the letter and six-pence to a man who he overtook, who kindly consented to deliver it, especially as Peter said he was in a hurry to return to his sick wife. The man gave the letter to Johnny Short, who, in spite of all remonstrances, detained him until the next day, when the J.P. hurried to town and compromised the affair to the satisfaction of the injured man.

Badly ventilated, classified and governed, that old dungeon stood in close proximity to the grave yard, the old parish church, the Wesleyan chapel, and Mr. Kelly's parish school house, reminding passers-by of education, demoralization, death and salvation. The gallows were a hideous spectacle, the big trap-door lying high up against the wall until the night before use, when it was put up. Early on the day of execution a strong detachment of military was drawn up in front of the jail. Thousands of spectators covered the square in their rear, all eyes centered on that horrid trap and grim door. The rope fastened to the beam was drawn in at the edge of the door. Its movement indicated the dreadful work going on inside. Presently the black door slowly opened, and there stood the man in white grave clothes, with a white cap on his head. By his side stood the executioner in disguise; in the background the clergy and sheriff. The man tremblingly stepped out on the trap, which had no railing. Its height, the crowd that met his gaze, the ejaculatory groans that met his ears, his last sight of daylight, the cold rope around his neck, and his anticipations were enough to frighten the life out of a weak-nerved criminal, without the aid of the rope. He muttered a few words, the bolt was drawn, clash went the trap-board against the wall, and the culprit was dangling high up at the end of the rope.

It is well that an end was put to public executions. There were as hardened criminals in such crowds as there were in the jails. I saw a man who had been caught pocket-picking in the crowd marched into jail under the feet of the hanging man. If all the sayings and doings within the walls of Monaghan's old prison from its first occupancy to its close were published, it would be a miscellany fit for a pandemonium. At length, after many condemnatory presentments, it was consigned to demolition. The projectors of the new jail were wise. The site chosen was most eligible, though quite convenient. It was out of the way of business and private dwellings. On the hill overlooking the town, and commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country, a spacious, substantial limestone prison, in semi-circular form, was erected, with a strong, high wall surrounding it. In front there is a sloping lawn and lodge. In the centre of the half circle stands, in one building, the Governor's residence, board room, offices, chapel, school room, &c. Between it and the main buildings there are spacious class yards, or wards, divided by high walls, iron palisadings and gates, the whole erected at a cost of about £50,000 sterling, when labor and material were very cheap. Such a building would be worth one million of dollars in this country. Mr. Lynn was the architect, and a very excellent one he was. There is ample accommodation for hundreds of prisoners. The officers wear a becoming blue uniform. During a few years after the jail was opened, it was fully occupied, three-fourths of the prisoners hailing from a lawless quarter of the county called Farney. The prison uniform was frieze; one side of cap, jacket, vest and trousers grey, the other brown. The crimes, with the exception of those schemed out in lawless meetings, brutal, revengeful and agrarian, were attributed directly or indirectly to whiskey, especiallly illicit whiskey, and stolid ignorance. The only hard labour were the tread mill and stone breaking, in the lazy fashion of sitting on a straw boss with a hammer used by the right hand only. The scale of diet was very low, escapes are almost impossible, and executions have become very few and far between. Jails in Ireland were guarded by soldiers in my boy days, turnkeys have done so for many years past. A few years ago I visited the Monaghan prison in company with two young friends from Canada. The officers were exceedingly obliging, intelligent, and active, especially Mr. Farley, who accompanied us through the building, pointing out and explaining everything worthy of notice. I was astonished at the small number of prisoners in it. Where I used to see 20 or 30 prisoners marched quarterly from Castleblenprey sessions, under strong escorts of police, now, I was told, the jailer brought two or three on a jaunting car or by rail. The causes of such a general jail delivery are attributable to the repeal of the imprisonment for debt law, the advancement of civilization, and improved system of education, the poor laws, a more lively interest taken by landlords in the welfare of their tenantry, by farming societies, an improved system of agriculture, philanthropy of ladies, but especially by the excellent police system by which only a portion of humanity can be held in check.

The Royal Irish Constabulary, about 12,000 strong, is composed of the most intelligent and active young men of Ireland. Uniformed like the Rifle Brigade, distributed under the best regulations in every town, village and hamlet, well paid and pensioned, with as many grades as the army, by their presence, excellent conduct and vigilance, prisons are relieved, and the inhabitants feel secure against marauders. Railways have interfered considerably with jail accommodation, people return from distant markets without being obliged to stop over night in village and wayside public houses, where many a crime was committed, induced by whiskey drinking. Where I saw lines of dray carts (afterwards jaunting cars) each with flour, transport convicts in frieze uniform and fetters, with strong escorts, after each assizes, on their way from the different jails to Dublin for embarkation to Botany Bay, the trains take a few, with very small escorts, to the penitentiaries.

The press of late years has been a powerful aid in the prevention of crime. A comparatively short time since newspapers were confined to cities, and issued weekly. Now they are published in almost every town, in many places daily, catching up every item, warning the unwary, exposing the misconduct of the vicious at petty courts, &c., and with the telegraph, photography detectures, &c., it is almost impossible for the lawless to escape the ends of Justice. The consequence of all is that Monaghan jail, with its few occupants, would make an excellent central prison for at least three counties. I have no hesitation in saying, as I said on a former visit, that Monaghan prison is the most commodious, the cleanest, best classified, best governed, and best situated jail I have seen in Europe or America, and although about 36 years in existence, is still a pattern of prison architecture. The deterrent punishment which I saw inflicted in Monaghan, and which would now appear barbarous in the eyes of the citizens, namely, the stocks and pillory, and whipping at the cart's tail, ceased with the closing of the old jail. The tread-mill has long since been condemned and removed as a useless prison appendage.

Fine weather has a charming effect on people while visiting old Monaghan and the hills, valleys, and parks in its vicinity after an absence of many years. The afternoon was delightful in the end of June, 1876, and the scenery picturesque, varied and extensive, as we sat with ex-Governor Temple and officer Farley in front of the jail lodge, and had a walk over the Mousewood. My son and our friend from Canada, who had never seen Ireland until then, and who had travelled over Great Britain and the continent with me, were particularly pleased with the interior of the jail, the scenery around, and the town of Monaghan. No building in the county has given so much benefit to the inhabitants as the jail. None so entitled to be kept in good order with the best officers, were only one-fourth of its accommodation required. Unlike public buildings, which are only successful where fully occupied on required occasions, the people of the county are most prosperous when the jail has least occupants. Standing prominently on the hill, its presence has a preventing, restraining and deterring influence against crime like a bulwark or monument of safety, it gives a feeling of security, especially to those who are isolated in rural homes, reminding them of the adage, "prevention is better than cure."

When men have received a tolerable education and are treated with humanity as men, no matter how subordinate their position they will not, except in very rare instances, risk confinement in a jail, where thousands of the most villainous offscourings of the earth have passed through, thereby bringing a stigma on themselves and a reproach on their children in after life. "But her father was in jail!" is enough to repulse a young man from her who would make an excellent wife, and vice-versa.

Many a man came out of confinement in Monaghan new jail better than when he went into it, and for his own and his children's sake plucked up courage and brought them to Canada, where I have seen some of them in respectable positions.

Let us fancy the time near when every man will be honest enough to treat his fellow-man as a brother, then jails will not be required, all criminal machinery will stop and people will look back with surprise at the strange anomaly of honest citizens being compelled to contribute largely to the maintenance of the thieves that robbed them, and of vagabonds. A faint idea may be obtained of the expense of prisoners by putting down the amounts for one year of

The maintenance of the prisoners.......................... —
Salaries of the officers of the jail.......................... —
Interest on capital account of buildings, repairs.. —
Insurance, fuel and light of jail and court houses —
Salaries and contingencies, &c., of the R. I. constabulary of the county.......................... —
Salaries of judges, magistrates, sheriffs, crown lawyers and other officers of the courts, messengers, &c.......................... —
Expenses of juries, witnesses.......................... —
Criminal statutes, books, stationery, printing, advertising, postage, express, travelling, telegraph, cartage, &c.......................... —

Add these together, and divide the total by the average number of prisoners for one year, and we will see what a formidable expense one solitary prisoner is to the county.

In a venerable edifice in Monaghan, long since removed, I was first made acquainted with the details of five wonderful prison scenes, viz.: Joseph, Samson, John the Baptist, Peter's escape, and Paul and Silas at Phillippi. Taking the actors and results into consideration, the fifth scene is the most astonishing. Paul having ruthlessly imprisoned so many himself; the fortune teller, her masters, the arrest, beating the prisoners, the dungeon, the stocks, singing praises, the earthquake, the consternation, the jailer's conduct and question, Paul's reply, the baptism, the magistrates, Lydia, letter to the Phillippians, which has encouraged millions on their way to a delightful country where there are no prisons. John Howard, who experienced the hardships of a prison, when taken by a privateer at Brest, did more than any one man for the reformation of prisons. The mission of a greater than Howard has been to assist prisoners in their escape from the thraldom of the worst of all jailers. "To bring out the prisoners out of the prison and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house—to preach deliverance to the captives, and the opening of the prison doors to them that are bound." Of Him the poet says:—

"Jesus the prisoners' fetters breaks
And bruises Satan's head"—

And the released prisoner says:

"Long my imprisoned spirit lay
Fast bound in sin and nature's night;
Thine eye diffused a quickening ray,
I 'woke, the dungeon flam'd with light,
My chains fell off, my heart was free,
I rose, went forth, and followed thee.

IRELAND.

Lord Kenmare has applied to the Board of Works for a loan of £23,000, to be spent on land drainage in the barony of Smale, county Limerick.

John Kane, lately returned from Africa, has been arrested at Castlebar on a charge of defrauding country people while alleging that he was granting relief.

Sir Dominic John Gerrigan, an eminent physician of Dublin, member of Parliament for that city from 1870 to 1874, and Vice-Chancellor of the Queen's University, is dead.

The Marquis of Headfort's agent, Mr. O'Connor, having gone over the farms on the Ardanagh portion of his Lordship's Meath estates, has reported that he found the rents to be too high.

The Irish Treasury has authorized the Board of Works to remove the obstruction and deepen and widen the Shannon at Jamestown and other places, so that drainage may be commenced at the upper part of the river.

"German Syrup."

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthma, Croup, severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them. The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist, and ask what they know about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. dw51-1y

No Such Word as Fail.

The hectic cheek, the sunken eye, the hacking cough, betray the presence of that dire foe—consumption. If one of our friends or relatives is attacked with this disease, there is nothing that we would not do to give them relief, but leading physicians prescribe in vain. The only known remedy and one which stamps the discoverer as a public benefactor is Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. Never, in a large and varied experience, has it been known to fail to give relief, and in most cases permanently cure. w6d201m

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam has a tonic effect on the stomach and the digestive organs, without any injurious effect on the system. It allays irritation of the bronchial tubes and stomach, removing the phlegm from the air cells to the lungs; at the same time healing the inflamed or irritated parts. We have never known it to fail in giving satisfaction, when used according to directions, for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Croup, or any other affection of the throat or lungs leading to Consumption. Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of Scott & Bowne's Palatable Castor Oil. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. Price 25 cents. w6d30

The Largest Farm in the World.—The largest farm in the world is 170 miles square, and is situated in Ellis county, Kansas. Its proprietor is a wealthy Englishman named George Grant, who named his estate Victoria, in honor of his Sovereign. Vast herds of cattle, and a cavalry brigade of mounted stockmen roam over the face of this great farm, on which the only remedy employed for bruises, inflammation and the like, is Giles' Liniment Iodide Ammonia. LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Town Council.

There will be a meeting of the Town Council this evening.

Accident.

On Friday Mr. Wm. McKee, of the firm of T. & W. McKee, furniture manufacturers, had the misfortune to severely injure his right hand while working in the factory. He sustained a severe sprain of the thumb, which incapacitated him from working for the last few days, but hopes to be able to resume in a short time.

A Dull Saturday.

Saturday afternoon and evening, although apparently lively, was a dull day for the store keepers. The town trade seemed to be in sympathy with the market, and sales were slow. The snow that improved the sleighing did not come early enough to effect the travel from the country, hence it was that so few farmers came into town.

The Spring Assizes.

The following are the appointments for the Spring Assizes for this circuit:—

HON. JUSTICE BURTON.

Victoria Circuit.

Brampton	Monday, 29th March
Whitby	Monday, 5th April
Cobourg	Monday, 19th April
Lindsay	Monday, 3rd May
Peterborough	Monday, 10th May

A Fine Sunday.

Sunday was a fine winter's day. The sky was bright and clean. The weather was enticing, although a brisk south-west wind drifted the light snow about in the faces of those who ventured forth. This did not deter people from attending church in large numbers. The thermometer indicated during a great portion of the day from 28° to 30°, sinking with the sun towards evening. The wind changed to the north-west in the evening, and during the night blew almost a gale.

Danger in the Streets.

We have heard several complaints of the dangerous condition of the front walls of the store formerly occupied by Messrs. Farley & Co., and damaged by the recent fire, and the consequent risk of their falling on passers-by. Our attention has also been called to the inadequate support of the bill-board on George Street facing the Market Square. A gust of wind might easily blow it down on anyone passing. The wind of the past two days must have affected both those places for the worse. The Building Inspector should see to them both.

The Skating Rink.

A large number of ladies, gentlemen and children were at the rink on Saturday afternoon to enjoy the delightful pastime of skating. Prof. Williams was also present, and performed many of his wonderful feats, among them some of his most difficult figures. He also gave instructions to many who were anxious to learn some of his less difficult ones. Many amusing scenes resulted from the attempts made by the boys to imitate the Professor. Some of the ladies were observed to be practising some of the figures in one corner of the rink, and were very successful in some cases.

Peterborough Rangers.

No. 3 (Ashburnham) Company will meet in their drill shed to-morrow evening (Tuesday) at half-past seven for drill. This company are keeping up their attendance very well, and improving very much in their drill. The gymnasium is a source of great attraction to the members. 1d33

CHURCH COLLECTIONS

What the Rev. Mr. Starr Thinks About the Average Sunday Collection in the George Street Methodist Church.

Last Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Starr preached in the George Street Methodist Church. The reverend gentleman is the pastor of the Charlotte Street Church, and alternates with the Rev. Dr. Harper in filling the pulpit of the larger edifice on George street. Now the Rev. Mr. Starr is nothing, if not original, preaches doctrine good and sound, and is always to the point. When he undertakes to say something out of the usual line of pulpit utterances—and he always appears to have a few provoking remarks handy—he does say it with vigor and with confidence. Mr. Starr, on the occasion in question, gave the customary announcements relative to church affairs for the coming week, remarking that the collection to be taken up after the sermon was for the benefit of the local circuit fund. Then taking a comprehensive survey of the congregation, he remarked that while they were on the subject of collections, he would take the liberty of reading them a short story. Extracting from his vest pocket a clipping, he proceeded to read, a sort of half smile lurking around the corners of his mouth the while:—

"A popular minister had just finished an exhortation strongly recommending the support of a meritorious institution. The congregation was numerous, and the chapel was crowded to excess. The discourse being finished the plate was about being handed round to the respective pews, when the preacher made this short address to the waiting congregation: 'From the sympathy I have witnessed in your countenances, and the strict attention you have honored me with, there is one thing I am afraid of, that some of you may be inclined to give too much. Now, it is my duty to inform you that justice, though not so pleasant, should always be a prior virtue to generosity; therefore, as you will all be immediately waited upon in your respective pews, I wish to have it thoroughly understood that no person shall think of putting into the plate who cannot pay his debts.' We need not add this produced a most over-flowing collection."

During the reading of the anecdote a gradual smile of expectancy stole over the faces of the congregation. Back under the gallery the wearers of the smile rapidly exchanged it—rather irreverently—for a broad grin. Every one felt that they were in for it, sure. Heads of families moved uneasily in their seats and glanced at each other, as if they could thereby shift the responsibility for what was coming. The reverend gentleman valiantly announced that what he was about to say, would be said entirely upon his own responsibility. Sensation in the pews! Young men in the gallery cast surreptious glances backward, and under the seats, to get the exact bearings of their hats and overcoats. Raising his voice, and looking square at everybody, Mr. Starr continued,—"I am going to say—and I mean just what I state—that the Sunday collections in this church, are, as a rule nothing at all like what they should be. They are a living disgrace to any civilized community. We had a couple of them on Sunday, two weeks ago,—special collections too—and they netted the church the colossal sum of thirteen dollars. Just think of that! Look at it! Thirteen dollars amongst a congregation of at least something like fourteen hundred and fifty persons averages nearly three-quarters of a cent apiece! Isn't that generous. Isn't that munificent? Why, the Indians back in the Nor'-West do better than that! Supposing we allow the sermon to go for nothing, is it not worth something to come here and enjoy the excellent music, the comfortable seats, the cheerful lights? It is cheap, at a reasonable price of admission! Any of you, all of you, can easily afford to give five cents a Sunday. Just look at the young people in the gallery! Lots of them there, and in the body of the church, too! Why, it is worth five cents to have company home from church—at any rate I used to think so before I went into the ministry. It is not reasonable or just, and, if you will just think a moment, you will admit that it is neither just nor reasonable to expect the burden of supporting this church to fall on a few—who do most nobly—to the end that the balance of the congregation may get off lightly, I mean, by contributing comparatively little or nothing. Charlotte Street Church is responsible for my salary, or you should not have heard a word on this subject from me. Now, the greatest part of that famous thirteen dollars was made up of coppers—not even pennies—coppers, always coppers! I am persuaded, I know it, that this is only a habit—but the sooner that habit is dispensed with the better will it be for the finances of this church. Do be just; act like a people who take a pride in supporting their church. At any rate pay for what you get, for you will certainly get all you pay for. Give us more white money—no matter how small—and less of this dull, dingy, dirty, paltry Jews' money. I say this in all kindliness of spirit for your own good—for is not the church your own church—and, if the moral of my anecdote holds good, we shall have to-night a rousing collection. There now, I have done on that point, and while that is digesting, I will proceed with the sermon."

It is but fair to the congregation to state that the sum mentioned by Mr. Starr is in excess of the regular contributions by envelope.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to day are: Northerly winds prevailing to-day; veering east or south to night. Fair cold weather: probably followed by snow to-morrow. Peterborough, north-westerly to westerly winds during the early part of the day and cold weather. The thermometer indicated at 7 o'clock this morning 2° below zero, the lowest point reached during the night by the Government register; at 8 o'clock it indicated 1° below, rising to 4° above zero at 10 o'clock.

LINDSAY.

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

MONDAY, Feb. 9.—The Peterborough market opened very tame this morning, $1.18 being the highest offer ventured for spring wheat, and only one buyer willing to take it at that figure for shipment, while some of the millers, although not anxious, were willing to pay that price for extra fine wheat. Wood was abundant, owing to the cold weather and the good sleighing. There was no change of price to note. Oats and peas unchanged. The demand for hay being so light, very few loads were brought in.

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

RADISHES.—Wash them nicely, leave about two inches of the top, scrape all the fibres from the bulb, and let them lie in ice-water for an hour, serve in a dish with bits of clean ice.

GOOSEBERRY JAM.—Stew the berries in a little water, press through a coarse sieve, and return to the kettle; add three-fourths pound sugar to each pound of the pulped gooseberry; boil three-quarters of an hour, stirring constantly; pour in jars or bowls, and cover tightly as for currant jams.

MUTTON CUTLETS.—Beat them flat with the broad side of a hatchet, season with pepper and salt. Dip first in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs. Fry in lard or dripping. Drain perfectly free from the fat, and arrange them, standing on end, and touching one another, around a mound of mashed potatoes.

ROAST POTATOES.—Potatoes for roasting should always be large and fine. Select those that are nearest of a size, and wash them very clean, and wipe every one with a cloth. Put them into an oven, and let them roast or bake for more than two hours, turning them with a fork. Dish them in the skins, and send only cold butter to the table with them.

TO COOK ONIONS.—It is a good plan to boil onions in milk and water; it diminishes the strong taste of that vegetable. Chop them after they are boiled, and put them in a stew-pan with a little cream, and let them stand about fifteen minutes. This gives them a fine flavour, and they can be served up very hot.

NEW WAY TO COOK CHICKENS.—Cut the chicken up, put it in a pan and cover it over with water; let it stew as usual, and when done make a thickening of cream and flour, adding a piece of butter and pepper and salt; have made and bake a pair of shortcakes, made as for pie-crust, but roll thin and cut in small squares. This is much better than chicken pie and more simple to make. The crusts should be laid on a dish and the chicken gravy poured over while both are hot.

JELLY CAKE.—For baking jelly cake you must have large flat tin pans rather larger than a dinner plate. Make a rich batter, as for pound cake, and bake it in single cakes (in the manner of buckwheat, or thicker), taking care to grease the tin or soap-stone with fresh butter. Have ready enough of fruit jelly or marmalade to spread a thick layer all over each cake when it cools. Pile one on another very evenly, till you have four, five, or half a dozen; and ice the surface of the whole. Cut it down in triangular pieces like a pie.

TOFFIE.—Into a brass skillet put a quarter of a pound of fresh butter; as soon as it has just melted, add a pound of brown sugar; keep these stirred very gently over a clear fire, till a little of the mixture, dropped into cold water, breaks between the teeth without sticking to them. When it has boiled to this point, it must be poured out immediately, or it will burn. The grated rind of a lemon added when the toffie is half done, improves it; or a teaspoonful of powdered ginger, moistened with a little of the other ingredients, so soon as the sugar is dissolved, and then stirred to the whole. If dropped upon a buttered dish, the toffie can, when cold, be raised from it easily.

TREACLE CANDY.—Take three quarts of the best treacle. Put it into a thick block-tin kettle, and stir in a pound and a half of the best and cleanest brown sugar. Boil slowly, and skim it well (stirring it always after skimming), and taking care that it does not burn. Prepare the grated rind and juice of three large lemons or oranges, and stir them in after the molasses and sugar have boiled long enough to become very thick. Continue to boil and stir till it will boil no longer, and the spoon will no longer move. Try some in a saucer, and let it get cold. If it is brittle it is done. Then take it from the fire, and transfer it immediately to shallow square tin pans, that have been well greased with nice fresh butter or sweet oil. Spread it evenly, and set it to cool.

MAHOMED JAN AGAIN.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—A well authenticated despatch from Calcutta says it is believed there that Mahomed Jan has succeeded in intercepting the supplies which were on the way to the British forces at Cabul, and that much trouble is still anticipated from the exploits of this chieftain.

A SANGUINARY BATTLE.

Reports are received at Candahar of a second and more bloody struggle between the rival parties at Herat. Local troops attacked Cabulas unawares and inflicted heavy loss before the Cabulas could bring artillery to bear on their assailants. When this was done, the Heratis were defeated with great slaughter.

The said Company shall erect at the Town of Peterborough workshops of a capacity for, and shall therein employ constantly not less than one-half of the mechanics and hands employed in the shops of said railway in the Town of Peterborough and the City of Ottawa and between these points, before they shall be entitled to payment of the debentures or monies last payable under the by-law aforesaid.

And it is declared and enacted that the said by-law number 439, as hereby varied and amended, shall be and is in full force and effect, notwithstanding the other municipalities therein mentioned may not vote or may not have voted aid to the said Company to the amount of one million of dollars, and notwithstanding any other municipality or municipalities may not have passed by-laws giving aid to said Company, as in said by-law No. 439 provided.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—An engine, tender and baggage car of the Pictou Branch Railway ran off the track to-day about a mile from New Glasgow, tearing up a hundred feet of rails, throwing the engine and tender on one side and the car on the other side, over an embankment 50 feet high, crushing the driver, James Cameron, and almost completely severing his left leg between the knee and hip. The leg had to be amputated before he could be got from under the car. He will probably die. The fireman escaped with some slight bruises.

TERRIBLE FAMINE.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 9.—The Golos has intelligence from the Trans Caucasus that the condition of the inhabitants of Shatur Dalagez district is terrible. A quantity of breadstuffs has been seized by the hunger-stricken people.

THEATRE BURNED.

DUBLIN, Feb. 9.—The fire at the Theatre Royal, as was apprehended, resulted in the total destruction of the building. Immense crowds of people filled all the space about the theatre and in the adjacent streets, and they became very much excited. They so interfered with the operations of the firemen that it became necessary to call out the military, to prevent them from endangering their lives in their attempt to save property. Many casualties are reported. Part of them were accidents from falling timbers and other incidentals of the fire, and others resulting from the efforts of the military and constabulary to keep back the mob and preserve the peace. The fire has so far not extended to the adjoining buildings, and it is understood to be entirely under control. The loss of the theatre is much deplored by all people in the city, with whom it has long been a popular and attractive resort. The amount of loss or insurance has not yet been ascertained.

LATER.—A later despatch says that six lives were lost. The fire brigade succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames to the adjoining houses. The Lord Lieutenant was present during the conflagration. The loss by destruction of the theatre and its contents is estimated at $200,000.

HANLAN CHALLENGED.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Sportsman announces that Christopher Barrass authorised the editor to retain £50 of the stakes in the Boyd-Elliott match, and to challenge Hanlan on behalf of Boyd, to row within a stipulated time for £200 a side, for the championship of England and the Sportsman challenge trophy. Barrass is willing to add £300 more to the stakes if Hanlan would like to row for £500 a side. Boyd will row with Hawdon on the Tyne on Saturday for £200.

IRISH RELIEF.

DUBLIN, Feb. 9.—The first issue of one-fifth of the amount of the loans applied for has been made to many applicants, and, in cases where the Board of Public Works are satisfied with the security, they send circulars in advance to borrowers, enabling them to anticipate the issue. The Board take care that labourers are paid in cash, and the amount of the first issue has been expended in substantial work of equivalent value before they give the second instalment. Parnell's attack on the relief committees are condemned even by some of his most ardent admirers.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—A cargo of meat from Australia, which arrived recently on the steamer Strathleven, sold at somewhat better prices in the market than some articles shipped from the United States. SEVERE STORM.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—One of the severest storms that have been experienced in the United Kingdom for many years struck our western coast late on Sunday night and continued without the least abatement until this evening. RUSSIA'S TREACHERY.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The blue books published concerning Russia in Afghanistan and Russia at Merv do not tell the whole story. It is understood that Russia is implicated up to the period of Cavagnari's assassination, in that degree that if the suppression correspondence were published it might necessitate a declaration of war against that power. It is further stated that the Czar may have disowned the acts of his agents in Central Asia, and that suppression is du this possibility.

DUBLIN, Feb. 10.—One woman and seven men were killed, and 13 workmen and firemen seriously injured by the burning of the Theatre Royal. The theatre took fire from a light in the hands of a boy who was lighting the gas. Most of the employees were at dinner. The flames spread rapidly. Manager Egerton lost his life by remaining too long in the effort to arrest the flames.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The steamer State of Nevada, which sailed from Glasgow on Feb. 6th for New York, has put back with her propeller damaged.

RUSSIAN PERFIDY.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—A Vienna despatch says that intelligence has been received through an unimpeachable channel, that at the time General Roberts so unexpectedly found himself in a critical position before Cabul, the Russian General, Abramow, Governor of Samarcand, had secretly arrived at Derwas, east of Cabul, the centre of the agitation. There is no longer the slightest doubt that a league has been formed in Central Asia under the auspices of Russia against English domination, and that the most prominent and influential member is the Ameer of Bokhara, whose daughter married Abdurrahman Khan, the Afghan pretender.

BRIDGES DESTROYED.

PETERSBURG, Va. Feb. 10.—Last night the fine bridge over Meherin River, on the Petersburg and Weldon railway, at Hickford was burned. It was two hundred feet long and cost about $8,000. The county bridge took fire and was also destroyed.

A COUNT WANTED.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 10.—It is believed that Count Mitkiewicz, who is charged with swindling Castner & Co., has decamped. Another warrant for his arrest has been issued for assaulting Jno. L. Mason, the counsel for Castner & Co. Mitkiewicz invited Mason to call. Mason entered the Count's house, finding the Count and his wife praying loudly. The Count jumped up and attacked Mason fiercely, without an explanation.

THE SOULE RACE AGAIN.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Soule called upon referee Blaikie yesterday and expressed himself in favour of having the Hanlan-Courtney race at Washington. Hanlan says he will waive his difference with Courtney concerning the disposition of the railroad receipts and other contributions, if Soule will guarantee $600 that Riley will take Courtney's place if the latter does not row. Soule has accepted this proposition.

AN ASIATIC RAILWAY.

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—A company was organised yesterday under a charter from this State, for the purpose of constructing and operating a railroad from Cairo through Port Said and Damascus to connect with the Euphrates Valley Railway about to be built by an English company. Branch roads and extensions are also provided for. The Turkish Government has been applied to for the necessary right of way.

THE VANDERBILT WILL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Tribune says that the papers in Cornelius Vanderbilt's claim to the control of the $400,000 given him in the settlement of the will litigation by Wm. H. Vanderbilt, indicate that by the terms of that settlement Cornelius J. Vanderbilt receives the income from the $400,000 in addition to his income of $200,000 under his father's will. His old debts were settled and heavy fees were paid to his counsel, including, it is said, $100,000 to Scott Lord.

CHARGE AND APOLOGY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Sun says there is a dispute between Gordon and Stephens over the census appointments. On Saturday Gordon charged that one of Stephens' statements was a a malicious falsehood. On Sunday Gordon wrote an apology to Stephens.

A BILLIARD MATCH.

Slosson has been matched against Vignaux, of Paris, to play a match game of billiards of 4,000 points for $1,000. The play is to begin on March 23rd.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 10.—Mr. John Allan, the resident partner here of the New York firm of David, Dows & Co., and a well-known member of the Exchange, unaccountably disappeared on Thursday. His accounts were found to be straight, and it is feared that he is suffering from mental aberration.

A STRANGE CASE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Henry T. Skillen, formerly a merchant of Paterson, and who is said to be wealthy, was sentenced on Wednesday to 90 days in jail for obtaining money under false pretences. He is suffering from catalepsy, resulting from the shock to his nervous system, caused by the imprisonment. It is believed by many that he is the victim of suspicious circumstances.

MUNIFICENT CONTRIBUTIONS.

The Herald's Irish Relief Fund amounts to over $130,000. Boucicault yesterday telegraphed to Mackay, the Bonanza King, asking him to give something. The answer came promptly that his agents in New York were instructed to pay $10,000. Sothern, the actor, contributed $500.

GRANT IN CUBA.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Tribune's Havana despatch says that the reception to Grant was attended by many Americans, who had never been in the palace before. It will do much to break down a certain reserve that has of late marked the attitude of the Government towards Americans.

THE INTER-OCEANIC CANAL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says that the President believes that De Lesseps and all others interested in the Inter-Oceanic Canal schemes ought to be made to understand at the earliest possible moment that they cannot go on with any of their schemes without a most vigorous protest on the part of the United States. Evarts, on the other hand, says that up to this time nothing has happened but the beginning of some surveys. There is no evidence that the canal has any financial back. Meanwhile France has assured our Government that she has nothing whatever to do with De Lesseps' scheme. De Lesseps will not probably be allowed to leave this country without understanding what obstacles he will have to encounter from the applications of the Monroe doctrine.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1880.

WATER WORKS.

HAVING always strongly advocated water-works as certain to be most beneficial to the town, we are glad to find that a suggestion in their favor was received with nearly general approbation in the Town Council. We still believe that it is false economy to adopt a scheme which in a few years would be found inadequate, and would necessitate the waste of renewing the then existing work on a larger scale. However, we are convinced that it is even more wasteful to maintain our present system of fire protection—always defective and requiring fresh outlay—instead of adopting a cheap plan of water works that would ensure us against an extensive conflagration, even if such a system had to be enlarged hereafter. The cost of our present fire apparatus, with its renewals and repairs, together with the heavy loss that has been caused by numerous fires, would amount to a sum exceeding the expenditure for water works.

As it seems certain, after several trials for a period of many years, that the ratepayers are unwilling to vote for any comprehensive project that would entail a large outlay, we are ready to support any lesser scheme of water works that would economically provide for the safety of the business portion of the town with its valuable property. Let some definite scheme of this kind be proposed and we will give it our best support.

We trust that this time the attempt will not fail, as too often before, through individual antipathies or efforts to secure a private advantage. If we are to succeed in this or other matters, it can only be by united action.

AGAINST IT ON ANY TERMS.

WHATEVER may be one's opinion as to the advisability of the Town and County granting a bonus of $[illegible] to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, we had hitherto supposed there was not a single soul in either of these municipalities who would not like to see the road constructed, if it could be done without direct cost to ourselves. In this, however, it seems we are mistaken. And now, after five year's agitation on the subject, after having by large majorities signified our desire to aid this road to the extent we have mentioned, and after affording the promoters of the scheme every possible encouragement, just when the undertaking seems to have been worked up to the point of realization, a trio in our town appear as the active opponents of the road upon any terms.

We say upon any terms, because in no other way can the conduct of Messrs. Menzies, Robertson and Denne be justified. If they be not opposed to the road upon any terms, wherefore should they have so strenuously opposed the Council's passing a memorial asking for the same Government aid to this line as has been granted to other lines? It could not, it cannot, be said that the passing of the memorial involved the expenditure of a single cent of the people's money, either now or at any future time.

Again, why did they, or some of them, before they knew what the Bill before the Legislature consolidating its charter contained, employ one John Armour to obtain signatures to a petition against its passage, if they are not of opinion that the road should [illegible] be built upon any terms?

And lastly, why did this worthy trio, in the face of Mr. Dennistoun's opinion that the said Bill in no way affected the town's interests, rush off to Toronto last Wednesday morning for the purpose of aiding the Grand Trunk Railway in opposing the said Bill before the Railway Committee, unless they are opposed to it on any terms?

Here are three things that these gentlemen have done which can only be satisfactorily explained upon the hypothesis that they are opposed to the road upon any terms, but thus far we have failed to hear of their having advanced a single reason why the ratepayers as a whole should follow their example, and until they are advanced we must confess we are at a loss to discover what they can be.

We could understand Mr. Menzies' opposing the Town By-law, because the construction of the road would or might injure one branch of his own business, while it increased the taxes on his mansion. We could understand Mr. Denne objecting to an increased taxation on his mill, on the ground that the reduction, which would undoubtedly take place in the cost of transporting wheat and flour to the seaboard, would go into the farmers' pockets and not his own, but none of these reasons are sufficient to account for their opposing the road upon any terms.

We do not like to attribute motives, but unless these gentlemen rise and explain, most people will be apt to adopt Mr. Denne's own line of argument against the memorial, and conclude that "there is something behind" their action that people are not aware of, but which will be made apparent some day.

THE CHURCH BENEFICENT.

The Rev. D. J. Macdonnell, formerly of Peterborough, has addressed the following letter to the [illegible]:

SIR,—I have made some inquiries as to what Toronto is doing for Ireland, and I cannot exactly ascertain. Allow me to make a suggestion which will not, I think, interfere with any action that has already been taken otherwise. The simplest way of reaching the largest number of contributors is through the organized Christian congregations of this city. If the ministers of the various churches, Protestant and Roman Catholic, will bring the matter before their congregations next Sunday or the Sunday after, and if subscription lists are opened in the churches at the close of service, morning and evening, I venture to say that a large amount will be realized in a shorter time and with less trouble than in any other way. Each congregation may appoint a treasurer to receive the money and hand it over to the proper person for remittance to Ireland. I suppose that any contributions from Toronto will be sent to the Duchess of Marlborough's Committee.

It may be objected that many citizens will by this method be overlooked. No matter what plan may be adopted, many will be overlooked; but I suspect that the great majority of those who are interested in the welfare of their fellows are connected with one or other of the Christian churches. This is a case that appeals to the sympathy, not simply of Roman Catholics or of Protestants, but of men; to the charity not of Irishmen alone, but of the world. Three hundred thousand people are said to be starving, for whom immediate relief is needed. Toronto must do her part. Other cities are moving. Quebec has sent already over $5,000, raised by subscription. Though the citizens of Toronto voted down (and rightly) a proposal to raise $10,000 by taxation, it does not follow that they will not readily give at least twice that amount by voluntary contribution. Can any one suggest a simpler and more effective plan than the one indicated above? We have heard and seen something of "the Church militant;" let us have a specimen of the action of "the Church beneficent."

Yours, &c.,
D. J. MACDONNELL.
St. Andrew's Manse, Feb. 7.

TORONTO.

THE HANLAN-COURTNEY RACE.—The Globe says of the Hanlan-Courtney race: "The negotiations which have been going on between Hanlan, Courtney and Soule ever since the Chautauqua fiasco have advanced another stage. Numerous letters have passed between the principals, and the public after many days of waiting, may expect the time and place to be named within the coming week for the rowing of a race. Hanlan received a letter from Mr. Soule, a few days ago, asking him whether he would row Riley if Courtney failed to put in an appearance or any way backed out. Hanlan replied that he would, provided $500 were placed in the hands of Blaikie as a forfeit in case neither Riley nor Courtney put in an appearance. This latter proposition was accepted by Mr. Soule, and yesterday Hanlan wrote him that he was ready to have the time and place named. The champion told the Globe reporter yesterday that he was willing to do almost anything to have a race. He said he hoped the time would be about the 20th of April, because later on he had business at home which needed his personal attention. As to the articles, they will be about the same as those signed by Captain Sullivan for Courtney, and which the latter afterwards repudiated. The only alteration will be in Article 14, which will read that any commissions received from hotels or railways will go to pay the expenses of Courtney and Hanlan instead of to the winner. The public will either see a fair race between Hanlan and Courtney or between Hanlan and Riley, or failing both, Hanlan will pocket $1,000 forfeit.

FENELON FALLS.

THE RAILWAY STATION.—As soon as possible after the burning of the Fenelon Falls railway station, men were set to work to convert part of the grain storehouse into a waiting room for travellers, who in the meantime were forced to take refuge in the station master's dwelling house, which is only a few rods from the track. The new station will, it is said, be built at the crossing on Lindsay street; but a great many of the villagers would prefer having it at the head of Francis street west, nearer the steamboat wharf, which would be more central and very convenient for passengers to or from Toronto via the Nipissing Railway at Coboconk, as well as for tourists or camping out parties in the summer.—Gazette.

THE new English postage stamp contains a curious blunder. The coronet upon the Queen's head is wrong, heraldically speaking, as since the time of Henry V. crosses pattees and fleurs de lis have alternated in the royal crown, not crosses and nondescript ornaments. What makes the matter worse, the new stamp only perpetuates the error of the old one, an error frequently pointed out. Further, it is shown that instead of the nondescript coronet Her Majesty's head should be surmounted with the royal crown, the circlet heightened with crosses pattees and fleur de lis, and also arched with jewelled bands, while at their intersection would rise the mound and cross, as may be seen on the florin and the coinage of India. As De Quincey says in his essay on Bentley, one would think that errors might be guarded against where the proof-sheets were of steel, but the fact remains that a much more serious blunder was perpetrated by English officials when a good many years ago they minted and sent out to Canada some millions of halfpenny tokens marked Un sous—say "One cents." N. Y. World.

A Sympathetic Creditor.

At Njatka, Russia, an actress, by name Mme. Barbara Parmenovna Kossiakovskaja, owed a butcher eighty-four roubles for meat, which she was temporarily unable to pay. One evening the butcher went to the theatre where she was playing a leading role in the Russian drama, "The Actress of Venice." He was so overcome by her acting that, in the midst of one of her impassioned speeches, he exclaimed in a stentorian voice:—"Barbara Parmenovna, I consider myself paid for all the meat I have sold you!" The audience burst into uproarious laughter. The actress sued her creditor for defamation of character.

THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents a week.

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.

[As Revised and Edited by a "Sanitarian."]

With what anguish of mind I remember my childhood,
Recalled in the light of a knowledge since gained;
The malarious farm; the wet, fungus-grown wild-wood;
The chills then contracted that since have remained;
The scum-covered duck-pond; the pig-sty close by it;
The ditch where the sour-smelling house-drainage fell;
The damp, shaded dwelling; the foul barnyard nigh it—
But worse than all else was that terrible well,
And the old oaken bucket, the mould-crusted bucket,
The moss-covered bucket, that hung in the well.

Just think of it! Moss on the vessel that lifted
The water I drank in the days called to mind—
Ere I knew what professors and scientists gifted
In the water of wells by analysis find.
The rotting wood fibre, the oxide of iron,
The algæ, the frogs of unusual size,
The water—impure as the verses of Byron—
Are the things I remember with tears in my eyes.

And to tell the sad truth, though I shudder to think it,
I considered that water uncommonly clear,
And often at noon, when I went to drink it,
I enjoyed it as much as I now enjoy beer.
How ardent I seized it with hands that were grimy,
And quick to the mud-covered bottom it fell;
Then soon, with its nitrates, and nitrites, and slimy
With matter organic, it rose from the well.

Oh! had I but realized in time to avoid them,
The dangers that lurked in that pestilent draught,
I'd have tested for organic germs, and destroyed them
With potassic permanganate ere I had quaffed;
Or, perchance, I'd have boiled it, and afterwards strained it
Through filters of charcoal and gravel combined;
Or, after distilling, condensed and regained it
In portable form, with its filth left behind.

How little I knew of the dread typhoid fever
Which lurked in the water I ventured to drink;
But, since I've become a devoted believer
In the teachings of science, I shudder to think.
And now, far removed from the scenes I'm describing,
The story for warning to others I tell
As memory reverts to my youthful imbibing,
And I gag at the thought of that horrible well,
And the old oaken bucket, the fungus-grown bucket—
In fact, the slop-bucket—that hung in the well.

FARM AND GARDEN.

A WRITER in the Scientific American tells how he cleans his premises of rats, and says:—"In every crevice where a rat seems to tread we put the crystal of the copperas, and scatter the same in the corners of the hole. The result was a perfect stampede of rats and mice. Since that time not a footfall of either rats or mice has been about the house. Every spring a coat of yellow wash is given the cellar, as a purifier as well as a rat exterminator, and no typoid, dysentery or fever attacks the family."

A FARMER in Bangor, Me., noticing that wheat was being picked from the heads of standing grain, and finding flocks of yellow birds flying about, shot some of them. On opening their crops, he found only three grains of wheat and, by actual count, 350 weevils. It is better that farmers know whether they kill friends or foes.

LOSS IN GRINDING WHEAT.—The following is the average of a number of grindings of spring wheat:—

Weight of	wheat		1,486 lbs
"	flour	962 lbs
"	bran	240 "
"	screenings	32 "
"	middlings (canaille)	88 "
"	toll	148 "
"	waste	26 "	—1,486 lbs

DISTANCE TRAVELLED IN PLOUGHING.—The following will be interesting information to many of our farmers:—

Width of furrow, inches.	Distance travelled to plough an acre. Miles.	Amount ploughed per day at the rate of 16 miles.	18 miles.
7	14⅛	1⅛	1¼
8	12⅜	1¼	1⅜
9	11	1⅖	1⅗
10	9 9-10	1 3-5	1 4-5
11	9	1⅘	2
12	8¼	1 9-10	2⅕
13	7⅝	2 1-10	2⅖
14	7	2¼	2⅗
15	6⅗	2 2-5	2¾
16	6⅛	2 3-5	2 9-10
18	5½	3	3¼
20	4 95-100	3 1-5	3 3-5
22	4½	3½	4
24	4⅛	3 4-5	4 2-5

For instance, if a man ploughs a furrow seven inches wide, he walks fourteen and one-eighth miles in ploughing an acre of land. In travelling sixteen miles he will plough an acre and an eighth, turning a furrow seven inches wide, and in eighteen miles he would plough an acre and a quarter, turning the same furrow.

PROF. SHELDON, in his work on dairy farming, assumes that 350,000,000 gallons of milk are annually made into cheese in England, and 550,000,000 gallons to butter. The quantity of the former product made is 126,000 tons, and of the latter 89,285 tons.

PROTECTING CHEESE FROM MOULD.—It is often difficult to protect cheese from mould, especially those that have cracked. The Wiener Zeitung gives Dr. Engling's plan. He dissolves or digests a spoonful of bruised pepper, two tea-spoonfuls of salt, and the same quantity of boracic acid, in a quarter of a pint of brandy, for a few days, then filters the fluid through a cloth; and dilutes with an equal quantity of water. Some of the preparation is introduced into the cracks of the cheese, by means of a feather, or, better, with a small glass syringe. If places which have been nibbled by mice are rubbed with this liquid, no mould will form. This will put "jumpers" to flight, and greatly assist in preventing any decay.

CLIPPED HORSES AND FUR-CLAD MEN

Henry B. Evans, surgeon, of Kingston, writes as follows to the Montreal Witness:—

SIR,—One day recently, with the thermometer at 20° below zero, I saw a big healthy man driving a blooded horse against a north-west wind on that bitter day. The man was encased in fur from head to foot, wrapped in warm robes, and the horse was clipped bare to the skin. I say a blood horse, because these animals have a remarkably thin skin and are extremely susceptible to cold, which makes this barbarous treatment of this animal doubly offensive. The practice of depriving horses of their natural covering in this cold climate is cruel and culpable in the extreme, and cannot be defended on any grounds. It is the outcome of laziness and the desire to be thought fashionable. A lazy groom will persuade his master to have the horse clipped, because it saves him a little trouble in keeping the animal's coat sleek and glossy. A foolish, empty-headed coxcomb thinks he is imitating the sporting man in England when he has his horse clipped, but there the circumstances are altogether different.

In England the winters are often warm and muggy, and horses undergoing great exertions, such as gentlemen's hunters and stage horses, often suffer from having too thick a coat, and the natural result of remaining wet and cold after a long journey. With ordinary precautions clipping may then be justifiable, but under no circumstances, and with humane driving and proper grooming, is it proper in this climate. A person treating a horse thus in Canada is clearly amenable to be prosecuted under the Act "for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals," and I trust that the various societies formed for this purpose will take action in the matter.

THE AFGHANISTAN WAR.

MAHOMED JAN IS INCITING THE HILL TRIBES TO RISE.

Persia Invited to Take Herat—More Trouble Anticipated—Mahomed Jan at Ghuznai—Peace Menaced.

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 9.—Despatches from Cabul state that Mooshkie Alim, the old Ghuzni priest, whose powerful exhortations have done so much to rally the tribes in the vicinity of Ghuzni to the standard of Mahomed Jan, has, in connection with the leader, made a fresh appeal to the hill men to take up arms against the British in Afghanistan. Although no serious alliance among them is said to be apprehended, still it is believed that the call may meet with considerable response. The treasuries and magazines of the leaders concerned in Mahomed Jan's movement are said to have been replenished, and it is held to be quite possible that one or more attempts will be made to shake the British strength in Cabul. They have hoisted the flag of the Barakzais on the battlements of Ghuznai with the alleged expectation of attracting to it discontented fanatics who are eager to be led against the British for reasons of faith and religion, and some recruits are already announced as having joined the garrison in that fortress. It is also believed that numerous Sepoys of the late Ameer's army will follow suit. Several prominent British officers are said to have expressed the opinion that it is foolish to talk of retiring beyond the scientific frontier as long as Mahomed Jan holds out in Ghuznai, as he is in his present position an undisguised menace to the peace of the country. It is also reported that Mooshkie Alim's agent, the Fakir who was recently engaged in arousing the Mahmunds, is now occupied on a similar mission among the Shinwaris. In case an attack is made by tribes under the leadership of Mahomed Jan, it is rumored that it will take place about the latter part of the present month.

A SOLID KINGDOM.

A Cabul despatch says the only power which could again build up Afghanistan into a solid kingdom is England.

PERSIA INVITED TO TAKE HERAT.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The Times has reason to believe directions have been sent to the British Minister at Teheran to inform the Persian Government that her Majesty's Government releases Persia from the treaty engagement of 1857, by which Persia bound herself not to take possession of Herat. This is tantamount to an invitation to Persia to do the thing she is thus expressly permitted to do. The Times adds:—"We seem in effect to have handed Herat over to Persia with the view of uniting the interests of Persia and India in opposition to Russia."

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY

THE KENNEDYS AND DONNELLYS.

LUCAN, Feb. 9.—Following closely in the wake of the detectives, a Mail reporter visited the residence of John Kennedy on the 10th and 11th concessions, and found the old man at home, but he was not very communicative. However, after being thawed out by the usual process, he felt more at ease. William Donnelly is his son-in-law.

"I understand, Mr. Kennedy, that on the night of the murder the bits were stolen from your bridle and thrown away?"

"Yes Sir, somebody was mean enough to do that."

"What was their object, do you think?"

"Well, you see Bill Donnelly, who is married to my daughter, has always been a favourite of mine, and this seems to have annoyed my son John, who has been arrested; and I suppose that the bits were stolen so that I could not go over to Bill's in the morning upon hearing of the murder."

At this point, old Mrs. Kennedy seemed much excited, and broke in with the declaration that she believed that her son John and Martin McLaughlin were ring-leaders in the murder of John Donnelly. The Misses Kennedy also joined in the conversation, and were severe upon the Vigilant Committee, by whom they said they had been frequently treated no better than dogs, because they would not join those who were opposed to Bill Donnelly. For instance, when any of them went to a dance in the neighbourhood, the young men who were the members of the secret society, would take no notice of them. Upon one occasion they were put out of a sleigh on the road when returning from vespers because they would not join in abusing the Donnellys.

THE BOY CONNORS UNDER GUARD.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The boy Connors will be brought to London for safe keeping as soon as the inquest is over. In the meantime he is being carefully guarded by the friends of the Donnellys, and not the slightest fear for him is felt.

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. No Such Word as Fail.

The hectic cheek, the sunken eye, the hacking cough, betray the presence of that dire foe—consumption. If one of our friends or relatives is attacked with this disease, there is nothing that we would not do to give them relief, but leading physicians prescribe in vain. The only known remedy and one which stamps the discoverer as a public benefactor is SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA. Never, in a large and varied experience, has it been known to fail to give relief, and in most cases permanently cure. w6d301m

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam has a tonic effect on the stomach and the digestive organs, without any injurious effect on the system. It allays irritation of the bronchial tubes and stomach, removing the phlegm from the air cells to the lungs; at the same time healing the inflamed or irritated parts. We have never known it to fail in giving satisfaction, when used according to directions, for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Croup, or any other affection of the throat or lungs leading to Consumption. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. d:1w7-2w

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

TUESDAY, Feb. 10.—The wheat market has been again feverish to-day, opening this morning at $1.18 for spring, and reaching $1.22½, $1.21 and $1.22 being paid for most of the offerings. Some excitement was created and $1.22½ was paid for one lot of choice spring wheat. Fall wheat shared in the excitement to a certain extent. The offerings of fall wheat were light and only $1.22 was paid, while it may be quoted at $1.23. Peas advanced one cent per bushel to-day, and may be quoted at 60 @ 63 cts. A considerable quantity of hay and straw was offered, but there was no change of prices to note. Wood is coming in rapidly for next season's use, with no advance in price.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Ash Wednesday

To-morrow will be Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent. There will be services in the Church of England and Roman Catholic Churches.

The Wall Safe.

We find that building experts say that the wall of the recently burned store on George street is quite safe. The proprietors, however, to take every possible precaution against an accident, are putting supports wherever they could be of service.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to-day are: Winds mostly south-easterly to south-westerly; cloudy to fair weather with snow areas, possibly turning to rain in the southern district. The weather in Peterborough continued cold until towards morning. Last night at ten o'clock the thermometer indicated 6° below zero, with the wind shifting to easterly and moderating. This morning the thermometer indicated at 7 o'clock 8° above, rising gradually to 24° at 12 o'clock, noon, with snow.

The W. A. Scott Estate.

A meeting of the creditors of the W. A. Scott estate was held to-day in the Town Council Chamber, Peterborough, and was largely attended. The assignee stated he had called the meeting to take into consideration some correspondence that had passed between himself and the principal creditors looking to the sale and final settlement of the estate. A committee was appointed to act in conjunction with the assignee to ascertain what steps can be taken to unite the several conflicting interests, and upon what terms a sale can be effected, and to report to an adjourned meeting to be held on Tuesday, 2nd March, at two o'clock, in the same place.

Poultry Show.

The Midland Poultry Association show opens at the old Music Hall, Peterborough, to-day. The committees and managers met last evening and completed all the arrangements for the care and comfort of the fowls. A large number of fowls out of the 200 entries were brought in and placed in their respective coops, some of them being very handsome birds. The principal business transacted last evening was the completion and preparation of the coops, classifying the different breeds of birds, and otherwise preparing for the show. The Judges began their inspection at 2 o'clock this afternoon, attaching prize tickets to the cages of the successful birds, so that the visitors may learn their decision at once.

A City Hall Burned.

ALBANY, Feb. 10.—A fire broke out at 4.30 a. m. in the County Clerk's office of the City Hall. The building is still burning. The massive marble walls are only standing. When the dome fell seven men were crushed. The driver of steamer No. 6 died, and 2 or 3 others are expected to die. The loss will exceed $100,000. The judgment records, chattel mortgages, and the records of the proceedings of the supervisors are destroyed. The records of deeds and mortgages on real estate, also the papers of the surrogate's office are saved. The trustees of the old Capitol provide accommodation in that building for holding courts whose rooms in the City Hall are destroyed.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

IT is particularly requested that subscribers not receiving the REVIEW regularly will at once make the fact known at this Office, in order that all cause of complaint may be removed as speedily as possible.

WOOD YARD.

The CLERK read a report from the Mayor as to a wood yard, as follows:—

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with your request that I should make what I considered the best arrangement for a suitable wood and lumber yard, I have to report that Mr. Hazlitt offers his lot, No. 2, south of Charlotte and west of George Streets, for the purpose, provided the town remits the taxes on the same so long as they use it, the town to have the use of same from year to year, or until Mr. Hazlitt shall require the same. I think this will be a suitable lot for the purpose, and recommend the acceptance of the same.

JOHN J. LUNDY,
Mayor.

The report was adopted.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Councillor PATERSON apologised for not having had time to prepare the report of the Fire Committee. Two lengths of hose were burst at the late fire, and they thought some more rubber hose should be bought. He would report at next meeting.

Councillor CAHILL said the Committee might meantime make enquiries from manufacturers as to cost, &c.

Councillor PATERSON said if they meant to purchase the Ottawa fire engine, they should see to it at once. He was afraid that the late fire would have got beyond control. If anything happened to their one fire engine they would be in a difficulty.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON said with all the consequent expense the purchase of a fire engine would cause the expenditure of $6,000. What they wanted was a good fire brigade.

Councillor DENNE said the cost would amount to $10,000. What they wanted was to adopt water-works, when they would have made their expenditure once for all, and would have better protection. The Fire Committee should consider the whole matter and report.

FINANCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

Councillor SMITH brought in the report of the Finance Committee as follows:—

The Finance Committee beg leave to report that we have considered the several matters to us referred, and have disposed of them as hereinafter set forth:—

1. We recommend the payment of the following accounts, viz.:—

H. Best	$5 00
Scott & Edwards, half-year's account	22 56
J. E. Belcher	10 00
W. Helm	8 00

2. We recommend that the application of Thomas Leonard be granted, inasmuch as it appears that the property in question, being Lot No. 11, South of Simcoe and West of George Streets, was assessed both to Mr. Leonard and to one David Chalmers in the same year, (the latter being placed upon the roll by the County Judge upon the revision of the voters' list). And inasmuch as it appears by a receipt produced by Mr. Leonard that he paid the taxes in question, the amount to be remitted is $16.91 and costs.

3. The Collector called the attention of your Committee to the fact that there was a double assessment for a part of Mr. W. H. Chamberlain's property for the past year. We therefore recommend that the sum of $8.95, being the amount of taxes involved, should be struck off.

4. As to the application of Mr. Wm. Bell, we recommend that the Collector should return the taxes against the landlord's property if he can legally do so, it appearing that Mr. Bell does not own any chattels which can be seized upon for the taxes.

5. Tenders for the delivery of twenty-five cords of tamarac, and twenty-five cords of ash and elm, and for fifty cords of hardwood were received and opened by your Committee, and we have awarded the contract for the soft wood to Michael Boulton for the sum of $1.26 per cord, and for the hardwood to John Madden at $2.45 per cord, the same to be delivered at the town wood yard. Contracts for the same were ordered to be prepared and executed.

6. We considered the application of Mr. Hazlitt, and found upon examination that in the previous year the taxes upon the property in question had been paid both by Mr. Hazlitt and Mr. Rombough, (the latter being placed upon the roll by the judge), and for this reason, and inasmuch as the buildings in question were destroyed by fire in the fall of 1878, we recommend that the sum of $29.90, being a portion of the amount in question, be returned.

7. We recommend that the dog tax paid by Mrs. Butcher be returned to her as soon as she shall file with the Clerk a statutory declaration that she has not owned or had in her possession any dog during the past year or during any part of it. We make a like recommendation in the case of George Stanton.

8. Your Committee recommend that petitions should be at once forwarded to the Attorney-General, asking that he will cause the necessary amendments to be made to the Municipal Act, so as to enable Police Magistrates to impose costs in all cases which come before him in which convictions are made; also asking that the License Act be so amended so as to enable Municipal Councils to appoint their own License Inspectors and to fix their remuneration, and generally to enable councils to enforce the provisions of the License Act without the intervention of Commissioners. Your Committee being of opinion that a large saving of money would be effected should this change in the law be made, we have caused petitions for the above purpose to be prepared, which are submitted herewith for the consideration of the Council.

9. Your Committee have carefully considered the proposed legislation respecting the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, and have obtained the opinion of Mr. Dennistoun as to the effect such legislation will have upon our By-law, granting aid to the Company, which opinion is submitted herewith. We have also considered and discussed with Mr. Dennistoun the Railway Act now before the House, and are of opinion that section 43, which provides for the granting of aid by Municipal Councils towards preliminary expenses of said railway to the extent of $5,000, without submitting the same to the ratepayers for their approval is objectionable, and we requested Mr. Dennistoun to communicate with the Hon. Mr. Pardee, Chairman of the Railway Committee, the fact that your Committee object to the clause which Mr. Dennistoun, on recommendation, might think prejudicial to the interests of the Town, his present opinion being, however, that section 43 is the only section to which it is necessary to object.

10. We have had an interview with Messrs. Pearse and Macdougall, and recommend that the proposition contained in their communication should be accepted, and that the By-law under which they were appointed be amended accordingly.

11. We also recommend that Messrs. Pearse and Macdougall be employed to audit the town debenture accounts from the incorporation of the town to the present time, in the manner and as required by the By-law in the next preceding paragraph of this report mentioned, and that they be paid $50.00 each. We recommend that the application of Henry Hartley, to be allowed to pay his taxes in work, be granted, and we make a like recommendation in the case of John Langton.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. H. SMITH,
Chairman.

He moved the adoption of the report.

Councillor DENNE suggested that Messrs. Macdonald and Pearse should also look into the special audit and the Treasurer's report. He would support an additional payment to them of $25.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON enquired of the Clerk how long it would take.

The CLERK said he could hardly tell.

Councillor DENNE said if it could not be done in town they could get auditors from Toronto, if it cost $500 each.

The report as amended, according to Mr. Denne's suggestion, was adopted.

RULES OF ORDER.

Councillor SMITH moved, seconded by Councillor DENNE,—That the rules of order for the present be the same as those in force last year.—Carried.

AUDITORS.

A by-law to amend the by-law as to the Town Auditors, and another appointing the new special auditors, was passed through all their stages, the salary for the special auditors being fixed at $75 each.

CHARITY.

Councillor MCNAUGHTON moved, seconded by Councillor TOOLE,—That the widow Martin receive $1.50 a week during the pleasure of this Council.—Carried.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Councillor DENNE moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That Mr. Robertson's name be substituted for Mr. Sawers' on the Standing Committee.—Carried.

FIRE PROTECTION.

Councillor CAHILL moved, seconded by Councillor TAYLOR,—That the Fire Committee be instructed to take into consideration the whole question of fire protection for this town, and report as to the advisability of purchasing another steam engine, the purchasing of hose, &c.

Councillor PATERSON asked for an expression of opinion from the Council, as he did not wish to have the trouble the Committee had last year, and nothing come of it.

Mr. STEVENSON said as a sufferer by the late fire he wished to say a few words about it. He did not blame the firemen, but he said that owing to the want of facilities the fire spread unnecessarily. The great destruction was caused by the bungling as to the hose, the couplings being of different kinds, which caused delay and changes. He suggested that the Council should have all the couplings alike. He gave high praise to the firemen, and dwelt upon their cheerful and unrepayed exertions. Then he dwelt upon the loss that had resulted not only to individuals but to the town at large. He dwelt upon the necessity for a hose tower, and on the saving of the expense for new hose, that would be made by this slight expenditure. For years a hose tower had been recommended in vain, and enough hose had been destroyed to pay for the tower four times over. He appealed strongly to the Council to see to this. In answer to a question he advocated the construction of cheap water-works which would not cost more than $14.000. An eight-inch pipe down George street would save the principal part of the town, and the merchants would gladly pay a local tax. With the new telephone they could speak to the engineer and obtain water at once.

Councillor DENNE again advocated waterworks. He would supply the power for a fair amount, if required.

Councillor ROBERTSON pressed the necessity of a fire alarm for the north ward.

The motion was carried.

POLICE COURT COSTS.

A memorial to the Provincial Government in favor of amending the law so that Police Magistrates could inflict costs, was passed through all its stages.

Councillor DENNE on the third reading pressed the necessity for urging this amendment.

Councillor PATERSON spoke of the necessity of properly defining town and county cases. He would like to see the Mayor go to Toronto as a delegate to support the memorial.

The Mayor expressed his willingness to go if it were found to be advisable.

Councillor DENNE subsequently moved, seconded by Councillor MENZIES,—That the Mayor and Mr. Blezard, M.P.P., be requested to present the memorial in reference to the Police Magistrate to the Attorney-General at Toronto.—Carried.

TOWN AND COUNTY.

The MAYOR said the arbitration between the town and county would be held to-morrow.

CHARITY.

Councillor TOOLE moved, seconded by Councillor DENNE,—That the Mayor and Clerk be requested to make the best terms obtainable with the managers of the Toronto General Hospital for treating Jos. Spenceley and forwarding him to that institution, and that the Treasurer be directed to issue his cheque for an amount sufficient to meet the expense incurred thereby for a period not exceeding four weeks.—Carried.

TOWN PRINTING.

Councillor TOOLE said, in the morning he had asked the Treasurer to give him a statement of the printing account. It had been said at the beginning of the year that the printing would cost some thousand dollars. The cost of the ordinary printing last year was $196. This economy was very satisfactory, and he thought they might continue their present arrangement. He would move, seconded by Councillor SMITH,—That the contract awarded to Toker & Co. and J. R. Stratton for the year 1879 be extended so as to apply to the present year, if the said Toker & Co. and J. R. Stratton are willing to renew their contract.

Councillor ROBERTSON said that principally through him there had been less printing than usual. He was glad there had been economy.

Councillor MENZIES moved in amendment, seconded by Councillor DENNE,—That the printing for the year 1880 be let by tender to the lowest bidder.

Councillor ROBERTSON said the matter should go before the Printing Committee.

Councillor SMITH said they were in the same position as last year, when they had to deal with two offices, as Mr. Robertson was a member of their Council. They got their printing done well and cheaply, as they had the evidence from other places of the fairness of the charges. He thought they could not do better than continue their bargain.

Councillor DENNE advocated delay.

Councillor CAHILL said they found the present arrangement satisfactory. The County Council had taken the same step that they proposed.

Councillor ROBERTSON again clamored for tenders.

The amendment was carried.

There was some further debate as to the action of the Committee, during which there was some rather sharp cross-firing.

Councillor MENZIES suggested asking tenders for stationery.

Councillor PATERSON moved, seconded by Councillor DUNSFORD,—That the Clerk ask for tenders for printing and stationery, the Printing Committee to open the tenders and report to the Council.—Carried.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

TORONTO.

ATTEMPTED MURDER BY A VILLAIN.—A girl named Margaret Joyce, a resident of Georgetown, is now lying at the point of death at the Magdalen Asylum, from the effects of poison administered by John Ferguson, for whom the police are now searching. The girl was employed as servant in a private family here, and meeting Ferguson, an intimacy sprang up between them. The result was that Ferguson seduced her and took her to live in a house of ill-fame on Simcoe street. He then deserted her, and she, taking to drink, soon found herself in goal. On her discharge she kept clear of Ferguson, who again pursued her, and resolved to live a decent life. On Thursday Ferguson met her on Yonge street, and upbraided her for avoiding him. They went for a walk together, and he took her into a tavern and treated her. She thought the liquor she drank tasted queer, but did not say anything. On passing into the street, she was seized with pains and became insensible. She was taken to the Asylum. The medical men have decided that she was poisoned with arsenic. Her deposition was taken by Mr. Carr, J.P., on Saturday. Ferguson, who is a moulder, belongs to Hamilton.

THE MISSING RING.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Mr. Fred. W. Stevens writes to the Tribune that the story of the theft of a $6,000 ring at a dinner party at his house arose simply from the disappearance of a ring with ten small stones, which was returned next day by a cousin, in whose coat sleeve it had been found, with a stone valued at $60 missing. Mr. Stevens denounces the published story as scandalous. The Tribune says there was another story of a diamond ring afloat about the same time, which led to a police investigation. It is evident that the two stories got mixed.

To Measure Cisterns.

If a cylindrical cistern is to be measured, square the diameter, in feet, and multiply by the depth, and this by 373.4069 for hogsheads, by 373.2060 for barrels, and 47.2 for gallons. If the contents of a square cistern are desired, multiply together length, breadth and depth for the cubic feet, and for hogsheads multiply by 19.160, for barrels by 19.60, and for gallons by 7 48.100. In this calculation 31½ gallons are called a barrel, and 63 gallons a hogshead. The following table give the number of gallons of water in a well for each ten inches of depth:—

CAPACITY OF CISTERNS FOR EACH TEN INCHES IN DEPTH.

Diam., ft.	Galls.	Diam., ft.	Galls.
2	19.50	8	313.33
2.5	30.60	8.5	353.72
3	44.06	9	396.56
3.5	59.97	9.5	461.40
4	78.33	10	489.60
4.5	99.14	11	592.40
5	122.40	12	705.00
5.5	148.10	13	827.40
6	176.25	14	959.60
6.5	206.85	15	1101.60
7	239.88	20	1958.40
7.5	275.40	30	4406.40

A cubic foot of water weighs 62½ pounds, and measures 7.48 gallons. The cubic feet given, all that is necessary is to multiply by 7.48 for the gallons.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1880.

ATTRACTING CAPITALISTS.

THE Town Council of Port Hope has been discussing the subject of advertising the advantages of their town, and has appointed a Standing Committee to confer with manufacturers who might be willing to settle themselves there. The people of Port Hope feel that unless they have new industries established they cannot advance, and they are prepared accordingly to welcome capitalists.

It is even more certain in our case, that unless Peterborough becomes to a greater extent a manufacturing town, it cannot progress, or indeed hold its own. The days when this was a great lumbering centre are gone never to return. Already our population has been decreased by the departure of those who used to work in the woods, and when the pine that is still left in the district is cut down, others will leave us. Being in the centre of a fine agricultural country, this will always be an important market for the farmers and the source whence they draw their supplies, but this industry is not from its nature one of rapid growth, and we cannot expect much increase of business from them to build up the town. What would really do so would be the establishment of manufactories with their consequent increase of population and of the general business of the town. The establishment of the Auburn Woollen Factory here, for example, has benefitted this community, for while they have returned in cash to the Town Treasury far more than they have received from it, including the bonus, and every business among us must, directly or indirectly, have secured increased business from the company or its employees.

If we were advertising our advantages with a view to attract capitalists, what inducements would we have to offer? Our central position, the fine country around us, our magnificent and almost unlimited water power, would all deserve mention, and would offer great attractions. But one important inducement we could not at present offer. The first question a manufacturer seeking a locality for his factory would be:—"What communications have you by which I can readily, speedily and cheaply bring in my raw materials and distribute my manufactured articles?" Could we make any satisfactory reply? It is notorious that we could not, and with a few exceptions, the people of Peterborough are convinced that its most pressing need, if it is to increase and flourish, is more direct and speedy means of communication. There is every hope that we will attain this object before long, and everyone who has the good of the community, or even his own interests at heart, should do all in his power to promote its early accomplishment. No place ever flourished by isolating itself, and sinking into a "Sleepy Hollow" through lethargy and misplaced parsimony.

FREE-GRANT LEGISLATION.

The following letter is addressed to the Belleville Intelligencer by the Hon. Billa Flint on the subject of the proposed act to amend the Free Grants and Homesteads Act:—

MR. EDITOR,—The Hon. T. B. Pardee, Commissioner of Crown Lands, has introduced a Bill with the above title, which has received its second reading, and which, if it becomes law, had better have been entitled, The Settlers' Driving out and the Lumberman's Grab Act, as it is, unless materially altered before its third reading, more calculated to prevent not only the settlement of the back country, but also to drive off many of those men there who have taken up lands.

The second clause requires from the locatee an affidavit which very few can honestly take, for how is it possible for the locatee to know what the lot in question is or "is not valuable chiefly for its mines, minerals or pine timber," without going to great expense in exploration before location? True, he may tell whether there is a pine timber on the lot, if he explores the whole lot; but all or a part of that timber may be of little value from punk or rotten knots, and none but an experienced hand can tell whether the timber is sound or rotten.

Again, the restrictions include not only "gold, silver, copper, lead, iron or other mines or minerals," but also "any quarry or bed of stone, marble or gypsum thereon." Now with all these exemptions, what is there to encourage people to locate Government lands?

Section 4 reserves "All pine trees growing or being upon any land located or sold within the limits of the free grant territory after the passing of this Act, and all gold, silver, copper, lead, iron or other mines or minerals (which) shall be considered as reserved from such location and shall be the property of Her Majesty." What more could the Government take from the locatee it would be hard to say. Open up the lands for free grants or purchase to encourage settlement, and then load down the free gifts or purchases with restrictions which seem to me to be of such an outrageous character that no man of any spirit can endure.

He "may cut and use such pine trees as may be necessary for the purpose of building and fencing on land so located." By this he may cut and obtain pine from any portion of the lot, as he is not confined to the clearing for it, which may be of some slight advantage, as it will give him the chance of cutting the pine where he is clearing and which he can dispose of, but for so doing he must pay "the same dues as are at the time payable by the holders of licenses to cut timber or saw logs." Query, will the Department require him to take out settlers license and pay $8 for the same? If so then the license and the dues will amount to 30 cents per standard on 53 logs—which is probably far more logs than he will cut in clearing in any one season.

Section 5 makes a reservation in the patents which would not be so great a hardship if the locatee was allowed to cut the pine for sale by paying fifteen cents per standard duty to the Government, but the trouble is in allowing "any person or persons now or hereafter holding a license to cut timber or saw logs on such lands, (who) may at all times during the continuance of such license enter upon the uncleared portion of any such lands, and cut and remove such trees and make all necessary roads for that purpose, and for the purpose of hauling in supplies." Why should this be so? Why is the locatee to be placed at the mercy of the licenciate, who may from time to time cut up and destroy his valuable wood land, subjecting it by the slash he leaves to be burnt over from time to time until the whole of the timber is destroyed, thereby keeping the locatee in continual annoyance?

It is true the Bill gives to the locatee the right to sell the saw logs on land he is clearing by paying the Government dues on the same, as is provided in the 4th Section, and the only way he can get any benefit from the pine timber is to make his clearings where the most of the pine is and cut his pine for building purposes where it is in less quantities. In this way he may to some extent foil the licentiate and the Government; if he can't do that he will most likely cut his pine so as to burn up and destroy the pine where he is not clearing, and most likely to do so either carelessly or otherwise, as he feels no interest in preserving it for the licentiate or the Government; and who can blame him for so doing? He gets a free grant, but it is not free; he buys his land, but he does not get a free deed; he is working under a system of serfdom; for what he receives as a gift or what he pays for is so borne down by restrictions that he really cannot call it his own so long as a pine tree is left upon it.

My opinion is the Government is making a sad mistake in passing the Bill in its present shape, and if they will take the opinion of an old lumberman, they will, instead of allowing the licentiate to enter upon such lands from time to time, restrict him to one year, and all the timber he leaves after his first cutting allow the locatee to have, even if he has to pay the regular duty. Yet in my opinion it ought to go to the locatee free of duty; But either way he would feel that he had some interest in the timber and would be careful to preserve it from fire for his own benefit as well as that of the Government. It would give him the option to sell to the licentiate or to the local mill owner, whichever will pay him the best price. The settler would also feel that he had the fostering care of the Government instead of feeling that he was oppressed, and a Government who wishes the good will of the people must not become their oppressors.

In the 27 years that I was engaged in the lumber trade, some 27 of which I was working under license in Kaladar, Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, I always did all I could to induce parties to locate and settle on lands when they were fit for farming purposes, and in every instance I allowed them the privilege of cutting and hauling out the logs from their locations, giving them as good prices as were going for the same class of logs, thereby enabling them to sustain themselves while the timber lasted, and I do not know of a single instance of any fires having been set within the bounds of my limits, but have had damage done by fires having been set in other licentiates' limits, several times; and I believe if all the other lumbermen would take a similar course and work harmoniously with the settlers they would not only greatly benefit locatees on lands, but would also reap the benefit of a more congenial course, and the Government would not be such heavy losers by fires in the pine lands.

I have felt it my duty to be thus explicit in reference to the locatee and the licentiate as well as the Government, from the fact that I look upon the Bill now before the House as most injurious to the settler, and if placed in its present shape will have the tendency to bring the Government and its supporters into contempt with every well wisher of the settlement of the waste lands of the Crown.

Yours, &c., &c.,

Killed by the Electric Light.

It has been thought that one of the chief advantages of the electric light lies in its comparative safety. It does not explode like kerosene, nor can it ignite flying curtains like gas. Children and servants cannot get at the flame without breaking the globe that holds the vacuum, in which case the flames would not go out. All this is comfortable to think of, and we suppose it is in substance trustworthy. But there is a bitter drop even in the honey of this cup. A fatal example is immediately at hand in proof. At a theatre in Birmingham, England, a Mr. Bruno, a musician, has just been killed on the spot by the machinery of an electric light. The London Times gives details of the accident, from which it appears that Bruno unfortunately caught hold of two brass connections at such a moment as to receive the full shock of the electric current generated by a battery used to supply the lamps of the building. Bruno was unable to let go the brass connections, and sank down insensible, dragging them with him. Medical aid was useless, for, in spite of every restorative, the man soon died. Of course, with a light battery no such danger as this would exist, but the accident shows that in many cases such risks from electric lights would have to be provided for.—New York Evening Post.

Hard Work Essential to Success.

Downright hard work is essential to success in anything that is worth doing in the world. No native ability relieves a man from the necessity of earnest and persistent application to whatever he undertakes, if he would be efficient in his endeavors. This is as true for men of brilliant genius as for those of moderate capabilities. It is commonly recognized by them more readily than by inferior minds. "The fact is," says Ruskin, "that a man of genius is always far more ready to work than other people, and gets so much more good from the work that he does, and is often so little conscious of the inherent divinity in himself, that he is very apt to ascribe all his capacity to his work, and to tell those who ask how he came to be what he is:—'If I am anything, which I much doubt, I made myself so merely by labor.'" So, if a man thinks he has genius in one direction or another, he will best prove it by working hard and persistently at anything he undertakes in that direction. His genius will prompt him to labor, not relieve him from labor.—Watchman.

A FIRE TRAP.

In Which a Family of Nine Were Slowly Burned to Death.

A fearful calamity occurred last Tuesday night at a place called Stacks, about fourteen miles above Columbia, S.C., by which a whole colored family named Lorick, consisting of a man and woman with seven children, met a most horrible death by burning. The house in which the fated family lived was a very strong, rough, closely built cabin, constructed of pine logs. It contained two rooms, one small door, the only avenue of ingress and egress, and no windows. The front room contained a very wide old-time fireplace, capable of holding a large amount of wood, the fire in which was usually kept burning all night. The rear room, which was separated from this one by a strong board partition, was used as the sleeping apartment of the whole household, and had two large bedsteads. Tuesday night, at an early hour, after putting fresh fuel on the fire and securely bolting the door, the family went to bed. How long they had been asleep is not known, but at about eleven o'clock a colored woman living a few hundred yards off saw a lurid glare in the direction of Lorick's house, and going nearer discovered that the interior of the front room was in flames. She immediately gave the alarm. Soon a score of neighbors appeared upon the scene with buckets of water and axes.

WORKING TO SAVE LIFE.

It was at once seen that the only means of escape for the inmates was cut off by the fire in the front room, and the men turned their attention to the rear of the house, and vigorously tried to force an entrance through the massive logs. Incited by the heart rending cries from within they laboured lustily, though the heat was becoming intense. The night was rendered hideous by the terrified screams of the women and children, and their plaintive wails for assistance appalled the stoutest hearted of those present. Through the cracks in the wall could be seen the children huddling together round their mother, and the man was upon his knees supplicating God, in stentorian notes, for a deliverance from the impending doom. The heat grew so intense that the men were forced to retreat and abandon their work before the heavy logs had succumbed to their desperate blows.

ABANDONED TO DEATH.

The situation of the inmates was now hopeless. Various plans were devised for rendering them succor, but all was declared impracticable. In the meantime the flames were making rapid headway, and some of the shingles and logs began falling. The fat lightwood logs now blazed with sudden brightness. The roof began to totter, and down it came with a terrific roar, crushing all before it, burying the nine human beings from sight. The cabin was soon burned to the ground, and nothing but the charred bones and smouldering debris remained to tell the sad tale. To-day the Coroner held a long inquest, and the jury arrived at the conclusion that the fire was accidental, and that the death of the inmates was unavoidable, considering the nature of the burning and the construction of the building. The Lorick family were well to do colored people, and stood well in the neighborhood.

The Pen Versus the Sword.

Dr. Wm. Howard Russell, the celebrated war correspondent, whose pictures of the Zulu campaigns and of the Transvaal Boers have transferred to the Telegraph much of the fame that he originally won for the Times, arrived here yesterday. He is preparing to defend himself against the attack of Sir Garnet Wolseley, who charges him with colouring his letters to the prejudice of the British Army in South Africa. Dr. Russell is a man of energy. He no sooner landed than he made his way to the Horse Guards and asked for an interview with the Duke of Cambridge. He has long been intimate with the Commander-in-Chief, and has long been favoured by the Royal family. He has ridden beside the Prince of Wales' howdah in the jungles of Nepaul, and stood among the elect at the Agra Durbar. It is needless, therefore, to say that he returned triumphant from the interview. The Duke expressed the utmost confidence in his veracity, and the matter will now resolve itself in a literary duel between Sir Garnet and the valiant doctor.

THE LUCAN MASSACRE.

Interview with Father Connolly, who expects to be Arrested.

Hearing of the many rumours concerning the Vigilance Committee in connection with which the name of Father Connolly, the parish priest, was connected, an Advertiser reporter, London, interviewed him upon the subject. He was cordially received by Father Connolly, who is an elderly man with a pleasing open countenance, of medium stature. He appeared to be in great anxiety and expressed fears of being arrested. He assigned as a reason for his fear the bitter hatred which the Donnelly boys, and especially William, had against him. From the statement of Father Connolly it would appear that in June last, in consequence of the great number of depredations which had been committed, his people upon his advice, signed an agreement in a book which he produced. The form of the agreement was very simple, and purported to be made between the Roman Catholics of the parish of Biddulph resolving themselves into a body "for their own mutual protection and assistance in bringing to justice the perpetrators of the deeds which were being perpetrated by unknown parties." The rev. father explained that the purpose which he intended to carry out was this: The Donnellys had been in the habit of committing depredations and stealing things from their neighbors. These articles or goods which were stolen they would leave with a neighbor, who would thus be

BROUGHT INTO THE MESS,

and for fear of personal violence to themselves and injury to their property they would not disclose the crime or their knowledge of the theft. The Donnelly boys, by thus entangling different parties each time a depredation was committed by them, were enabled to gather a number of friends around them, who, although hating them in their hearts, were obliged publicly to befriend them, and were also afraid to give evidence against them. This state of things continued for a long time. Some time ago Thomas Donnelly was arrested upon a charge of robbing a neighbor named Ryan of $600 in money. The case was investigated, and after several adjournments Donnelly was discharged by Squires W. K. Atkinson and McCosh. Although Thomas was acquitted of the charge, a feeling of bitter hatred was engendered by them against Ryan, which showed itself in many ways. After this, a threshing machine that was taken to Ryan's to thresh, was burnt by incendiaries during the night. During last fall Ryan engaged a man named Curtin to come and thresh for him. Thomas Donnelly heard of it, and gave Curtin warning that his machine would be destroyed if he attempted to thresh for Ryan. Upon this threat Curtin refused to do any threshing for Ryan, who, reduced to extremities, appealed to me. Previous to this, I, in company with Mr. Coughlin, M.P., had made strenuous efforts to obtain the release of Robert Donnelly from the Penitentiary, where he was confined for shooting at Constable Everett. In my efforts I was guided mainly by the opinion that I could by this means

WIN OVER THE DONNELLYS

to become respectable neighbors and peaceful subjects. Not doubting but these disinterested efforts on my part would be remembered by the family, I had not the slightest suspicion but if I asked them they would give their consent to Curtin threshing Ryan's grain. Impressed with this belief I went to Thomas Donnelly and asked him as a personal favor to me to allow Curtin to thresh for Ryan. After hesitating he said he would ask John. I went to John, who promised to give me an answer before Sunday, and I went away, fully believing that they would oblige me, but when Sunday came and I saw nothing of John, I felt that my efforts and advice had no weight with them. The Vigilance Committee had met, and upon Mr. Ryan's application, guaranteed to Curtin the value of his machine and any loss of time he might have. Curtin then threshed for Ryan, but they found that the

SHEAVES HAD BEEN FILLED WITH IRON,

harrow pins, horse shoes, stones, &c., which greatly damaged the machine. This aroused great excitement among the friends of Ryan, and shortly afterwards Ryan's barns were burned. I felt it to be my duty then to denounce the burning of the barns from my pulpit, telling my people about it, but never once mentioned the Donnellys. It afterwards came to my knowledge that a number of the Vigilance Committee which I had formed banded together, without my knowledge or consent, and formed a committee of their own, the members, although not taking an oath in a theatrical sense, making a solemn declaration, and without using the form "So help me God," kissed the book. The meetings of this committee cannot be said to have been secret, but they were, of course, private among themselves, as they had no inclination to let everyone hear what their business was. This committee, as far as I can learn, had no officers, and met only at the call of the member who had been victimized. It is not true that I have excommunicated or placed the Donnellys under the bann of the church. Some time ago I received a letter from William which contained some and then said I should have nothing more to do with them—I also referred to the burning of Pat Ryder's barns on Sunday week. I told my people from the pulpit of the occurrence, and pointed out to them the terrible work which had been done by some persons, but did not in any way mention the Donnellys. On Christmas Eve the elder Donnelly and Mrs. Donnelly both came and confessed to me. A few days after Thomas was arrested for robbing Ryan, John Donnelly came to me to confession. I refused to confess him, and told him I thought he intended to confess to an untruth, in order to free his brother and implicate others. He then went away. So far as I am concerned, I am perfectly innocent of any connection with, or knowledge of, the movements of the second Vigilance Committee. I expect to be arrested, as I know that from the bitter hatred which William Donnelly bears me he will do all in his power to have me arrested.

VERY INSULTING REMARKS,

THE PRISONERS.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—But little has transpired to-day in regard to the Donnelly tragedy and the excitement has quite calmed down, the murder being now treated by the public as an old story. Still every scrap of evidence tending to unravel the mystery and establish the identity of the culprits, is looked forward to with anxious interest. The Police Magistrate has been requested to assist in the preliminary examination of the prisoners, which is to take place at the Court House next week. Mr. Lawrason does not feel able to do the work and will ask the Crown Attorney to get some other magistrate to fill his place. It is not likely that the preliminary examination will last very long, as a short-hand writer has been engaged to take down the evidence and thus facilitate the business. County Constable Pope left for the scene of the murder this morning bearing special instructions to the Chief of Police, from the County Crown Attorney, in reference to the working of the case around Lucan. The prisoners are daily visited by their friends and spiritual advisers, and are very reticent on all matters connected with Biddulph. Some of them appear very light-hearted, passing their time in singing and laughing, while others are very quiet and seem to think the affair more serious.

Special to the Review.

THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

LUCAN, Feb. 11.—Preparations for the meeting of the coroner's jury are being hurriedly carried on, and to all appearances there will be no jar in the proceedings. The village is quiet and no unusual stir is visible amongst the detectives. Mr. Hugh McMahon, Q. C., of London, is already here on behalf of the accused parties, and the Crown Attorney and Mr. E. Meredith will look after the prosecution. Chief Williams has just arrived from London, having the boy Connors and his mother with him. It would appear that the amount of evidence about to be offered before the coroner will not be very voluminous.

A DREAM AND ITS RESULTS.

BY REV. JOHN E. EDWARDS, D.D.

Mrs. M——, a lady of more than ordinary intelligence, lived many years ago in Petersburg, Virginia. She was a married woman, and the mother of four children at the time of the occurrence which I now relate. The writer received the story from her own lips before she was called away from earth. She died at an advanced age, having adorned her Christian profession by a life of exemplary piety.

Martha, her eldest child, was a beautiful girl, at the time referred to being about fourteen years of age. She was her mother's idol, though her mother was unconscious of the fact. Handsome in person, sweet in disposition, gentle in her manners, and withal devotedly attached to her mother, she occupied a supreme place in her affections. Just as she was verging on womanhood she was taken ill, and gradually grew from bad to worse. The most assiduous care in the way of nursing and the most constant attention of the most skilful physician failed to arrest the disease. The mother was frantic in her grief as it became apparent that Martha must die. Amid all, the sweet girl was calm, patient and resigned. At last the death angel came and released the wan and wasted sufferer from the grasp of disease.

The mother was positively inconsolable. Nothing could allay the bitter anguish of her broken heart. She lost her appetite, refused to take her food, sleep deserted her pillow, and gradually she wasted away almost to a skeleton. She wept until she had no more tears to weep. Her friends exhausted every device to divert her mind from the painful subject. Her pastor prayed, counselled, and admonished in vain. It seemed she must waste away and die.

In this state of mind, late one night, she fell asleep, with a few stray tear-drops on her shrivelled cheek. Her sleep was fitful for a while, and then she fell into a profound slumber, and sleeping she dreamed. Suddenly, as she related the vision to me, a bright and beautiful angel, clothed in the habiliments of light, appeared to her, and in a sweet and winning voice, tenderly asked,

"Would you see Martha?"

Instantly she responded,

"Yes, above all things in the universe I would see her."

"Then follow me," said the heavenly visitant.

She rose and followed her guide without a word of further enquiry. Presently a stately and magnificent edifice greeted her wondering and half-bewildered gaze. The door of entrance was open. She ascended the steps and entered the resounding hall, following closely behind the angel, not knowing whither he would lead her. Without even casting a glance behind or saying a word, suddenly the angel paused and with his ethereal finger touched a secret spring. Noiselessly a door swung wide open and revealed the inmates to her astonished gaze. There was a throng of excited revellers in the midst of bachanalian excesses, flushed with wine, and presenting a revolting scene of debauchery and worldly dissipation. The angel pointing his white index finger at the most conspicuous figure in the group, the one who led the dance and was most boisterous in the mirth and festive glee, and then turning his eye on the mother said:

"There is Martha, behold her."

The mother passionately exclaimed:

"No, no! that is not Martha—I was raising her for God, and for his church, and for heaven. That is not Martha."

"So you thought," responded the angel in tenderest accents; "but she was your idol. You could deny her nothing. That is what she would have been."

The door closed.

"Follow me," said the angel.

She followed with a palpitating heart. Her mind was filled with anxious and painful thought. The angel paused and again touched a secret spring, and the door flew open as if on golden hinges. Before her enraptured eyes there was displayed a vast multitude of the most resplendent forms she had ever conceived of in human mould. Brows of lustrous beauty, faces radiant with supernal light, voices sweetly modulated, and all enrobed in spotless white. Not a trace of sorrow was on any face. It was heaven, and the angel, pointing to the brightest and most beautiful of the joyous and happy throng, said, turning his glad eye on the mother,

"There is Martha as she is."

The dreamer awoke, but awoke from that dream in unutterable ecstasy—she awoke praising God. And in relating this dream she said to the writer, "Dream though it was, to me it was an apocalypse. I brushed away my tears. My heart was relieved of its sorrow, and I now believe, and I have long believed, that Martha's death was best for her and best for her mother."—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. Price 25 cents. wd30

A bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worth more to the sufferer than the $40,000 pearl that Cleopatra drank. It proves a sure remedy in soreness of a part, or muscular pain, Stiff Joints, Contraction of the Muscles, outward Tumors, Swelled Neck, Enlarged Glands, etc., and is unsurpassed as a remedy for Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, etc. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. d31w7-2w

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1880.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Ash Wednesday.

To-day being Ash Wednesday, there were services in the Church of England and Roman Catholic Churches.

The Hall Poor Trust.

The bill respecting the William Hall Peterborough Protestant Poor Trust was on Tuesday, referred back to the Standing Committee on Private Bills for further consideration.

Handsome Contributions.

On Monday the Rev. Father O'Connell, of South Douro, telegraphed to Bishop McEvels, Galway County, Ireland, to draw on him for $450, to be distributed among the sufferers of that district, irrespective of creed. The amount was subscribed by the Rev. Father's parishioners, he himself heading the list with $100.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to-day are: Moderate to fresh, easterly to south-easterly winds; partly cloudy to cloudy weather, followed by rain areas to-morrow. Peterborough, the thermometer indicated this morning at 7 o'clock 4°, rising to 25° at noon, with a moderate wind.

O. Y. B.

At the meeting at present being held in Port Hope of the Grand Lodge of the order of Orange Young Britons, we observe among the names of the members those of D. Jameson, of Peterborough, Deputy Grand Lecturer and Grand Master of True Blues; Geo. C. Harkness, of Peterborough, Deputy Grand Lecturer; and S. Clegg, of Peterborough.

The Midland Central Poultry Show.

The annual exhibition of the Midland Central Poultry Association now being held at Peterborough, was opened last evening in the old Music Hall with as fine a display of birds as were ever exhibited in this town. There are 14 classes, embracing fowls and chicks of almost every variety, and a great improvement in stock is noticeable. The attendance last evening was small, as is usually the case on the first day. To-day, however, there has been a large number of visitors in attendance, and the various exhibits were examined very closely.

Another Old Settler Gone.

Our obituary column to-day contains the notice of the death of Mr. George Crawford, one of the early pioneers of this county. Mr. Crawford came to Canada with his father about fifty years ago, and settled in Douro, where his father had a saw mill, on a creek which empties into the Otonabee a few miles south of Lakefield. He was of a very retiring and unassuming disposition, and was never married. In early days he held the position of Captain in the militia. He died at the residence of his sister, Mrs. John Whyte, with whom he has latterly lived.

Toronto and Ottawa Railway.

The following is the Globe report of the proceedings in the Railway Committee on Tuesday in regard to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Bill:—

At a meeting of this Committee to-day Mr. Scott's Bill respecting the Toronto and Ottawa Railway was brought up. This Bill provided for the consolidation and amendment of the several Acts relating to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway Company, formerly the Huron and Quebec Railway Company, and for the extension of time for the commencement and completion of the proposed road; also for legalizing certain by-laws granting aid by means of bonuses to the Company.

Mr. Caldwell moved to strike out different clauses in respect to grouping townships for bonus purposes.

Mr. Dumble, of Peterborough, Mayor McIntosh, of Ottawa, and others, addressed the Committee in opposition to the motion. On a vote being taken it stood 15 to 14 in favor of retaining the clause.

Several amendments were made to the Bill, the principal one providing that nothing should prejudicially affect any proceeding now pending, or which may hereafter, within three months, be commenced for the purpose of quashing the by-law of the county of Lanark, after which the Bill was passed.

SELWYN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SCHOOL STANDING.—The following is the standing of the pupils of S. S. No. 7, Smith, for the month of January, 1880:—

FOURTH CLASS.—Nettie Preston, 1st; Hattie Fitzgerald, 2nd; W. Geo. Preston, 3rd; Edw. Fanning, 4th; Winifred Blewett, 5th.

THIRD CLASS.—Laurence Fanning, 1st; Sydney Blewett, 2nd; Addy Blewett, 3rd; Emma Sage, 4th.

SENIOR SECOND.—Alfred Sanderson, 1st; Edw. Fitzgerald, 2nd; Jno. Fanning, 3rd; Minnie Blewett, 4th.

JUNIOR SECOND.—Josephine Blewett, 1st; Ester Blewett, 2nd; M. J. Northey, 3rd; Geo. Sage, 4th.

SECOND "A".—Walter Rosborough, 1st; Fred. Fanning, 2nd.

FIRST CLASS.—Wilson Blewett, 1st; Edw. Preston, 2nd; Jamie Blewett, 3rd.

YOUNG'S POINT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LAKEVIEW HOUSE.—Mr. James Kearney is having the floor of his bar-room laid with maple wood, planed; it will look well and likewise wear well. He finds the traffic by river men in the summer with spikes in their shoes is not the thing for a pine wood floor.

SAW LOGS.—Mr. Fobert is getting along splendidly in the woods with the stuff he has contracted for. He has now about 2,000 basswood logs drawn and piled along the lake shore here for Mr. Jas. Z. Rogers, of Ashburnham. If the present sleighing continues he will be well satisfied with his winter's work.

TEAMS FOR THE SHANTIES.—This place is kept lively with men and teams on their way to their respective shanties. Mr. Kearney does quite a business in his line. The teamsters stop there going and returning, to feed themselves and horses.

YOUNG'S POINT AND APSLEY MAIL STAGE.—The residents around here and in the back townships are opposed to the long talked of arrangement, that the mails should be made up in Lakefield for this route instead of in Peterborough. Passengers from the back country would have to remain over in Lakefield all night according to the present mail arrangement from there, which is not of the accommodating kind.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The Municipal Council of this township met on Monday, the 2nd day of February. All the members present, the Reeve, H. Collins, in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A communication from the Irish Relief Committee of the Town of Peterborough asking a grant or the appointment of a committee to collect subscriptions from the residents of the township, was received. Applications for the office of Clerk were received from W. H. Hill, James Brealy, and John Wood; for that of Assessor from Wm. Collins and John J. Bennett; and from Matthew Johnston for the office of Collector. A by-law appointing certain township officers received its second and third readings, and was passed with the following result:—John Wood, Clerk, salary $60.00; Thos. Bradburn, Treasurer; John J. Bennett, Assessor, salary $40.00; and Matthew Johnston, Collector, salary $35.00. Moved by Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Howden,—That Councillor Forster be paid the sum of $3 for work performed by himself and team, in connection with the taking of levels between 9 and 10, also that $1 be allowed ex-Councillor Leary for attending at the same.—Carried. Moved by Mr. Howden, seconded by Mr. Dunlop,—That the sum of $3 be to given Mrs. McIlmoil through Councillor Forster, Commissioner, for the purchase of 1 cwt. of flour.—Carried. On motion of Mr. Howden, seconded by Mr. Brealy, the Reeve and Clerk were instructed to take proper securities from the Treasurer. Moved by Mr. Dunlop, seconded by Mr. Howden,—That By-law No. 282, to appoint pound keepers, fence viewers and pathmasters for the current year, be read a first time.—Carried. On motion of Mr. Brealy, seconded by Mr. Forster, the Council adjourned until Monday, the 8th day of March, to meet for the appointment of the above mentioned officers and for the transaction of other township business.

PORT HOPE.

ATTRACTING CAPITALISTS.—The Town Council have been discussing the subject of advertising with a view to attract capitalists, and has appointed a standing committee of five to confer with persons thinking of establishing manufactures in the town.

PRESENTATION.—At a meeting of the Port Hope Curling Club, an address and a pair of handsome curling stones were presented to the Chaplain of the Club, Rev. R. J. Beattie.

G. T. R. STATION.—The Guide says:—Workmen are busy to-day in preparing for the making of extensive improvements at the Grand Trunk Railway station. All the offices in the building will be changed; the general waiting room will be at the eastern end of the building, where the ticket agency offices now are, while the ladies' waiting-room will be at the western end of the building, entirely separate from the general waiting-room. The ticket and agent's office will occupy the centre. We are glad to note any improvement, and we suppose this is as good a one as can be done with the present building; but the improvement needed is an entirely new building. No doubt the present one was large enough when the road was first opened—twenty-five years ago—but now it is totally inadequate to the wants of the travelling community. With the improvements contemplated next season, of a double track, &c., no doubt the management will take into consideration the erection of a new station building. We understand that the ladies' waiting-room will be entirely re-furnished.

PERSIA AND HERAT.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The Times says we shall learn with pleasure that the permission to Persia to occupy Herat does not involve a guarantee of secure possession. If England is to be liable for what may happen in the direction of Herat, there seems to be an almost endless vista of responsibility opening out more and more widely at each remove. A demonstration by Russia which would have had little or no meaning before, might be the ground of a very grave suspicion in view of its possible effect on the state of affairs at Herat.

EFFECTS OF A STORM.

PLYMOUTH, Feb. 10.—The Orient line steamer Chimborazo, for Australia, returned during the gale. Off Ushant two persons were washed overboard, two were killed, and seventeen injured. The steamer lost six boats and sustained other damages.

LIBERALS AND HOME RULERS.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Lord Hartington, the liberal leader in the Commons, last night said that though he did not think that a large measure of emigrants from Ireland were necessary, there ought to be a re-distribution of the population. He protested against the presumption that the present distress was due to the land act, and defended himself against imputations in connection with the Home Rule and the Liverpool election, though he would not have supported Lord Ramsay's candidature for the Commons, had he declared himself a Home Ruler; he regarded his pledge to vote for a Committee of Enquiry, as a difference of opinion as to the manner in which certain demands should be met. O'Donnell, the Home Ruler, said the colleagues and friends of Parnell are thoroughly resolved to have an opportunity of convicting the Government of their misrepresentations concerning him.

A DISCLAIMER.

MADRID, Feb. 10.—The Press denies that the Archduke Albert is to take part in the ceremonies and festivities on the 25th anniversary of the Czar's accession to the throne.

ILL-TREATMENT OF SAILORS.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The Caimacan of Alexanderetta has been dismissed in consequence of recent ill-treatment of some French sailors at Alexanderetta.

SWISS FORTS.

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—The German Press express much satisfaction with the intentions of the Swiss Government to erect new forts on the French frontier. The necessity for preventing the French from making an invasion of Germany through Switzerland is universally recognised here.

A REGICIDE SENTENCED.

MADRID, Feb. 10.—The Judge of the Tribunal of First Instance passed sentence yesterday on Otero, the would-be-assassin of King Alfonso, declaring that the facts proved in Court constituted the crime of regicide without any extenuating circumstance, and with aggravated premeditation in a perfect state of cognizance and malice; also that by the confession of the accused and testimony of witnesses, Francisco Otero had been proved the responsible author of the crime, and in consequence that Otero had incurred the penalty of death with the accessories, and therefore the said Francisco Otero should suffer death by the garrote or strangulation.

LOSS OF A FRENCH STEAMER.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The French steamer Valentine, from Cardiff for Dieppe, has foundered. Sixteen persons were drowned.

THE HOME RULE VOTE.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Mr. Shaw's Home Rule amendment to the Address was rejected by a vote of 216 against 66. The Address was then agreed to. A number of leading Liberals, including the, Marquis of Hartington, voted with the Government. Four Irish Liberals, 24 Liberals and 38 Home Rulers voted in the minority. Davitt, Killen, and other members of the Irish Land League, were in the galleries during the debate.

SEIZURE OF ARMS.

GALWAY, Feb. 10.—For some time past suspicions had been entertained by the local authorities that the farmers in the southern portion of that county were preparing to arm themselves and to make common cause against any process servers who might come into the neighbourhood for the purpose of ejecting any of the tenantry from their holdings. Having traced certain rumors to a reliable source, the constabulary seized a quantity of concealed arms and ammunition in a farmer's house in the hamlet of Esker, Loughrea parish, Galway county. Arrests are said to be imminent under the provisions of the Peace Preservation Act, which makes it illegal for any one to bear arms on his person or to have them in his residence without first obtaining a special license from the county bench of magistrates.

NIHILISM AND SOCIALISM.

BERLIN, Feb. 10.—Rumours are in circulation here that as the result of a correspondence which has been going on for some months past between the representatives of the different Governments, Prince Bismarck will summon a Congress of the Powers to meet at Berlin to concert measures for the suppression of the Socialist, Communist, and Nihilist propaganda which under various guises have been giving so much trouble throughout Europe. This movement is said to have originated in a wish of the Czar, expressed to Prince Bismarck in a conversation which took place during a visit at this capital made by the Emperor last summer.

AMERICAN.

SHERMAN'S APPOINTMENTS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Sherman is a good deal concerned at the newspaper charges that he is making appointments in the Treasury to secure delegates to Chicago, and has prepared a list of appointments made since last August which entirely disproves these statements.

O. Y. B.—On Wednesday the Grand Lodge of Orange Young Britons marched in an imposing procession headed by the 46th Regiment Band to the Methodist Church, where a special sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Laird.

A ROMANCE.—The Times gives publicity to the following romantic story:—"About fifteen years since a young girl fell though the G.T.R. viaduct in this town, and was only saved from a most horrible death by the style of clothing, which was then in vogue, she wore. A good many witnessed the fearful fall, but one young boy was the first to reach the girl with such an astonishing experience, and re-assure her that she was not hurt. The escape was a most miraculous one, but the sequel is no less so, and is certainly very romantic. That lad, now grown up to manhood, and holding a respectable position in Port Hope, has gone to New York to wed the little girl of fifteen years ago, who has blossomed into a beautiful and accomplished young lady."

Irish Volunteer Bill.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—To a motion for the second reading of the Irish Volunteer Bill, Biggar has handed to the Clerk of the House an amendment, that in view of the fact that a Government prosecution is now hanging over several earnest and true Irishmen for advocating in a temperate manner the amendment of the iniquities of the land laws, it is not desirable to put such power into the hands of the Executive, as is proposed by such bill, and that it be read a second time this day six months.

THE FISHERY QUESTION.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—In the House of Commons on Thursday Mr. Gourlay, M.P., a Liberal, who is a merchant and shipowner, will ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the claim of the United States for $103,000 for damages by Newfoundland fishermen in Fortune Bay had been amicably arranged, what measures are being adopted for the purpose of abrogating or amending clause 32 of the Treaty of Washington relative to the Canadian and the Newfoundland inshore fisheries; and whether steps are being taken for [illegible] Province of the Convention of 1818, which admits American fishermen to enter British North American bays or harbours for the purpose of shelter, repairing damages, and the purchase of wood and water, intended to exclude them from going inshore to traffic, tranship fish, purchase stores, mend nets and hire seamen.

THE CESSION OF HERAT.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 11.—The Journal de St. Petersburg says the restitution of Herat to Persia has been a tradition in the policy of Russia for the last half century. The cession has always been opposed by England, who now abandons her former views out of jealousy of Russia. The latter will not allow herself to be turned from the Royal rational policy she has hitherto pursued, which is based upon her good relations with Persia, and if Persia despises her friendship, she does so at her peril. The Golos observes that the friendship of Russia is of vital necessity to Persia.

THE TICHBORNE CASE.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A despatch from Sydney states that the Australian Government has released Cresswell, alias Orton, the pseudo Sir Roger Tichborne, from the insane asylum at Parmetta, New South Wales, where he has been for some time confined.

FLIGHT OR SUICIDE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The Times' Baltimore despatch says that John Allan, a prominent grain dealer, who disappeared on Thursday, is still missing. Miss Cottrell was Poindexter's affianced bride, and when she charged Curtis with misconduct, Poindexter horsewhipped him. Curtis subsequently attacked Poindexter, and was fatally shot.

CRUELTY TO A CHILD.

NEW CITY, N.Y., Feb. 12.—The Rockland County Court will try Mrs. Antoinette Von Weick for alleged cruelties to Josephine Hellerman, aged 9, who has lived with her for three years. It is asserted that Mrs. Von Weick sent an idiotic servant with a blackened face into the child's room to frighten her, filled her mouth with Cayenne pepper, and by threatening to whip her caused her to jump from a second storey window, to her serious injury.

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY.

Another Farmer's Tale of Retaliation—The Verdict of the Community.

Leaving Mr. Grant's, your reporter, who believed that his identity was not known to another person in the village besides the magistrate, was stopped on the street by a man, apparently a tiller of the soil, who said

"I WANT TO TELL YOU A STORY."

The man found a ready listener to his story, which is given below. He said his name was James Carswell, and that he lived on the 11th concession of Biddulph. "I have had," he went on to say, "considerable trouble with the Donnellys. I'll tell you how it commenced. When the post-office at Granton was robbed several years ago, James Donnelly, who has been dead for some time, was suspected of being one of the robbers. He was a squatter on the fifty acres of land adjoining my farm. After the robbery he cleared out to the States, and remained away for five years. During part of that time his father and brothers worked the place, which, however, was claimed by the Canada Company, and advertised for sale. I went to Toronto, but not for the purpose of buying this land, having another place in my mind. But while in Toronto I was persuaded to purchase it, and on coming back I offered to pay the Donnellys for any improvements they had made on the land. I met Bob in Lucan, and told him what I had done and intended to do. He said the property did not belong to the Canada Company, and that they would not settle for anything less than the value of the place. That ended my dealings with them, as I did not feel disposed to pay for the place twice. The Canada Company ejected the Donnellys, and

I TOOK POSSESSION OF THE LAND.

After I had been living on it about a year and a half John Donnelly came to me one day and asked if I would give up possession to James, who was coming back from the States, if he made recompense to me for all this money I had outlayed on the place. I made answer that I would, with a hundred welcomes, as I was afraid of the Donnellys doing me personal injury if I did not. A month after, Jim came along and said he did not want the farm in any shape—that he could buy cheaper and better land elsewhere, he added in a friendly manner. On Christmas eve, 1875,

MY STABLES AND SHEDS WERE BURNED

to the ground. In the morning I saw tracks in the snow, and followed them. They led to the Donnellys' house, and I had no doubt in my mind that they caused the fire. Four years ago last July they burned all my hay and killed my two horses. I was satisfied that they were the parties who committed both deeds. Blood was seen on Jim Donnelly's coat at Easter the next morning. I lost all the crop of one hundred and fifty acres that year on account of my horses being killed. I could neither borrow nor buy the animals from neighbors, because they were afraid of the Donnellys. Consequently my crops went to waste in the fields, which was a serious loss to me. Two years ago last October all my crops, worth fully $2,000,

WERE CONSUMED BY FIRE.

I have not the least doubt as to the parties who started the fire. I was afraid for my life to prosecute any member of the Donnelly family, who were continually trying to pick quarrels with me and on one occasion a Lucan magistrate declined to grant me protection from them, saying that if they attacked me all Lucan could not save me. In the spring of 1878 they set fire to my reaping machine, which was standing in the field, and at the same time broke all the iron work about it, so that the machine was rendered completely useless.

This was Mr. Carswell's story, which he told with a considerable degree of sadness. He said his losses through the Donnellys' deeds cost him his farm. There were many farmers in the township who could tell stories similar to this, but he was the heaviest sufferer of them all. The feeling in Granton over the tragedy is much about the same as in the township and Lucan. The residents seem to take it in a matter-of-fact sort of way, and accept it as a kind of vengeance on the Donnellys for all the depredations they are alleged to have committed. As your reporter drove through the township it was evident that this feeling largely prevailed.

SUSPECTED [illegible].

LUCAN, Feb. 11.—At the inquest the boy Connors gave evidence implicating James Carroll, Thomas Ryder and John Purtell in the murder. He could not recognize the others who were present. The inquest was adjourned that Carroll might be present.

THE COUNTY RAILWAY BY-LAW.

ON Saturday, February 21st, the ratepayers of the County will be called upon to vote on the By-law aiding the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. It is unnecessary for us to enlarge upon the advantages to be derived from this road, as they were so fully appreciated in the County as to induce them to vote a bonus of $150,000. No further grant is asked by the present by-law, but only such a modification of the terms as would make the last instalment payable when the road is completed between Peterborough and Ottawa, instead of Toronto and Ottawa, and also removing the condition requiring municipal aid to the amount of $1,000,000.

This change is necessitated by the failure to pass a by-law in Toronto, causing that section to stand for the present. The farmers will still have the full benefit they desired, the cheapening of conveyance which will add just so many cents to the value of every bushel of wheat they sell.

We caution our readers to be careful how they listen to the interested opposition of the emissaries of rival lines. They have before now strongly opposed bonuses to this Company, and are doing so in this case. The very fact, however, of their terror at the prospect of completion, shows that they have at present a monopoly, which in the public interests should be opposed.

WHERE IS THIS THING TO STOP!

IT will be within the memory of most of our readers that shortly after the campaign of last June, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, accompanied by Mr. S. C. Wood, Provincial Treasurer, Mr. Langmuir, the well-paid Inspector of Prisons, Col. Gilmour, Clerk of the House, and several other gentlemen, left Toronto for a trip via the Dawson route to Manitoba, and returned by way of Chicago. Now we have the fruits of the trip in the estimates just laid upon the table of the House, demanding $5,571 of the people's money for these gentlemen's little pleasure trip. What think you of it? His Honor receives a salary of $10,000, and costs the country about another $10,000 annually, and yet the country must be at the expense of giving him holiday trips besides; the Hon. S. C. Wood jumps from a salary of $1,600 a year at Lindsay into one at Toronto yielding $4,000, besides incidentals, and yet the Province must give him a summer outing; and then our nobby Inspector of Prisons is so badly paid at $3,000 a year and expenses that he too must have his holiday at the Province's expense.

In our humble opinion the expenditure of the people's money for such a trip—a trip without the shadow of excuse in the interests of the Province—is simply disgraceful. Of course the money will have to be voted because it has already been paid, but if its appropriation is not accompanied by such strong words of condemnation as to forbid its repetition, the House will sadly fail in its duty. We shall look to see how Mr. Blezard will vote on such a question with some interest.

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—After routine the House went into Committee of Supply and the emigration items were passed.

AID TO RAILWAYS.

TORONTO, Feb. 6.—On motions for returns as to the aid granted to railways, there was some discussion as to the Coteau Landing Bridge.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT.

There was some debate on Mr. Calvin's bill allowing debts to be deducted from the assessment of personalty. The bill was allowed to stand.

GAME PROTECTION.

A bill by Mr. Caldwell to amend the Game Protection Act excited much discussion, and was referred to a Committee of Sportsmen.

In Committee of Supply, items for the Public Works Department were passed.

MUNICIPAL INDEBTEDNESS.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—A motion of Mr. Ross, for a return of municipal debenture indebtedness, was passed after some discussion.

THE UNIVERSITIES.

DIVISION COURTS.

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—The bill extending the jurisdiction of the Division Courts, was read a second time after considerable opposition, there being a great deal of dissatisfaction with the measure, both in the House and in the country. As the bill afforded another opportunity of increasing Government patronage, of course it was not missed.

CAPREOL'S FOLLY.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Mr. Mowat, in replying to a question from Mr. Widdifield, praised up the Huron and Ontario Ship Canal, but thought it was a work to be undertaken by the Dominion.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

OPENING OF THE SECOND SESSION OF THE FOURTH PARLIAMENT OF CANADA.

The Governor-General Delivers the Speech From the Throne—A Full Programme for the Present Session.

Special to the Review.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—This day at o'clock p.m., His Excellency the Governor-General proceeded in state to the Chamber of the Senate in the Parliament Buildings and took his seat on the throne. The members of the Senate being assembled, His Excellency was pleased to command the attendance of the House of Commons, and that House being present, His Excellency was pleased to open the second session of the fourth Parliament of the Dominion of Canada with the following speech from the throne:—

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I have great pleasure in meeting you again for the despatch of the business of the country. The abundant harvest with which Providence has blessed Canada is a cause for the deepest thankfulness, and I heartily congratulate you on the evidence which surround us of a recovery from the commercial and industrial depression which has so long weighed down the energies of the people.

Our returning prosperity should, I think, direct our attention to the less fortunate circumstances of our fellow subjects in Ireland, where so much destitution prevails, and I invite your consideration of the best means of showing our practical sympathy with their distress.

We have reason to congratulate ourselves on the number of settlers who have during the past year came into our North-West from Great Britain and the United States, as well as from the other provinces of the Dominion. The visit of members of the Royal Commission on the agricultural distress in the mother country, and the favourable reports of the tenant farmers, who, at the instance of my Government, have examined into the farming capabilities of the Dominion, will, it is believed, largely increase the number of immigrants during the present year. Preparations must be made for their reception, and your attention will be specially called to this subject.

Every effort has been made to hasten the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway from Lake Superior to the Red River, and no doubt is entertained that the railway will be opened for traffic between those important points within time specified in the contracts. Under the authority given by Parliament last session, nearly one hundred miles, from Red River to the western boundary of Manitoba, has been placed under contract, and tenders are about being asked for, for the construction of another hundred miles from the boundary westward. The completion of these two sections will, at an early day, afford railway facilities through two hundred miles of the most fertile land in the North-West. After an exploratory survey of the the line from Port Superior to the Pine River Pass, and through the Peace River country, it has been decided to adopt the location of the line to Burrard Inlet, and contracts have been awarded for one hundred and twenty-seven miles of the railway between Emory's Bar, on the Fraser River, and Savona's Ferry. This work will be vigorously proceeded with so soon as the spring opens. Its construction will complete the most difficult portion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and secure connection by steam of the fertile district of Kamloops with the capital of British Columbia.

The adoption of a rigid system of economy in the management of the Intercolonial Railway has, without impairing the efficiency of its working, effected such a diminution of expense as to award the belief that the country will in future be relieved from any considerable burden in connection with its operation.

In consequence of the entire failure of the usual food supply of the Indians in the North-West, a large expenditure has been necessary to save them from starvation. It is hoped that the efforts which are now being made to settle the several bands on the Reserves, and to induce them to betake themselves to the cultivation of the soil, may prevent the necessity of similar calls for relief in the future.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The estimates for the ensuing year will be laid before you. They have been prepared with all due regard to economy.

You will be pleased to learn that the effect of the tariff of last session in the development of the varied industries of the country has, on the whole, been very satisfactory. The experience acquired since it came into operation in March last, has suggested the expediency of some amendments to which your attention will be directed.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

Bills for the better organization of the Civil Service, for the consolidation of the Inland Revenue laws, and for the amendment of the acts relating to the Dominion Lands, to the Public Works, to the Indians of the North-West, and to the Mounted Police Force, will be laid before you.

The acts incorporating the Banks of the Dominion will expire next year, and the present would seem a favourable time for a full consideration of our banking system, and of the subject of the currency as connected with that system.

The subject of the laws relating to insolvency will doubtless engage your attention.

The increasing foreign trade of Canada and the prospect that Her Majesty's Government will enter ere long into negotiations with foreign nations on the subject of their trade and commercial relations, demand our closest attention and watchfulness, while the rapid development of the Dominion is continually giving rise to important matters requiring the support and action of the Imperial Government with the concurrence of Her Majesty. I therefore recommend you to sanction the appointment of a permanent representative of Canada in London, to guard her various interests.

The subjects I have mentioned are of great importance. I commend them with full confidence in your wisdom and patriotism to your best consideration.

LINDSAY.

THE HON. S. C. WOOD.—The Toronto Telegram, in a series of articles on "Local Celebrities", gives a column to the Hon. S. C. Wood, M. P. P., Provincial Treasurer, in which praise is mingled with criticism. One paragraph runs as follows:—

"It is rumoured, but with what truth we cannot say, that he will not again contest South Victoria or any other constituency, but that on the expiration of the present Parliament, he will retire from public life by accepting a Government appointment. It is said that the Treasurer's heart is set on a shrievalty. If so, he will probably pass away to join the McKellars, Gows and other good souls who have deserved well of the party. If Mr. Wood has really decided to quit public life, he displays much of the wisdom of the serpent. But for the active influence and exertions of Father Stafford and other influential party supporters in Lindsay last June, Mr. Wood's defeat was an assured fact, and as he is as high in political life now as he can ever expect to get, he does well to take care of himself while he has the chance."

NORWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

STEAM SAW MILL.—A Mr. Coon, of Castleton, is erecting at Round Lake, 10 miles north-east of Norwood, a steam saw mill. He is building the mill high enough to be able to occupy the upper part as a grist mill. The same machinery is intended to run both mills. The boiler and smoke stack passed through the village on Tuesday. Mr. Coon is sanguine of success in his enterprise.

WEATHER.—The weather of the past week has been changeable and stormy. A heavy storm of wind and snow set in on Sunday night and the roads drifted a little. On Tuesday it was snowing and the sleighing is now good. Business is improving, and those having contracts for wood &c., are taking advantage of the sleighing. Grain is again moving; oats are coming in more lively at 30c.

SCHOOL BOARD.—A general meeting of the School Board was held in the Town Hall on Tuesday last. General business was transacted.

THE PULPIT.—The Rev. Mr. Thom preached in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning last, and at South Dummer in the evening, Mr. Buck filling the vacancy in the evening.

RETURNED HOME.—The Rev. Mr. Fotheringham returned home last week, and resumed his labors on Sunday. He preached at the morning and evening services in his own pulpit, and in the afternoon at Hastings, as is his custom.

BAND CARNIVAL.—The skating carnival in aid of the Norwood Cornet Band came off last week, and, as was expected, proved a success in every respect. The number of costumes was equal to former occasions, and the different representations were well executed. The judges found it a difficult task to award the prizes, each costume seeming to be perfectly represented. The Pickle Castor was awarded to Mr. Fred. Brennan representing "A Spanish Courtier," and Miss Mullins, who represented "Winter," received the Silver Cup. The judges were Mr. J. B. Pearce, Mr. W. E. Roxburgh and Mr. Ray, and the audience seemed rather surprised at their decision.

THE CARNIVAL AT HASTINGS.—The first carnival of the season took place at Hastings on Tuesday and was a brilliant affair. A great many persons from here went down to it. The Hastings Cornet Band volunteered its assistance, and the managers did all in their power to make the affair worthy of patronage.

THE CLERK'S SALARY.—There was an error last week in stating that W. H. Mullins' salary as Clerk was $50. It is now only $35, an increase of $10 over last year.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY BY-LAW.—At the request of a number of ratepayers, the Reeve called a public meeting, to be held in the Town Hall here on Wednesday, February 11th, to discuss important matters in connection with the above by-law. Ratepayers from adjoining municipalities were invited to attend and take part in the meeting. There was much discussion, but the meeting was largely in favor of the by-law. You shall have a fuller report next week.

A REVEREND gentleman, while visiting a parishioner, had occasion, in the course of conversation, to refer to the Bible; and on asking for the article, the master of the house ran to bring it, and came back with two leaves of the book in his hand. LAKEFIELD NEWS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Municipal Council of Lakefield was held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening, the 9th inst. Mr. R. C. Strickland, the Reeve, took the chair sharp on the time appointed. Councillors present,—Messrs. Nelson, Horner, McWilliams and Garbutt. The minutes of the former meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Urquhart, one of the deputation sent to Toronto about the Lakefield dam, being present, was called upon by the Councillors, and gave a very [illegible] and interesting account of his visit to Toronto, his reception by the Government, and the prospects of the difficulty with regard to the dam being removed.

Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Nelson,—That the following accounts be paid, viz.:—

A by-law received its several readings, appointing the following officers for the present year, viz.:—Thomas Sacret, Assessor, at a salary of $30; Isaac Watson, Road Master and Health Inspector, at a dollar per diem for the time actually engaged in working for the corporation, and five dollars as a salary as Health Inspector.

Moved by Councillor Nelson, seconded by Councillor Horner,—That Mr. G. J. Galvin be appointed to assist the assessor in assessing that portion of Lakefield School Section outside of the corporation of Lakefield, at a salary of five dollars.—Carried.

A lively discussion took place about the necessity of appointing a competent village constable at a small salary.

Councillor Horner and the Reeve argued in favor of appointing Mr. Geo. Cochrane at a salary of $60 dollars and costs, if he would take it.

Councillor Nelson was afraid of the expense. Councillors McWilliams and Garbutt said they thought it would be better to wait until Mr. Cochrane's return before taking action.

Moved by Councillor Nelson, seconded by Councillor Horner,—That the Council do now adjourn to meet again at the call of the Reeve.—Carried.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Lakefield School Board was held in the Council Room on Tuesday evening last. Members present,—Messrs. Galvin, Clarin, Sanders and Cox. Mr. Galvin, the Chairman of the Board, presided; the Secretary, Mr. W. H. Casement, was also present. The minutes of former meeting were read and confirmed. Mr. Shearer, the master of the school, handed in his monthly report, which, upon motion of Mr. Clarin, seconded by Mr. Sanders, was received and adopted. It will be found elsewhere.

Moved by Mr. Sanders, seconded by Mr. Clarin,—That this Board do now adjourn to meet at the call of the Chairman.

THE BREAD MANIA.

Bread baking has been the great centre of interest and excitement in Lakefield during the week passed. Three fresh baking concerns have been or are about to be established in the village. The Messrs. Baptie have begun baking in the bakery lately occupied by Mr. Peterson; Messrs. Peterson & Dumper have commenced operations in the bakery on the corner of Queen and [illegible] Streets; and Mr. W. H. O'Neil is commencing in the bakery on Church Street. Lakefield will surely be well supplied with the staff of life, and we hope and trust that in this case the old adage, "too many cooks spoil the broth," will not be true, but gentlemen (bakers) be careful, steady and considerate. The business, which is only a fair living for one, will surely not be much when divided among so many. The construction of the Trent Valley Canal, you know, has not yet been begun.

THE GRAIN MARKET.

Grain is beginning to move to market. Mr. Samuel Nelson is purchasing all kinds of grain, and paying the highest market price at his storehouse near the water-mill. Lakefield is now a good market in which to sell grain. The opposition caused by Mr. Nelson entering the business will give farmers confidence, as he is so widely and favourably known. Considerable quantities of wood, hay, &c., are being marketed at fairly remunerative prices, in consequence of the good sleighing during the past week.

MAPLE SUGAR.

On the 27th of January, young Willie Lemay, of Lakefield, while in the north part of Douro with his brother cutting cordwood, tapped some trees, and succeeded in gathering considerable sap, but in sugaring off the whole was spoiled by having too hot a fire, to the evident disappointment of Master Willie.

THROUGH THE ICE.

Mr. James Choate got his team through the ice while crossing Clear Lake on February 1st, near Mr. Singleton's landing. By the assistance of some men in a shanty close by, the horses were got out safe and sound. On the same day Mr. Wm. Cavanagh, while crossing White Lake, got his horses through the ice, and had to send to Mr. Chas. Grant's for help, which arrived just in time to save the horses.

THE LAKEFIELD DAM.

The Lakefield dam deputation returned from Toronto on Friday last, and were well pleased with their reception by the Hon. the Commissioner of Public Works. They express themselves as sure that the public interests in the navigation between here and Young's Point would be fully provided for in due time.

COBOURG.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Peterborough Visitors.—Several Peterborough residents were in town last week.

Skating.—The "Ever Ready" skating rink is in full blast, both young and old enjoying themselves at that healthy amusement. A carnival is in anticipation before long.

Curling.—The "Waverly" curlers are still practising hard, notwithstanding their ill-success at the Peterborough bonspiel. They are determined to redeem themselves and secure their wonted success before long.

Sacred Concert.—A sacred concert was held on Tuesday evening, the 10th inst., in St. Peter's Church. It was a great success. Singers were procured from Toronto, Port Hope and elsewhere, and they added much to the evening's success.

Missionary.—At the Canada Methodist Church last Sunday, missionary sermons were delivered. In the morning the Rev. Jno. MacDougall, chairman of the Saskatchewan circuit, gave a very pleasing sermon; and in the evening the Rev. John Potts, D.D., of the Metropolitan Church, Toronto, delivered a very eloquent and able discourse. On Monday evening the missionary meeting was held, at which these gentlemen and others addressed a crowded house.

The Car-works Enlarged.—Several of Mr. Crossen's new cars departed on their first journey last Monday. He is doing a very large business, and has found it necessary to enlarge his already extensive car-works, and increase his number of employees.

SMITH.

Missionary Meeting.—The annual missionary meeting for this district took place in Robertson's Church, Smith, on Tuesday evening, February 10th, and was a perfect success—both financially and otherwise. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Toms. Mr. Geo. Elliott, Junr., was appointed chairman, who, in a very modest speech, introduced the Rev. Mr. Edmunds, who read a lengthy report of the missionary work through our Dominion, India, France, etc., and also gave a number of interesting items, and then delivered a very impressive address, giving a number of amusing and interesting facts, not forgetting to remind the congregation to subscribe liberally, with good results. The Rev. Mr. McDowell then addressed the congregation. A collection and subscription, amounting to $60, was then taken up. Between the several speeches the choir sang several pieces with taste and in a manner which added much to the pleasure of the evening. At the conclusion, votes of thanks were passed to Miss Bella Elliott and Miss Bell for their services as collectors for 1879; and to the choir, chairman and deputation.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

Thursday, Feb. 12.—The market for the shipping cereals, especially wheat, is still unsettled and the tendency is upward. There are large quantities of spring wheat coming in, and the excitement has been considerably heightened thereby. As high as $1.25½ was paid this morning, the ruling figure being $1.24 to $1.25. Very little fall wheat is brought in at present; the same price rules for it as is paid for spring. Peas are coming in slowly and are readily taken at an advance upon previous quotations. We quote 63c. to 64c. Oats are firm at quotations with few lots offering. We hear of 34c. being paid for some lots. There is no change in the price of wood, although the supply is large. Yesterday's general market was a poor one, the offerings being mostly beef without any change in prices to note. The attendance of both buyers and sellers was small. The wood market seemed to be the most active and a larger number of loads were disposed of than on any previous day. The wheat market was exceedingly feverish, and the bidding became sharp, running up to $1.23 to $1.24 by shippers, millers standing back and taking only what they actually need, or what is offered at the mills from their regular customers. It is said that the prices obtained in the Montreal market for flour and the higher prices for bran combined with the difference in freights via the Midland and Grand Trunk Railways between flour and grain, make it more desirable to ship the grain to that market and mill it there. The proposed Ottawa Railway will put an end to this state of things by its reduction of rates.

"German Syrup."

No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as Boschee's German Syrup. In three years two million four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthma, Croup, severe Coughs, Pneumonia and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that German Syrup will cure them. The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist, and ask what they know about it. Sample bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. Three doses will relieve any case. dw51-1y

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam has a tonic effect on the stomach and the digestive organs, without any injurious effect on the system. It allays irritation of the bronchial tubes and stomach, removing the phlegm from the air tubes to the lungs; at the same time healing the inflamed or irritated parts. We have never known it to fail in giving satisfaction, when used according to directions, for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Croup, or any other affection of the throat or lungs leading to Consumption. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. d21w7-2w

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of Scott & Bowne's Palatable Castor Oil. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. Price 25 cents. w6d30

No Such Word as Fail.

The hectic cheek, the sunken eye, the hacking cough, betray the presence of that dire foe—consumption. If one of our friends or relatives is attacked with this disease, there is nothing that we would not do to give them relief, but leading physicians prescribe in vain. The only known remedy and one which stamps the discoverer as a public benefactor is Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. Never, in a large and varied experience, has it been known to fail to give relief, and in most cases permanently cure. w6d201m

A bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worth more to the sufferer than the $40,000 pearl that Cleopatra drank. It proves a sure remedy in soreness of a part, or muscular pain, Stiff Joints, Contraction of the Muscles, outward Tumors, Swelled Neck, Enlarged Glands, etc., and is unsurpassed as a remedy for Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, etc. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. d21w7-2w

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

Successful Candidate.

The successful candidate from Bobcaygeon at the recent examination for the Pharmaceutical College was Mr. Thos. McCamus, not McCarnes, as the name was incorrectly given by the Toronto papers.

Poultry Sign Blown Down.

The heavy wind of this morning carried away the Poultry Association's large painted banner, which was stretched across George Street at Bradburn's Hall. It was soon rescued from its lowly position and taken care of.

Capreol's Folly.

In reply to a question in the House lately as to the Huron and Ontario Ship Canal, Mr Mowat is reported as saying, "The Huron and Ontario Canal was an older project than the Trent Canal; it would cost less than the Trent Canal." Truly this Toronto scheme should be re-christened and called "Capreol's Folly."

Accident.

As the little son of Mr. Hetherington was crossing Simcoe Street, near George Street, yesterday afternoon, some person in a sleigh, driving rapidly, ran against him, knocking him down, the sleigh passing completely over his body, bruising him considerably. The driver kept on his way, not deigning to stop and see whether the little fellow was killed or not. It is hoped nothing serious will result.

Fall of a Gable.

Soon after one o'clock to-day the high wind forced the gable wall of Mr. George Dunsford's new stable, occupied by Mr. A. P. Morgan, into the yard, badly damaging a sleigh which happened to be in the way of the falling bricks. No person or animal was injured. An examination disclosed the fact that the wall had not been properly secured to the rafters, causing it to give way at the first heavy southerly wind.

Plagiarism.

A recent number of the Hastings Star contains a letter attacking our Norwood correspondent, this production being in part abusive and and in part witty. To our surprise, however, we found on reading the report of a humorous speech in Congress by Mr. Horr, that this severe critic had stolen all his wit, line after line, from Mr. Horr. A censurer of others should at least have common honesty.

Agricultural Machinery.

Yesterday the Midland Railway brought up a fire-proof portable boiler and engine from the Waterous Works, Brantford, Ont., and a grain saving threshing machine from the Messrs. Sawyer & Co. Agricultural Works, Hamilton. They were moved through town today on their way to the farm of Mr. Redmond, Otonabee, where they are to be tested to-morrow. Mr. D. McLeod is the agent here. Mr. George Kirkland, of Hamilton, is here to represent the Sawyer Company Works, and Mr. A. A. Benson, of Brantford, represents the Waterous Works. These machines attracted considerable attention as they passed through town.

A Dangerous Pastime.

During the sleighing season a dangerous pastime has been inaugurated by the small boys as well as those of larger growth; the girls also have to a certain extent imitated them. The habit of running after sleighs to catch a ride is a most dangerous practice, and several accidents have occurred of late. Last week there were two or three accidents, which, although not serious, should have been warnings. They were not heeded, however, and yesterday two cases occurred at the corner of Hunter and George streets, opposite Dr. Taylor's drug store. A lad named Evans was thrown down and trampled upon by a horse, having his head badly lacerated, it is supposed, by the cork of the horse's shoe crushing into it. He was taken into the drug store and his wounds and bruises were dressed by Dr. Taylor, who had scarcely concluded when another lad named Stocker was brought in with a bad scalp wound and other bruises. This lad was knocked down by the pole of a double team striking him. The streets at the time were full of teams, most of which were driving fast, making such pastime as catching a ride extremely dangerous. Parents should endeavor to put a stop to their children running after passing sleighs.

POULTRY EXHIBITION

THE ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF THE MIDLAND CENTRAL POULTRY SOCIETY.

A Very Successful Show—Exhibitors Attracted From a Distance—List of the Prizes Awarded.

The fourth annual exhibition of the Midland Central Poultry Association, held at the old Music Hall on the 10th, 11th and 12th inst., has proved to be one of unusual interest to all bird fanciers. It is said that the efforts of former years have been nothing to compare with the present show so far as exhibits are concerned. The great variety of choice birds shows an advance in the care and maintenance of stock, and the improvement in breeding. Many of the visitors from abroad observed this, and spoke freely of the improved quality of the stock exhibited, and predicted for Peterborough a high place in poultry raising.

THE ENTRIES.

There were 26 entries of Brahmas, 28 of Cochins, 11 of Dorkings, 5 of Spanish, 21 of Leghorns, 3 of Houdans, 8 of Game Fowls, 31 of Hamburgs, 10 of Polands, 13 of Bantams, fowls and chickens, 3 of Ducks, 7 of Geese and Turkeys, and 9 of Canaries, making in all 180 entries. In addition to these there were some 20 entries for special prizes, and a large number of fowls, chickens, &c., for show and on sale.

THE SPECIAL PRIZES.

The special prizes in addition to the 189 offered by the Association, were 22 in number, being given by Messrs. Geo. Hope, I. Dormer, Maxwell Hall, H. Bullen, John Taylor, Wm Hall, H. G. Charlesworth, J. R. Stratton, John Carlisle, Robt. Hall, and Toker & Co.

THE ARRANGEMENTS.

The classification and arrangements of the several classes were as good as could be expected in so small a hall. No one could complain of the Committee, and the only criticism we heard was that the old Music Hall was not a suitable place for so important an exhibition. Should the interest that seems to be now manifested stir up the people to renewed efforts in the poultry raising line, a larger exhibition room will be needed for the use of the Society.

EXHIBITORS FROM ABROAD.

Among the prominent exhibitors from abroad were Messrs. H. G. Charlesworth, of Toronto; James Baptie, of Ida, Ont.; George Hope, of Yorkville, Ont.; and James Fullerton, of Strathroy, Ont.

DISQUALIFIED.

Two entries of Black Cochins were thrown out as disqualified, one of them on account of a dyed tail. The deception was easily detected by the judges. Several fowls among the other classes were disqualified from mismating between fowls and chickens. Great care should be taken in paring the birds.

SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITORS.

Among the competitors we might mention the following as the most successful in obtaining prizes in the order in which they are named. Messrs. H. G. Charlesworth, George Hope, J. Graham, J. Baptie, James Saulter, John McClelland, Wm. Hall and Mrs. L. Glover.

THE ATTENDANCE.

The attendance, although fair, has not been what it should be, and not what it would have been had some better place been selected for the exhibition. The exhibition, however, may be set down as having been a success, including even the financial part.

Rapid Disappearance.

The sleighing of yesterday has been transformed into wheeling to-day. The great change in temperature swept away the snow in every direction, and the streets have been covered with water and mud. Farmers coming in this morning on runners found great difficulty in reaching home.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to-day are: Brisk to high southerly winds; partly cloudy to clear, warm weather to-day, followed by falling temperature, and in some localities, snow flurries to-night, and decidedly colder weather to-morrow. Peterborough has had a sudden change in temperature. At seven o'clock this morning the thermometer indicated 44°; a change of 40° in twenty-four hours. At noon to-day the thermometer indicated 52° in the shade.

THE TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

The Attorney-General Waited on by a Large Deputation to ask Government Aid.

Special to the Review.

TORONTO, Feb. 13.—A large deputation of members of the Legislature waited upon the Attorney-General this afternoon to advocate the interests of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. Mr. Dereche, M.P.P., and Mr. Dumble, of Peterborough, were the principal speakers. They stated that the municipalities along the route, and the city of Ottawa, had already subscribed $632,000. A large quantity of stock had been taken up, and they hoped the Government would aid this line, which would open up a large mining country. The Attorney-General said he would take the arguments advanced into careful consideration.

BELLEVILLE.

Special to the Review, Feb. 13.

RELIEF FOR IRELAND.—The public meeting held here last night with regard to Irish relief was not largely attended, but was practical in its character. A Central Committee and Ward Committees were appointed and a thorough canvas of the city will be undertaken at once. The Mayor was appointed Chairman of the Central Committee and it was agreed to forward the money raised to the Dublin Committee. Mr. Peter O'Leary delivered an address.

OTTAWA.

Special to the Review, Feb. 13.

THE PRESS.—The members of the press met this morning in the press room, under the presidency of His Worship the Mayor, editor of the Citizen. The meeting allocated seats in the reporters' gallery to papers according to their supposed relative importance. Afterwards the representatives paid their usual convention visit to the Speaker, and the customary compliments were interchanged.

DRIVING CLUB.—The Governor-General has consented to become patron of the Ottawa driving club.

MONTREAL.

Special to the Review, Feb. 13.

CURLING MATCH.—The Montreal Curling Club defeated Ottawa by a score of 29 to 15.

BANK STOCKS.—The stock market was stronger this morning, with a further advance in bank stocks.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—Last night when No. 4 passenger train west, which left Bonaventure street station at 10 o'clock, arrived at River Beaudette station, a brakesman named P. Fillatrault was missing. The conductor, on going back, found him a mile and a half this side of the station. He was lying on the track, quite dead. He is supposed to have slipped off the platform or to have been blown off by the high wind then prevailing. He leaves a wife and one child.

TORONTO.

Special to the Review, Feb. 13.

THE SESSION.—The Government expect that the session will close at the end of the present month. It may possibly be extended a few days beyond.

THE HALL POOR TRUST.—This is the last day of the Private Bills Committee. The only bill reported was the William Hall Peterborough Protestant Poor Trust.

AID FOR MUSKOKA.—News having been received by the Government that many settlers are suffering extreme destitution in Muskoka, the Hon. Mr. Pardee has ordered a supply of food to be at once forwarded to the impoverished districts.

THE DIVISION COURTS ACT.—A meeting of legal gentlemen will be held in Osgoode Hall this afternoon to consider the Division Court Act amendments.

PRESS ASSOCIATION.—The Canadian Press Association holds its annual meeting at the Rossin House this afternoon. A fair representation of newspaper men will be in attendance.

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it: there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS is on the outside wrapper. Sold by all medicine dealers. 25 cents a bottle. Beware of imitations. d37w8

Press Despatches via Cable and Montreal Lines

CABLE.

THE OCCUPATION OF HERAT.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons, denied the truth of the despatch stating that a treaty had been signed by which Persia would be permitted to occupy Herat in return for her engagement to assist England in Afghanistan. He said he could add nothing to his recent reply on the subject, which was that communications on the subject of releasing Persia from her treaty engagements, not to take possession of Herat, had been under consideration; but an understanding with Persia had not yet been reached, and it was therefore inconvenient to make any statement.

THE FORTUNE BAY AFFAIR.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Mr. Bourke, Under-Secretary for the Foreign Department, replying to a question in the House as to the claim of the United States for damages alleged to have been done by Newfoundland fishermen in Fortune Bay to the Massachusetts fishing fleet, etc., said no measure had been taken for the abrogation or amendment of clause 33 of the Treaty of Washington relative to Canadian and Newfoundland inshore fisheries, and it was not thought necessary to make any communication for ascertaining the purport of the proviso of the convention of 1818.

AN IMPERIAL VISIT.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The Grand Duke Nicholas will visit Berlin at the request of the Czar.

REFUSED ADMISSION.

It is understood that Mr. Colthurst, Home Ruler, has been refused admission to the membership of the Reform Club.

RAILWAY COLLISION.

CAIRO, Feb. 12.—A collision took place at Tantah, on the Egyptian Government railway, between the Indian passenger train from Suez and a goods train. One engineer was killed and many passengers were injured. Great damage has been done to the rolling-stock.

AMERICAN.

A TRAMP LAW.

HARTFORD, Feb. 12.—The Courant has returns from 151 towns in the States as to the working of the tramp law, which went into effect last May. The unanimous verdict is in favor of the law, as having driven tramps from the State, greatly lessening the town expenses, giving security to the rural districts, and inflicting no wrongs.

WARLIKE APPEARANCES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The European legations here do not disguise their anxiety in regard to the threatening aspect of affairs on the European continent as well as between England and Russia. The despatches which the English Government allowed to be made public the other day, are looked upon as means to incite the English people against Russia. It is said that prominent foreigners are sending large amounts for investment in this country fearing trouble abroad. Several legations are studying the capacity of our private arms manufacturing companies.

ROME AND THE RITUALISTS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A Herald's cable despatch from London says that private despatches from Rome leave no doubts regarding the secession to Rome of the Rev. Arthur Wagner, the Ritualist clergyman, of Brighton. He has been secretly received into the Roman Church; whether, like others, he will recede, events will show. A meeting ground has been found that may unite the timid High Church Anglicans with the Vatican. Wagner's Church and several others were never consecrated, hence they are not within the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Chichester. These churches are likely to be gained to Rome, but the conversion of Wagner is conditional. The converts who are already married are to be re-ordained. Such converts will be allowed to assist in ministering in the Catholic Church in mass, benediction and preaching, but not be admitted to parochial functions, especially to confession. Males and females in Anglican religious orders are to pass through a novitiate under experienced superiors appointed by Rome. A special metropolitan, perhaps Cardinal Manning, is to be consecrated by the Pope himself for the government of the re-ordained Anglican clergy. For the present the parts of the service outside the mass are to be allowed in the vernacular. The younger clergy are to take the usual vows of celibacy when ordained sub-deacons.

NEW ROUTE TO THE WEST.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Tribune says it is reported that persons interested in reorganizing the New York and Oswego Railway, intend to secure ten millions by assessments on the stockholders, to be devoted to securing connections and terminal facilities for a new trunk line to the west. It is also reported that persons interested in this road are seeking to control the Rochester and State Line Road.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A Washington special report to the Tribune says that the President will bring the canal matter before the Cabinet to-day. The President believes that the Government will command more respect in Europe if it takes its stand squarely on a re-announcement of the Monroe doctrine and in favor of the broadest interpretation of it.

A SKIRMISH WITH THE SIOUX.

FORT KEOGH, Montana, Feb. 8.—Sergt. Glover, with ten men and ten Indian scouts, started out at daylight on the 6th inst. to capture a party of Sioux, supposed to belong to Sitting Bull's band, who killed one man and wounded another some days ago on Mizpah Creek. They found them near the head of Pumpkin Creek. A lively skirmish ensued, and two Sioux and one soldier were killed and one was wounded. This, with the news that the Sioux had got under cover in such a manner that Glover's party could not get at them, came last night, and Capt. Snyder, with one company, proceeded to the scene and put an end to the affair. The scouts came in this evening, displaying the scalps of the two Indians who were killed. Three others were taken prisoners, and are being brought in by Snyder's command.

Remedy for Hard Times.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food, cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read it in another column. d146-1y

A St. Petersburg correspondent hears that all responsibility for the article in the Journal de St. Petersburg, purporting to reflect the sentiment of Russia in regard to Herat, Persia, and England, is thrown on the editor, who has been reprimanded.

THE TURCOMAN CAMPAIGN.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 12.—General Skobeloff's appointment is said to have been decided by his having proposed to conduct the campaign against the Tekke Turcomans without going to Merv, thus avoiding possible complications with England.

THE MANSION HOUSE FUND.

DUBLIN, Feb. 13.—Up to Tuesday the Dublin Mansion House relief fund had reached £37,500, and the grants to date have been £27,000.

THE GREEK FRONTIER.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 13.—France has asked England to bring forward the new proposal for the settlement of the Greek frontier question by a special commission.

GERMAN COASTING TRADE.

BERLIN, Feb. 13.—Prussia has presented in the Bundesrath a bill prohibiting foreign vessels from engaging in the coasting trade of Germany, except where the right is acquired by treaty or special permission. A bill for the prolongation of the Anti-Socialist law proposes to extend its operation to 1886.

INCREASE OF ARMAMENTS.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Times says that as long as the nations are unable to devise any improvement in the maintenance of their mutual relations, it is idle to complain of the continuous increase of armaments as necessarily inconsistent with peaceful intentions.

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—It is reported that Dean Stanley says that the erection of a monument to the late Prince Louis Napoleon in Westminster Abbey has been irrevocably determined upon, though not likely to be carried out immediately.

AMERICAN.

SHERMAN AND BOYNTON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—A Washington special despatch to the Sun says the general belief is that General Sherman will pay no attention to Boynton's accusations. The Secretary of War will not insist upon a court-martial.

THE HAYDEN TRIAL.

Mr. Hayden's counsel, visiting New York, states that it will be several months before the new trial can take place. There is no truth in the report that expert testimony will be excluded.

SWINDLING THE FARMERS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—Persons claiming to be census takers are swindling the farmers in Northern New Jersey.

FEAR OF BLINDNESS.

Patrick Flaherty, a conductor, finding his eye-sight failing, and fearing blindness, cut his throat yesterday. He may recover.

AN OWL AT SEA.

The steamer Celtic, from Liverpool, on Wednesday brought in a large white land owl, which dropped upon the vessel exhausted, 800 miles off Newfoundland. It is supposed that it was blown out to sea in a gale.

GRIEF FOR A MOTHER-IN-LAW.

John C. Robinson, the expert proof-reader, who was found dead in his bed at Brooklyn on Wednesday, is believed to have committed suicide with laudanum on account of grief over the death of his mother-in-law.

A MILLIONAIRE'S BEQUESTS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The will of Henry Robinsons, the California millionaire, who died recently at Yonkers, N. Y., leaves $40,000 for destitute San Francisco women and children, $5,000 to the New York Institute for the Blind, $5,000 to the American Female Guardian Society, and the balance of the estate to legatees.

AN ESCAPED CRIMINAL.

Charles Meader, who was arrested for swindling and grand larceny, feigned insanity at the Tombs, and was sent to the lunatic asylum on Ward's Island, from which he escaped yesterday. He was known in San Francisco as the champion long distance rider of the world.

THE "HERALD" FUND.

The Herald's relief fund reached $182,000 yesterday, including $8,000 from Tracy & Russell brewers, $500 from John McCullough, $100 from Frank Mayo, $100 from Fanny Davenport, and $1,160 from representatives in Congress. The Duchess of Marlborough has asked the Herald to entrust her committee with the distribution of its fund, but it is stated that her letter will not change Bennett's original plan.

MASONIC EMBLEMS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The Herald's cable despatch reports an interview with Professor Mospero, the French Orientalist, concerning the discovery of the alleged Masonic emblems under the Egyptian obelisk. Mospero does not think that in burying the trowel and stones beneath Cleopatra's needle any departure was made from the common Egyptian practice. Ernest Renan says that Masonry originated in the 18th century. Of course the Free Masons can trace a fanciful genealogy back to the Templars, and if they like, to Solomon or Hiram, but it rests on nothing. It is all an elaborate joke.

Brain and Nerve Food.

The loss of memory, the nerve and exhausted feeling, the dissatisfaction with the result of one's labours, the dull, unrefreshed sleep, the want of appetite, and neuralgia, are simply the brain and nerves calling for their necessary food. Vitalized Hypophosphites restore lost energy in all weaknesses of mind or body, relieve debility and nervousness, and prevent consumption. Physicians have prescribed and recommended it. THE REACTION AGAIN.

THE election for Argenteuil has resulted in the return of Mr. Abbott by a substantial majority over Dr. Christie. Here again is the gain of a Conservative seat, while not one has been lost. So far we have nothing to complain of the reaction, of which we hear so much, but see so little.

STIMULATED INDUSTRIES.

THE Cobourg Sentinel-Star gives a long and interesting account of a visit to the Cobourg Woollen Mills under the guidance of Mr. Routh, one of the proprietors. After describing the various processes and the facilities for effecting them, the report concludes as follows :—

"THE N. P. HUMMETH.

"We asked Mr. Routh what effect the National Policy had on the mill. He said it had this effect, that it gave them a largely increased amount of work. To verify this he instanced the fact that they were now, and would be for two weeks or more to come, working on spring goods, and working full time too. For the previous five or six years the spring work had been through in December, and much of it short time at that. The increased work is due to the National Policy. The factory employs between eighty and a hundred hands; and the pay roll last month was over nineteen hundred dollars, of which Cobourg receives the benefit. The Globe may croak its croak against the National Policy, but we trow it will do little harm in a town which has such an abundant evidence of the fallacy of such ravings in its very midst."

THE OPPOSITION LEADERSHIP.

THE Ottawa correspondent of the Mail says: "The question of leadership of the Opposition seems to have been settled. Mr. Mackenzie took the leader's seat. After Mr. Blake had been introduced and received with cheers by members on both sides, the Premier joining in the welcome, he took a back seat beside some undistinguishable gentlemen. Mr. Mackenzie opened the political case."

Of course this shows that Mr. Mackenzie is leader for the purpose, but Mr. Blake may yet be elected to the post.

THE ARGENTEUIL ELECTION.

Return of Mr. Abbott by a Large Majority.

The returns from Argenteuil give Mr. Abbott a majority of 118, with four places to hear from. In 1878, Dr. Christie's majority was 89.

The following are the figures telegraphed :—

ABBOTT.	Majority.	CHRISTIE.	Majority.
Grenville Village	45	Brownsburg	75
Grenville Bay	22	Lachute	66

Total majority for Abbott, 118.

A TERRIFIC CYCLONE.

Great Destruction of Property and Loss of Life in New Caledonia.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—A despatch from Sydney, South Wales, states that the Island of New Caledonia was excited by a fearful cyclone on the 24th January, which resulted in enormous destruction of property and loss of life within the circle of the storm. The wind is estimated to have blown at the rate of one hundred miles an hour. At Numea, the seat of Government, the scene is described as having been terrible. The sea rose to an unprecedented height, and the wind was greater than had been experienced for years. The waves, notwithstanding the fact that the harbour is sheltered by several outlying islands, swept the shores and drove several ships which were lying at anchor in port upon the rocks and wrecked them completely. Houses were unroofed or blown down, in many cases crushing the inhabitants beneath the ruins. In the Loyalty and other adjacent islands the effect of the cyclone were less pronounced, only because there was less to destroy. The course of the storm was south-westerly, and is supposed to have crossed the whole width of the Pacific from the direction of the northern coasts to South America or Mexico, subsiding before reaching the shores of Australia. Reports from the interior of New Caledonia speak of great destruction of life and property in the agricultural villages, at the mines and in the peninsula of Ducos, the penal settlement of France, to which country the island belongs.

Chances to Attack.

The Toronto Telegram says:—"The session of the Canadian Parliament which begins to-day will probably be a protracted one. Among other subjects that will give the public a chance to attack the Government will be the defalcation at the Toronto Custom House, and we may be sure that the Opposition will make the most of their opportunity, although it ought to be kept in mind that the leakage was in progress when the Mackenzie administration was in power. The printing contract will also give ground for attack, although here again the Opposition is to some extent handicapped, for the contracts are given on the same principle now as they were under Mr. Mackenzie. These two subjects will supply a good field for a display of Mr. Blake's wonderful powers of sarcasm."

APSLEY.

GOING HOME.—Andrew Poolong, whose leg was broken, is no better. A subscription was got up for him in the shanty, headed by Mr. A. Brooks, when the very respectable sum of $16 was raised. He is now on his way down home to Lower Canada.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

NEW MEMBERS.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—The Speaker took the chair at 3.30 p.m.

The SPEAKER made announcements regarding vacancies and elections which had taken place during the recess, and several new members were introduced and took their seats.

OATHS OF OFFICE.

The oaths of office bill was passed.

The SPEAKER reported that he had obtained a copy of His Excellency's Speech, which, on the motion of Sir John Macdonald, was ordered to be considered to-morrow.

THE PRIVILEGES OF PARLIAMENT.

On the motion for adjournment,

Mr. MACKENZIE said he desired to call the attention of the leader of the Government to the case of the violation of the privileges of the House which occurred at the close of the last session. On the motion of the hon. gentleman, the person who had violated the privileges of the House so grossly was ordered to attend, but that he did not attend the journals would show. He, therefore, desired to ask the Premier what course he proposed to adopt in regard to the matter.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD thanked the hon. gentleman for having called attention to the subject, which had escaped his attention, and announced that he would state to-morrow the course the Government proposed to adopt.

NORWOOD.

MAGNANIMOUS.—The Register says:—We learn that Mr. Reeve Rork, on learning that he had replaced such a popular and worthy member of the Norwood School Trustee Board as Mr. S. J. Griffin, has declined to accept the appointment made by the County Council in this connection. This action on the part of Mr. Rork is just only what we expected a gentleman of his susceptible feelings would do in a matter of this kind. We hope, in response to the wishes of the electorate of this section, that Mr. Griffin will again accept the position on the Board he has heretofore so honorably and so satisfactorily filled.

COBOURG.

IRISH RELIEF.—The Sentinel-Star says:—The Oddfellows have nobly come to the front, and announced a concert to take place on Wednesday next, in Victoria Hall, in aid of the relief of the Irish sufferers, and it is to be hoped they will have a crowded house, as, independent of the good object, the programme which will be presented will be well worth the admission fee.

VICTORIA HALL.—The Commissioners of the Town Trust have given the clerk instructions to advertise for tenders for the construction of the ceiling of Victoria Hall, and the erection of a handsome gallery at the north end, in accordance with the plans of W. S. Thomas, Esq., architect, Montreal. The portion with regard to the stage is to be left in abeyance for the time being, as the Commissioners are undecided whether to follow the plans or not.

HALIBURTON.

DRAMATIC.—On Friday last our Dramatic Club gave one of their capital performances to a large and appreciative audience. The play was "Ici on Parle Francais," and "Turn Him Out," the whole concluding with a capital selection of negro comicalities. Mr. Wastell, Mr. Blomfield, Mr. Prust, and Mr. Crosthwaite played with great ability, and Mrs. Crosthwaite, Mrs. Coleman and Miss Kelso and Miss Wastell distinguished themselves for their proficiency. It would be invidious to specify any one among the corps dramatique, for all were good, but certainly a word of praise is due to Mrs. Coleman and Mr. Blomfield. Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Galbraith, and Mr. J. Reid contributed largely to the success of the evening. The acting throughout manifested great improvement since the first performance of the season.—Independent.

PORT HOPE.

HANLAN BEATEN.—The Guide says that on Wednesday Ed. Hanlan, the champion sculler, was in Port Hope, and while stopping over he had a contest with mine host of Lakeview House, in which Christopher came off victorious by nearly one hundred pounds. If Jim cannot beat Hanlan at the oars, he can on the scales.

THE CENTRAL FAIR.—A correspondent of the Times says:—Everything augurs well for the success of the Central Fair to be held at Port Hope the present year. At the meeting of delegates at Millbrook, on Wednesday last, there was a pretty full attendance of the different representatives of the contributing societies, only two gentlemen being absent. There was that unanimity of feeling that spoke volumes for the welfare of the society, for the nonce all personal piques and private prejudices were quietly dropped, and everything went as smooth and merry as the tintinabulations of the milk man's bell. An active and energetic board of officers were elected, and there is not the shadow of a doubt but that the Fair will prove a success.

IRELAND.

Two brothers named Rochford were nearly beaten to death, on Jan. 16th, during a party fight at Ballinadore. Four arrests have been made.

THE Bishop of Ossory has established a night school in Kilkenny for the benefit of boys who are compelled to work during the day. The attendance is already so large that it has become necessary to enlarge the teaching staff.

MR. ROBERT A. DUKE, of Newpark, the incoming Sligo High Sheriff, has been recently engaged in blowing up, with dynamite, the roots of trees upon his property, and giving the excellent fuel they produced to the poor.

THE Limerick Army Clothing Company have got a contract from the British Government for 6,000 garments, which, with the other contracts they have on hands, will keep their workers employed for the whole of this year.

CATHERINE DONOVAN died recently, at the Fermoy Workhouse, at the extraordinary age of 108 years. It was customary for the deceased to make journeys of from four to six miles daily, until within a few months of her death; and some year and a half ago she led the van in the harvest field. She used to speak of the stormy scenes of '98 as if they were enacted quite recently.

THERE is at present living at a place called the High Moss, County Armagh, an old man named Doway, who is in his 104th year. He is able to walk two or three miles into Lurgan to transact his business, and is wonderfully hale.

THE Northern Whig deplores the selfishness displayed by the town of Belfast on the subject of Irish distress. Scarcely any money, it says, has been contributed from the town to the relief fund, while only one Protestant clergyman (a Presbyterian) has made an appeal to his congregation to subscribe in the aid of the distress.

AT [illegible], King's County, relief works have been started in connection with the drainage of the Shannon. Five hundred men are employed at an average wages of one shilling and eight pence per day. The Local Government Board have granted a loan of six hundred pounds to carry out relief works at Parsonstown in the same county.

The DAILY EVENING REVIEW is delivered to subscribers at ten cents a week.

ENGLAND.

UPWARDS of 1,442 persons in the British empire enjoy hereditary titles.

A YOUNG lady at Ibister, Orkney, recently fell 100 feet from a crag, and seems to have been able to crawl under the shelter of a rock where she was found dead.

A YOUNG man was recently released from prison in London, where he had been confined for contempt of court for eloping with a ward in Chancery and marrying her.

MR. MARK, the British Vice-Consul at Marseilles, has distinguished himself by performing the dangerous feat of climbing one of the loftiest and most difficult peaks of the Dauphiny Alps in mid-winter.

The Ottawa Free Press says:—"So it appears it was the Duke of Argyle, not Lord Beaconsfield, who first bestowed the title of Empress of India on Queen Victoria. His Grace has admitted in the House of Lords that he used the term in a despatch to Shere Ali in 1869, because it was more easy of translation into Persian."

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw51-ly

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY.

JOHNNY CONNORS TELLS HIS STORY OF THE MURDER OF THE DONNELLYS.

He Identifies Three of the Prisoners and gives a clear Account of the Fearful Scene—More Damaging Evidence Looked for.

The Globe of the 13th instant gives the following report of the examination of Johnny Connor at the Coroner's inquest held on the remains of the Donnelly family on the 11th instant in Lucan:—

JOHNNY CONNOR'S STORY.

There was a stir in the room when Johnny Connor was called. Having explained the nature of an oath by saying his soul would be damned if he told an untruth, the boy was sworn, and said:—Thomas Donnelly came down to our place on Tuesday afternoon to get our cutter to go to Granton. The old man Donnelly came down to our house to get some things he left there, and old Mr. Donnelly asked my father and mother to let me go down with them so as to be on hand when they went to Granton next day; my sister told me her father wanted me home; my mother told me to put on my overcoat and go down with Mr. Donnelly, and feed the things while they would be in Granton; I went along with him down to put out the horses; went in the house and got warm; Tom and Johnny came in and sat down for a while; Tom told the girl to get us some apples; the girl was Bridget; Johnny went out and got the pony, threw the harness over his neck, and went to Will to get the cutter; Tom got feed to feed the pigs, and he told me to get the blanket to put on his horse; he gave me the whip to keep the pigs away; Tom then went up on the stack and threw down some feed for the horses; Tom and me then went in the house; we sat there for a while, and he told Bridget to get a few apples; after we got the apples eaten the old man went and said his prayers; he told me to take off my boots and go to bed along with him; then the old man made me go to bed along with him; I went into bed with him; when I was in bed I heard some one talking out in the kitchen with Tom, the old woman, and Bridget; I think it was James Feehly; then I went to sleep; between twelve and two o'clock there was to arrest the old man and Jack; the old man told him Jack was not in; then he asked again, and the old man said, "Did not I tell you he was not in?" the old man told me to hold the light until he dressed himself; Tom was up at this time; then the old man dressed himself, and was looking for his coat; the man who came in to arrest him was James Carroll, the constable.

A MAN CAME INTO THE HOUSE

To the Coroner—I was in bed next the wall when James Carroll came to arrest the old man Donnelly; Carroll had a candle in his hand when he came to the door.

Mr. MacMahon objected to this evidence without Carroll being present.

The Crown Attorney held that the accused parties could be present at a subsequent examination for cross-examination. There could be no possible wrong in continuing the examination. If Mr. MacMahon's objections were carried out there might be any number of stoppages.

The Coroner decided that on the advice of the Crown Attorney he would continue the investigation.

Mr. MacMahon requested that his objection be noted. On account of James Carroll being implicated by the evidence of Connor he should be present before the evidence was proceeded with, as otherwise he would lose his right to cross-examination.

The investigation was then resumed.

To the Crown—Carroll had a candle when I saw him; he got the candle in the house, I guess.

To the Coroner—I saw nobody light the candle.

Witness continued—Then he held the candle for the old man to find his coat; the coat was under my head, and I said, "Here it is."

To the Coroner—The old man was in the room looking for his coat when he asked me where it was.

To the Crown—Carroll stood at the bedroom door when the old man got his coat; he went out in the kitchen and asked Tom if he was handcuffed; I did not see Tom at all; I heard the old man ask Tom; Tom said, "Yes, he thought he was smart"; then Tom told Carroll to read the warrant; Carroll said there was lots of time for that; then in a few minutes and commenced hammering them with sticks; I seen them with a spade; Tom then ran out into the front room and got outside; I saw him running out and Bridget run upstairs, and I started to run upstairs; she shut the door, and I ran back again and went under the bed, behind a clothes basket; I heard them hammering Tom outside.

THE WHOLE CROWD JUMPED IN

To the Coroner—The bed was about two feet one inch high from the floor, and no curtains around the bed; then they carried him (Tom) into the house again; I heard them throwing him down on the floor; I heard the handcuffs rattle, or whatever he had on his hands; then some one said, "Hit that fellow with a spade and then a fellow hit him three or four whacks with the spade; I only heard Tom say "Oh;" he was outside when I heard this; I did not see the man hit him; I heard him; then some some of them told him (the fellow that had the light) to fetch it here—that is, to where Tom was; he brought the light, and they were doing something to Tom; they were all standing around him; I seen them standing there, and standing there near the bedroom door where I was; then some of them asked where was the girl, and another man answered, "Look upstairs;" then they went upstairs; I heard them, and seen some of them too, but did not know any of them; I heard nothing going on upstairs; then they came down, and poured coal oil on the bed, and set it on fire, the bed I was under; I heard some one saying, "That coal oil will burn off the blanket, and the bed will not burn at all;" then they all ran out when they set fire to it, and I got from under the bed, put on my pants, and tried to quench the fire with my coat; I heard Tom breathing; then went out to the front room and saw Tom dead on the floor; then I went to the kitchen and I tramped upon the old woman; there was a light from the fire in the room where I was sleeping, and also from Tom's bedroom. (A diagram of the burned premises was here shown the witness, and he very intelligently pointed out every position required by the Coroner as to where the bodies lay, where the beds were located, which bed was on fire, and which was not.) The old woman was lying between the door going into the house and the door going out of the kitchen; I then ran out and ran over to Pat Whelan's and rapped at the door; Mrs. Whelan asked who was there; then I pushed in the door; it was open—I mean not locked; old Mrs. Whelan got up; I told her Donnelly's house was on fire, and old man Whelan said I was dreaming; he then put on a fire, and told me to warm my feet; I then told him to call the boys up till we would go over and quench the fire, and they said no, they were afraid they would get killed; I said there was a whole pile of men came there and chased the old man out of the house, and that I thought the old woman and Tom were killed; old Mr. Whelan asked me did I ever get up at night; I do not know what he meant by asking me that; me and Whelan then looked and saw the light through the window, and the old man said, "'Tis on fire"; he (Whelan) then went down to Jack Whelan's; when he came back he went over to the fire; Mrs. Whelan gave me some boots and stockings, and then Joe Whelan and I went over; the house was all in a blaze; Mr. Whelan and John Whelan were at the burning; when I went over Whelan said he thought he saw some one in the kitchen; then we went to the front door and we seen a whole lot of blood outside; we could not get up to the front door, there was too much heat and smoke; there was no other person there that I knew or seen; I did not know anyone else only what I told you; I did not recognize anybody but James Carroll, Tom Ryder and John Purtell; know John Purtell; I also know Tom Purtell; they are brothers; I knew their father before he was killed; Purtell had on black clothes; Ryder had a peaked cap, and Carroll had grey pants; I seen one of the parties whom I did not know; his face was blackened, and he had a long coat on—a middling-sized man.

BREAK HIS SKULL OPEN;"

I SEEN THOMAS RYDER AND JOHN PURTELL

To a Juror—Carroll seen me in bed; I know he seen me, for he was looking right at me for a while; he did not speak to me; I did not see any one of them strike the Donnellys; I only heard them; there was some others there not blackened which I did not know.

To the Coroner—I could not say; I don't know how many.

To Mr. MacMahon—Perhaps two or three whose faces were not blackened which I did not know.

To the Coroner—From the noise and fuss I heard there were others there besides those I seen.

To a Juror—Part of those men were in the kitchen when I came from under the bed and saw Bridget go upstairs; I seen the faces of the three men I knew; I seen a lot more of feet when under the bed.

To the Coroner—I peeped out when I saw them; I was not looking out all the time; I don't remember that I ever saw them before (that is, the men he failed to recognize.)

The Coroner here gave the jury to understand that no more evidence would be taken until the accused were present to cross-examine the witnesses.

Mr. MacMahon said that in the interests of justice, especially to those now in custody, against whom nothing could be proven, no unnecessary time should be lost in giving the benefit of an investigation whereby they would be allowed to return to their respective homes.

The Crown Attorney, in reply, said it would be more in the interests of justice to all parties that should be made to such a day as would give the Crown ample time to prepare the case, and that by so doing the inquest would in all probability close without the Court being obliged to adjourn to another day.

AN ADJOURNMENT

The Coroner seemed to concur in the opinion of the County Attorney, and accordingly the Court war adjourned until Wednesday, 18th inst., at 10 o'clock a.m.

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

BAKED HASH.—Chop the meat very fine, and put in a pan with some water; add salt and pepper, butter and bread crumbs to taste; season with a little chopped onion, parsley, thyme—all minced fine; half a cup of milk or cream with one egg beaten in; grate some crumbs over the top and bake till brown.

POTATO SALAD.—Boil and mash the potatoes fine; season highly with butter, pepper, salt, a little sweet cream; then have ready about three hard boiled eggs to one quart of the mashed potato; take off the whites and chop fine; mash the yellows and mix them according to your taste with some made mustard, a little sugar, salt, pepper, and just enough vinegar to moisten the preparation; mix well these ingredients. Put a layer of the mashed potatoes in a flat pan, and with a spoon put the salad dressing in spots over the potatoes, another layer of potatoes, then the salad, and so on, putting the potatoes on top. Smoothe over evenly, and set in the stove to brown.

OIL MARKS on wall-paper or the marks where inconsiderate people rest their heads are a sore grief to good housekeepers, but they can be removed without much trouble. Take pipe-clay, or fuller's earth, and make it into a paste; about as thick as rich cream, with cold water; lay it on the strain gently, without rubbing it in; leave it on all night. It will be dry in the morning, when it can be brushed off, and unless an old stain, the grease spot will have disappeared. If old, renew the application.

TO REMOVE INK.—A Fashion paper "down East" says:—If ink is spilled on a carpet or woollen goods, it should be attended to at once, while still wet if possible, and then it is very easily removed. Take clean blotting paper or cotton batting, and gently sop up all the ink that has not soaked in. Then pour a little sweet milk on the spot, and soak it up from the carpet with fresh cotton batting. It will need to be renewed two or three times, fresh milk and cotton being used each time, and the spot will soon disappear. Then wash the spot with clean soap-suds, and rub dry with a clean cloth. If the ink has been allowed to dry in, the milk must remain longer, and be repeated many times.

GREASE ON A CARPET, if not of long standing, can be easily disposed of by washing the spot in hot soap-suds and borax—half an ounce of borax to a gallon of water. Use a clean cloth to wash it with, rinse in warm water and wipe dry.

IF SPERMACETI is dropped on any garment or furniture, first carefully scrape off all that can be removed without injury to the material; then lay brown paper over the spot, or a piece of blotting-paper, and put a warm iron on the paper until the oil shows through. Continue to renew the paper and apply the warm iron until the paper shows no more oil.

SPOTS ON FURNITURE, from any thing hot, or from alcohol, can be removed by rubbing hard with sweet oil and turpentine. When the spots disappear, wash in milk-warm soap-suds, dry quickly, and polish by rubbing briskly with chamois-skin.

WHEN VELVET has been wet and becomes spotted, hold the wrong side over steam, and while damp draw the wrong side quickly over a warm iron. It takes two to do this well—one to hold the bottom of the iron upward, and the second to draw the velvet across it.

PAINT AND PUTTY can be taken off glass by wetting the glass several times with a strong solution of soda. Wet the glass often with it till the spots soften and can be washed off, and then polish with alcohol.

PAINT, PITCH OR TAR can be removed from cloth or wood by rubbing it with turpentine. If the paint has become dry, put a few drops of the turpentine on the spot, and let it stand a short time; then rub the spot, and if all the paint is not removed, repeat the work. When entirely gone rub off with alcohol.

No Such Word as Fail.

The hectic cheek, the sunken eye, the hacking cough, betray the presence of that dire foe—consumption. If one of our friends or relatives is attacked with this disease, there is nothing that we would not do to give them relief, but too often physicians prescribe in vain. The only known remedy and one which stamps the discoverer as a public benefactor is SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA. Never, in a large and varied experience, has it been known to fail to give relief, and in most cases permanently cure. [illegible]

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

FRIDAY, Feb. 13.—The grain market has taken another turn. Wheat has fallen 3c. per bushel from yesterday's prices, selling during the morning at $1.22 for both spring and fall. Most of the buyers are holding off at that price. Large quantities are coming forward, and the Market Square has several times been completely blocked up with teams. Oats have taken another turn dearer, and 35c. is being paid to-day; we quote 34c. @ 35c. Peas are firm at quotations. Hay is slow of sale at quotations. Wood, no change; the market is well supplied, and sales were rapid at quotations.

Recovered.

We are glad to learn that Judge Dennistoun has recovered and is able to be about again, indeed to resume his seat on the bench.

Selling Liquor to Children.

It is reported that a grocer in Ashburnham has been selling liquor to young boys, with very injurious results. Such an offence should be severely punished.

Mr. Scott, M. P. P.

Our readers will be glad to learn that Mr. Scott, M.P.P. for West Peterborough, has so far recovered from his recent indisposition that he was able to be in his place in the Provincial Legislature yesterday.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to-day are: Moderate to fresh winds; cloudy weather with light local showers of rain or snow, followed by fair and slightly colder weather. Peterborough: Cloudy colder weather; the thermometer indicating at 7 o'clock 30°, and at noon 32°.

Irish Relief Fund.

The adjourned meeting of the Central Committee was held in the Town Hall on Thursday. In the absence of the Mayor in Toronto, the Rev. V. Clementi was called to the chair. The collectors reported an additional sum of $82.46, making a total up to the present time of $925.46. The Committee adjourned, to meet again at the call of the Mayor.

Valentine's Day.

To-morrow is St. Valentine's Day, and already they are feeling the effect of it at the Post-office in the unusual number of missives to be distributed. Business men must, for the occasion, put up with having to wait for their letters rather longer than usual. St. Valentine's Day only comes once in the twelve months, even in Leap year.

The Marmora Gold Mine.

We received a visit to-day from Mr. H. T. Strickland, who has been at the Marmora gold mines for some time. There are now nearly a hundred persons employed in connection with the development of the properties. He speaks highly of the prospects of the mines. When the Toronto and Ottawa Railway is constructed he says it will be to the interest of the company to obtain their supplies in Peterborough.

Dairymen's Association.

The Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario will hold their next Convention in Kingston on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, Feb. 24, 25, and 26, 1880. Several able speakers will be in attendance, and the proceedings will be unusually instructive and interesting. Arrangements have been made with the railways for reduced fare—one-third on the return trip, certificate to be had on application to the Secretary.

The Poultry Association.

The Poultry Exhibition of the Midland Central Society closed last evening with an auction sale. There were few buyers present, and the bidding was very tame. Mr. McCallum assisting Mr. C. Stapleton, with all his fine flow of language failed to arouse a spirit of competition, and no doubt he said truly when he stated that it was the hardest work he ever had to make sales. One pair of Light Brahma chickens brought $4.00, and the several lots put up sold all the way down to 50 cents, averaging about $1.75 per pair. In the prize list, the first prize for Light Brahma fowls was awarded to Mr. Robt. Hall instead of Mr. J. McClelland as printed.

The Hall Trust Imbroglio.

We find the following in the Globe's report of the proceedings of the Private Bill Committee on Thursday last:—

"The Bill to amend the Act incorporating the William Hall Peterborough Poor Trust was presented by its promoters. The Act provided that the several Protestant Churches in the town of Peterborough should have a representation on this Poor Trust, founded by the late William Hall by a legacy of $30,000. The St. Andrew's and St. Paul's Presbyterian Churches were entitled to two representatives each on the trust. Subsequently one of the St. Andrew's representatives severed his connection with that Church and joined the St. Paul's congregation. This rendered the representation unequal, which formed the ground of complaint. The Committee recommended that as soon as a vacancy, by death or otherwise, should occur in any one of the three representatives in the St. Paul's congregation, it should be held to be a vacancy to be filled from the St. Andrew's congregation. The Committee then adjourned.

Sunday School Anniversary.

Last evening the Sunday School of St. Paul's (Presbyterian) Church, held its anniversary in the basement of the church. The entertainment called together a crowded assembly. Mr. J. H. Roper, the Sunday School Superintendent, presided, and had the exercises opened with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Torrance, the pastor of the church. This was followed with singing by the choir. Mr. Roper addressed the children, teachers and congregation for a short time, recounting the progress of the School during the past year. The scholars sang a hymn, followed by a recitation and choir singing. The principal feature of the entertainment was the story of Joseph illustrated by 14 views with the magic lantern operated by Mr. Wm. Cameron, and the recitation of a passage of scripture at each figure by 14 boys of the School, interspersed with singing by seven little girls. Miss Hamilton gave a recitation entitled "The Church and the World," rendered in an easy, graceful manner, calling forth the plaudits of the crowded audience. The Misses Johnston sang very sweetly several hymns. The second part of the programme consisted of hymns, recitations and magic lantern views, the latter comprising illustrations in the life of David, each view being explained by verses from the Bible, recited by the boys. The choir and members of the School sang several pieces, and the benediction was pronounced. The entertainment was a most delightful one, and called forth many expressions of approbation from the congregation. No collection was taken up or entrance fee charged, as the School is sustained exclusively by the church by a yearly contribution.

The Grand Lodge at Port Hope—The Banquet—Election of Officers.

After returning from church on Wednesday, Feb. 11th, the Grand Lodge of Orange Young Britons passed a vote of thanks to the Rev. Mr. Laird for his sermon.

In the evening Victoria Lodge, No. 9, of Port Hope, gave a banquet at the Royal Hotel. The chair was taken by Grand Master Gibson, and about a hundred and forty of the brethren sat down to an excellent repast. The usual toasts were proposed, among the responses being that of Mr. David Jameson, of Peterborough, Grand Master of the True Blues, for that order.

At the afternoon session on Thursday the following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

APPLES "ON TAP."

"I always keep a barrel of apples on tap in my cellar," said a gentleman who is a half farmer and half merchant, to us, recently, "for they are healthy for everybody, and are better than cider, 'on tap,' which too many of our farmers, even now, think they cannot do without during the winter."

We inwardly cheered our friend for his hearty commendation of the apple and for his positive denunciation of the cider barrel, which is a pest in any farmer's cellar—unless full of vinegar. But apples are a source of good cheer and good health to young and old, and happy is that family, in country or town, where the apple barrel is "on tap" during all the days of winter, and where the dish of apples is always a cheerful and substantial ornament upon the living room centre-table during the long and pleasant evenings. In fact, the importance and value of apples as food either eaten green or as a sauce, pies, or baked, have not been sufficiently estimated or understood. They not only contribute a large proportion of sugar, mucilage, and other nutritive compounds in the direct form of food, but they contain so fine a combination of vegetable acids, extractive substances and aromatic principles with nutritive matter, as to act powerfully and healthfully as tonics, antiseptics and natural refrigerants, keeping the system in a healthy and normal tone. "Used freely in their seasons," says Liebig, "they prevent debility, strengthen digestion, correct the putrefactive tendencies of highly nitrogenous food, avert scurvy, and probably maintain and strengthen the power of productive labor!" There can be no question but all these points of value in the apple as human food are well sustained, and the later experience and observation since Liebig's day, more than confirm what he said. Physicians are inclined to believe that diarrhœa and many forms of prevailing summer sicknesses have been largely lessened by the free use of ripe apples, and the other summer fruit, such as grapes, pears and peaches in their season. But the apple, on account of its abundance and good keeping qualities, is pre-eminently the food of the people. It is never out of season, never unfashionable. It is grateful and acceptable everywhere and always.—N. E. Farmer.

MISS CARSON ON FISH.

The abundance and cheapness of fish on lake and seaboard makes it a favorite food, but its merits are not yet fully appreciated, nor is due attention paid to the cooking of this popular esculent.

In Europe it constitutes the basis of many more meals than in this country, especially among the masses. It is used freshly cooked, marinaded or potted, and is preserved as here by salting and drying.

In some of the larger cities, where cooked food is sold on the streets, fresh fried fish is an important item and is cooked with the greatest care; it is cleaned, well washed in salt water, dried on a cloth, dipped in a thin batter made of flour, water, pepper and salt, and then plunged into a pan of smoking hot fat; the pan is then taken from the fire and by the time the fish is brown it is done. Perhaps the safer way for novices to fry fish is to leave the fat over the fire and when the fish is done to take it up on coarse paper to absorb the fat.

The cooking of fish softens its fibers, coagulates its albumen and separates its juices from the flesh, presenting them in a curd-like substance between the flakes; this curd is most abundant in newly caught fish and is highly esteemed by epicures. When fish is to be kept for transportation it should be placed in a temperature of about 20° Fahr. as soon as caught; a lower contracts the muscular fibers and forces out the nutritious oil, thus impairing both the flavor and the fluids food value of the fish. Drying and salting have a similar effect, and for this reason the most oily and nutritious varieties are usually so preserved, such a mackerel, eels, herring, salmon and sturgeon.

Sturgeon is not properly estimated in this country: When it is boiled with a little vinegar and a few sweet herbs it is most excellent. It has been compared by epicures with the celebrated Russian fish, the sterlet, from which the the finest caviare is made; this fish is so highly esteemed and commands so great a price that Russian restaurateurs keep it in tanks for the selection of their customers, who choose their own fish and eat it freshly killed and cooked.

When fish is deficient in flavor a little vinegar and some sweet herbs and spices cooked with it greatly improve it. Large fish should be put over the fire in cold water, and small ones in boiling water; both are done when the fins pull out readily, and both should be left in the water in which they are boiled until needed for use. Boiled fish is the least economical; baked and broiled fish retain nearly all their nutritive elements; fried fish retains all, besides gaining more from the addition of batter; chowder is the most economical method of cooking fish, because all its nutriment and substance are retained while the size of the dish is augmented by the addition of vegetables and crackers.

February's Five Sundays.

A writer in the Cleveland Leader answers a query as to when we shall have another February with five Sundays. He says: "There are five Sundays in the month of February this year—something that will not occur again for 40 years. The years containing five Sundays in February recur in a regular order every 400 years. The order is as follows: Three times with intervals of 28 years each, and then comes one after an interval of 40 years, then two with intervals of 28 years each, then one after 40 years, then two after intervals of 28 years each, and then there is an interval of 40 years before another such year. This is followed by three of intervals of 28 years each. This will occupy 400 years, and then the same order will come around again. The following are the years that have had and will have five Sundays in February during the present period of 400 years: 1604, 1632, 1660, 1688, 1728, 1756, 1784, 1824, 1852, 1880, 1920, 1948, 1976, 2004. The following are the conditions necessary in order that five Sundays may happen in February: First, the year must be a leap year; second, the first day of January must fall on a Thursday. In short, the year must have the dominical letters D. C. These years would recur regularly at periods of twenty-eight years if it were not for the fact that all the years divisible by four without a remainder are not leap years, as they were according to the Julian calendar. Julius Cæsar, or rather the Egyptian astronomer, Sosigenes, considered the year as containing 365¼ days, but as this was too long by a little more than eleven minutes, and as the error had increased to more than ten days at the 16th century, Pope Gregory XIII. made a new rule for leap year. It is as follows: The leap years are, first, those whose numbers are exactly divisible by four and not by 100; second, those whose numbers are divisible by 400 and not by 4,000."

If the storm of adversity whistles around you, whistle as bravely yourself; perhaps the two whistles may make melody. If you feel an indisposition to exertion, weak nerves, pain in the back, etc., or are afflicted with any affection of the secretory organs, use Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. It improves the digestive powers and strengthens the weakened and debilitated secretory organs. For sale by all dealers, $1 per bottle. d31w7-2w

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste. Price 25 cents. w6480

Special to the Review, Feb. 14.

THE NEILSON MATINEE.—Long before one o'clock this afternoon crowds of persons were waiting to secure admission to the Neilson matinee in the Grand Opera House. Neilson returns here in June, not professionally, however, and after a short stay in the city proceeds to Europe by way of the St. Lawrence river, being anxious to view its delightful scenery.

ALDERMAN PIPER.—Mr. Justice Armour gave his decision in the St. John's Ward controverted election case this morning, sustaining Mr. Dalton's decision. His Lordship, in concluding his judgment, said:—"I hold that Alderman Piper is properly rated on the assessment rolls, and that he is therefore properly qualified. I think, therefore, that the appeal must be dismissed with costs."

A CORNER IN ONIONS.—A produce dealer has bought up all the onions in the city and is bulling the market.

HORSES FOR THE STATES.—Several American horse-dealers are in the city buying extensively for the American markets.

GRAIN BY THE ST. LAWRENCE.—Recent transactions in vessel property indicate a belief in the revival of business. Several vessels have changed hands recently at figures fully 20 per cent higher than would have been given this time last year. It is generally supposed that western grain from American ports will be shipped via the St. Lawrence, which will greatly increase trade for lake vessels.

OTTAWA.

Special to the Review, Feb. 14.

PHOSPHATE LANDS.—Information has been received from Quebec that the Holland case of last year has been decided by the Executive Council not to annul the cancellation made by the late Government and appointed by order in Council, but as Mr. Holland paid the price of the land in full previous to cancellation the Government will allow him to re-purchase the land for the sum originally paid, viz., sixty cents per acre, such sale to be subject to the Phosphate Mines Act and settlement conditions, with the exception of that requiring two years continuous occupation, and that a patent will be issued on production of a certificate that the settlement conditions, with the above exceptions, have been duly fulfilled.

AT HOME.—Lady Tilley gave an "At home" yesterday afternoon between four and six o'clock. Lady Macdonald has issued invitations for an "At home" from four to six o'clock this afternoon.

A RACE.—F. McKinna offers to match "Walter" against "Buckskin" in a ten mile dash for $1,000 a side.

SUDDEN DISAPPEARANCE.—The police are looking up a missing Wellington Street merchant, who drew $600 of the firm's money and disappeared suddenly.

THE CHAMPION OARSMAN.—Hanlan was entertained last night at an oyster supper.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—As the Hon. C. Harbord, A.D.C. to His Excellency the Governor-General, was driving into town last evening the horses took fright, and despite the desperate efforts of Mr. Harbord and the groom to check the fiery animal's mad career, they succeeded in reaching the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway station. At this point an engine which was shunting some cars from the main line to the siding, commenced whistling, which it is needless to say, further increased the animals' terror. The situation of the occupants of the sleigh was one of imminent danger. Luckily the Hon. Mr. Bagot, another of His Excellency's A. D. C.'s, who happened to be returning to Rideau Hall, now came to the assistance of his friend, and in the pluckiest manner, and at the risk of being trampled to death by the infuriated animals, sprang for their heads, seized the bit, and with the united efforts of Mr. Harbord and the groom, succeeded in turning the horses into a snowdrift, where, thoroughly exhausted, they at last succumbed. The hon. gentleman, though receiving a severe shock, was not seriously injured

FREE TRADE v. PROTECTION.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—In the House of Commons, Mr. Wheelhouse (Conservative) moved the appointment of a select committee to consider the commercial relations between England and foreign nations, especially with reference to the importation of manufactured goods from abroad, and the effect of free trade. He said America had beaten England in the cotton and cloth industry, and the great manufacturing mills which were once working here were now only to be found in America. After a short debate, the motion was rejected.

The Home Rule members and their sympathizers denounce Sir Henry Peck's proposed rule as a gross attempt to manufacture an ex parte gag law, and claim that although they have no fears of its being adopted by the House, it shows the apprehensions felt by the Ministry and the Conservatives concerning the result of a debate on any and all measures affecting the Government's foreign policy and the Irish question.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 14.—The London correspondent of the Liverpool Courier says: "Assurance is given to me to-day that the statement of the intention of Baroness Burdett-Coutts to donate £50,000 to the amelioration of the distress in Ireland is true. A contradiction has been made in the London daily papers, but the fact is incontravertible. The money will not be given in alms, but be invested in the purchase of land in Connemara County, Galway, to be afterwards let to small tenants at long leases and moderate rents. A committee of Irish gentlemen interested in agriculture is associated in the scheme.

IRISH TENANTS.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Mr. Shaw Lefevre, a Liberal member of the House of Commons, will in committee move an amendment to the Government bill for the relief of the distress in Ireland, to leave out the restriction of two months as the term for which outdoor relief may be given. THE GOVERNMENT TRIP.

THE SUMMER EXCURSION TO WINNIPEG, FOR WHICH ONTARIO PAYS.

Efforts of the Government to Suppress the Liquor Bills—Wine, Whiskey, Beer and Cigars for all Hands—The Era of Ministerial Economy Commencing.

The Ontario Government, immediately after its members had found by the elections of last June that the people had sustained them at the polls, commenced another four years of economy by paying out of the public funds the expenses of an excursion party to Winnipeg. The party, which included His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, left Toronto in July—a month after the elections—and travelled to Manitoba by way of Collingwood, Prince Arthur's landing, by the Canada Pacific Railway to Port Savanne, by canoes to Cross Lake, and by the railway again to Winnipeg. The entire trip lasted one month, and the sum set down for it in the public accounts is no less than $6,456.22. This sum is charged in the accounts in the following manner:—

Expenses re visit of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor to the North-West, &c.

Col. Gillmor, to pay railway fares, hotel bills, supplies, &c	$3,881 21
Thos. Marks & Bro., supplies	1,417 97
John Macdonald & Co., supplies	168 22
J. Berwick & Co., supplies	626 12
James Adams, supplies	97 25
Hughes Bros., supplies	67 98
Ontario Rifle Association, supplies	80 00
H. A. Nelson & Sons, supplies	78 80
Hunter & Co., supplies	27 25
Zimmerman, McNaught & Co., supplies	36 00
Lugsdin & Barnett, supplies	15 00
Willing & Williamson, supplies	14 00
Plummer & Marks, supplies	13 00
W. H. Cole, supplies	6 50
Montreal Telegraph Company, telegrams	8 11
Dominion Telegraph Company, telegrams	20 42
Express Company, charges	5 25
Northern Railway Company, charges	4 50
G. Verral, cab hire	5 00
W. Forsyth Grant, expenses of His Honour to Ottawa	115 00
Total	$6,571 22

The last item, $115 expenses to Ottawa, does not properly belong to this account; so with its omission the total expense is as before stated, $6,456.22. The expenditure of this large sum for the purpose indicated has led the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature to make enquiries into the manner in which the money was laid out. It appears that Col. Gillmor, the Clerk of the House, was made by the Government the purveyor and treasurer to the party. He was, however, called before the Committee yesterday to give particulars of the trip and of the expenditure. Mr. Ferris presided, and among those present were Messrs. Meredith, Lauder, Creighton, McMaster, Merrick, Long, Hardy and Striker.

After the usual preliminary proceedings had been transacted, a bundle of grocers' accounts, hotel bills, dry goods accounts, etc., were placed upon the table for the inspection of the Committee; following which,

Col. GILLMOR was called and examined by Mr. Meredith.

"How many gentlemen," asked Mr. Meredith, "were there on this trip?"

"About twelve or thirteen," the Colonel replied.

"Who were they?"

"The Lieutenant-Governor and his son, Judge Morrison, Mr. Archibald MacNabb, of Glengarry, Mr. Wood, the Provincial Treasurer, and his son, Dr. Thorburn, Dr. Herriman, myself, Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the Inspector of Prisons, Mr. Maclean, supposed to be a reporter for the Globe, a guest of the Governor, and Mr. D. D. Hay, M.P.P."

"How was the party formed?"

"I only know that I was invited to go by Mr. Wood, at the request of the Lieut.-Governor, and that Mr. MacNabb and Mr. Morrison were guests of the Lieut.-Governor."

"Were the medical men there professionally?"

"I understood it was simply a party of tourists."

"How did you go?"

"By Northern railway to Collingwood, by steamer to Thunder Bay, from there by rail to Port Savanne, from there to Cross Lake by canoes, and from Cross Lake to Winnipeg by train. From Winnipeg we came home by way of St. Paul, Chicago and Detroit. We did not stop at Detroit, and we only stopped about a day at St. Paul, and three days at Chicago."

"Were there any public receptions in the course of the trip?

"I can hardly say there were, but the Governor addressed the people from time to time. There was some little demonstration at Prince Arthur's Landing, and from time to time we met parties of Indians, to whom the Governor spoke and gave presents. Then there was an address presented in which the people expressed their satisfaction at coming under the control of Ontario."

"I see $577 is charged in one of Marks & Bro.'s bills for Indians; what was that for?"

"That was for the Indians who were hired to take us through the country."

"And for presents for the Indians," interrupted Mr. Hardy.

"Yes," continued the Colonel, "presents were given to the Indians."

"Who ordered that?" asked Mr. Meredith.

"We were told that the three or four hundred Indians collected there to get their money from the Dominion Government were starving; so the Lieut.-Governor proposed at dinner one day that they should be presented with some pork and flour. Mr. Wood pooh-poohed that, but afterwards the Governor ordered the flour to be given."

"What amount in goods were given away to Indians?"

"About $1,000."

MAKING THE PARTY COMFORTABLE.

The COLONEL then being examined as to the details of the accounts, said the money paid to John Macdonald & Co. was for camping supplies; the $15 to Lugsdin & Barnett was for leather straps; the $36 to Zimmerman & McNaught, presents to the Indians in the form of silver-plated cups; the $6.50 to W. H. Cole, for a stove; the $67.98 to Hughes Bros. for presents for the Indians; the $78.80 to Nelson & Sons for medals for the Indians. Another item was for fishing rods and a calico umbrella. The item for travelling expenses included $320 for tickets for the party of 13. On the steamer the expenses, exclusive of the fare, were $40. The amount paid to the Ontario Rifle Association was for ammunition, as it was intended to shoot game. Five dollars were paid for a band which serenaded the Governor at Prince Arthur's Landing on his arrival; and the sum of $10.50 was spent to take the Governor, Mr. Wood, and others from Prince Arthur's Landing to Fort William.

"I see $100 charged as having been paid to the Lieut.-Governor?"

"Yes, that was given him at Chicago."

"And then there is also $137 charged to him?"

"Yes; $237 were paid to him altogether. You see the party divided up, and he travelled home himself. Mr. Wood told me to get an account of his expenditure from him, but it was none of my business to get accounts from the Lieut.-Governor."

"Then there is $10 paid to Maclean?"

"Yes, he went home from Chicago, and the $10 were for his expenses on the road."

The hotel bills were then examined. One of them, that of the Grand Pacific, Chicago, was as follows:—

Board and washing	$72 30
Beer and ale	2 50
Wine	21 70
Hack	7 00
Brandy	4 00
Theatre	7 50
Bar	[illegible]

Another bill which gave Mr. Wood's hotel expenses at Chicago included:—

Cigars	$4 50
Wine	6 50
Washing	3 70
Bar	30
Bar	20
Bar	80

Mr. Langmuir's bill at Chicago came to $11.10. In addition to the bills presented there were paid $10 for tips to the waiters and $10 for sundries for Mr. Wood.

Referring to the charge for the theatre, Mr. Meredith asked how many persons went.

"Six," replied the Colonel.

"Any ladies?"

"No."

"Ah," said Mr. MERRICK, "you can see that by the whiskey bills." (Laughter.)

"I see," continued Mr. MEREDITH, "that you laid in a good stock of supplies before you started. You must have been a thirsty crowd, for I notice that you bought

4 doz. of claret.
6 doz. of whiskey.
1 case of Louis Roderer's champagne.
6 doz. of Bass.
2 doz. of ale.
2 bottles of bitters.
Boneless sardines.
Matches. (Laughter.)
4 doz. of soda water.

"The soda water was used after the whiskey," remarked a member, amidst much laughter.

"Then there was," added Mr. MEREDITH,

2 doz. of seltzer.
5 lbs of cut tobacco.
6 corkscrews. (Laughter.)

"Why," interjected an hon. member, "every other man must have carried a corkscrew." (Loud laughter.)

Continuing his perusal of the bills, Mr. MEREDITH read:—

Candles.
2 bottles of vinegar.
2 doz. Appolinaris water.
4 boxes of cigars, $30.
2 boxes of Henry Clay, $15.
1 doz. bath towels.
6 bottles of port.
6 bottles of V. O. brandy.
1 sardine opener.
1 screwdriver.
1 box of Henry Clay cigars.
Cut tobacco, $1.25.

"I notice," Mr. Meredith proceeded, "that you paid $1.25 a pound for tobacco for the party, and 45 cents for tobacco to give to the Indians. On whose instructions were these supplies purchased?"

"In general terms," replied the witness, "so far as that goes they were made on my responsibility. Mr. Wood told me to get what things I conceived would be necessary for the Lieutenant-Governor and his party. His instructions were to make the party comfortable, and I did what I thought was general and proper. Of course, I have had to do with such parties before. In 1868, you know the Legislature went for a trip on the Chicora, and the bar was open all the time, and over a hundred went in and drank whatever they wanted. I may as well say that I do not think one dollar was spent in the way of refreshments that I would not have spent myself had I been taking a party out; so that I do not think there was any extravagance."

"Was your course approved of by the Government?"

"I sent in my accounts, and as they were paid I took it for granted that they were approved."

"You seem to have gone up pretty well provided," remarked Mr. Hardy, the Provincial Secretary; after making which observation he produced an account for $4,172.84 for the charter of the Chicora, the refreshments and board of the Legislative party in 1868.

SUPPRESSING THE LIQUOR BILLS.

At this point Mr. Lauder, at the request of the Mail reporter, passed the wine and hotel bills to the reporter's table.

Observing that the bills were passed to the reporters, the Chairman (Mr. Ferris) protested against their being copied for publication, and removed them from the press table.

"Yes," remarked Mr. Hardy, "I want to see those accounts."

"If the reporters can't copy them," Mr. Meredith said, "I'll read them off."

"All right," observed Mr. Hardy. Turning to Col. Gillmor, he said, "You seem to have been pretty liberal with your wine bills."

A few of the bills—and they are specimen accounts only—were then read by Mr. Meredith. One, that furnished by the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago, was as follows:—

Board 2½ days	$30 00
Ale	2 50
Wine	1 75
Do.	6 70
Do.	1 50
Do.	1 75
Do.	6 00
Do.	4 00

"Did you order all this wine?" Mr. Meredith asked.

"Well, the members of the party did not lunch together as a rule, and they ordered their wine separately; but at dinner I always ordered the wine or beer I thought necessary. On one occasion I ordered beer and on another champagne."

Mr. Meredith continued reading the accounts,

Hack	$4 00
Do.	3 00
Brandy	4 00
Theatre	7 50
Bar	0 50

The next hotel account, which was that of Mr. Wood, read as follows:—

2½ days' board for 2 persons	$30 00
Cigars	0 50
Do.	4 00
Do.	4 25
Wine	6 00
Washing	3 70
Bar	0 30
Bar	0 20
Bar	0 50

Another account said:—

Maclean	$6 00
Hay	5 00

The bill of the Canadian Pacific Hotel, Winnipeg, read:—

Three days' board, nine persons	$54 00
Three days' board, two persons	11 00
Extra meals	4 00
Washing	10 00
Cabman	2 50
Teaming to station	5 00
Teaming	[illegible]
One single rig for Macdonald and Mathews	[illegible]
Sundries for the party	27 50
1 box of cigars	7 50
1 bottle of wine	4 00
Baggage from station	2 50
Baggage from boat	2 00
	$147 50

An item for pressing Mr. Wood's coat was struck out, the Treasurer evidently having paid it himself.

Another bill read was that of Mr. Berwick, grocer, for supplies. The bill included:—

4 doz of claret	$48 00
Whiskey	27 00
1 case champagne	30 00
6 doz Bass	16 50
2 doz. ale	5 00
Bottles	1 00
2 Albert Durer	2 77
6 lbs. tea	4 50
6 lbs. coffee	2 40
Matches	0 30
4 doz. soda water	4 50
2 doz. Seltzer	2 50
5 lbs. cut tobacco	6 25
6 corkscrews	1 50
1 doz. pickles	3 40
2 doz. Appollinaris water	4 40
2 bottles of lime juice	0 90
4 boxes of cigars	30 00
2 boxes Henry Clay cigars	15 00
1 doz. bath towels	5 00
6 bottles of port	6 00
6 bottles of V. O. brandy	[illegible]
1 box Henry Clay cigars	[illegible]

In reply to Mr. Meredith, Col. Gillmor then said that in 1868 all the members of the House were invited to join in the excursion, to which he had referred, on the Chicora, and some fifty or sixty members accepted. The trip was in fact a trip of the Legislative Assembly for the purpose of examining the country on the north shore of Lake Superior. Members of both political parties were present.

TREATING THE AMERICANS.

"Did many persons call on you at Chicago?" asked Mr. McMaster.

"The Americans were attentive beyond measure, and I dare say some of those drinks at the bar were some slight means of returning the compliment they had paid."

"Do you not think," enquired Mr. Meredith, "that the party might have paid for the drinks they had at the bar."

"I don't think that on these occasions any one pays out of his own pocket. I have never done so."

THE MATTER DISCUSSED.

Mr. LAUDER then moved that the accounts connected with the trip be placed upon the minutes of the Committee.

Mr. HARDY did not think it was consistent with the dignity of the Committee that it should go through the Governor's kitchen and enquire into what he ate and drank. The Governor had authorized him to say that the party was his. How far it was proper to enquire into the accounts of the party, the Committee must say. It did not appear to him that it was in accordance with the practice to make such enquiry, and in Ottawa when details of Lord Dufferin's expenditure in his trip to Manitoba and British Columbia were asked, the giving of such details was opposed by both sides of politics. Besides that, the Sandfield Macdonald Government did not make a detailed return of the $4,172 spent on the trip in 1868.

Mr. MEREDITH held that there was a great deal of difference between the useful progresses of a Governor-General—an Imperial officer—through the Dominion, and the trip of a Lieut.-Governor, whose term of office was just expiring, through the western part of the Province. Then, it was not right for the Government to thrust the responsibility for the trip upon the Lieut.-Governor and the Clerk of the House. The Government should assume the full responsibility itself. Besides this, there was a great deal of difference between the trip made in 1868 and that made last year. The account charged in the former case was a contract price, and even if it was too high, it was no justification for the bills which had just been submitted.

Mr. LAUDER said that in former years members of the Committee could get copies of accounts, but the practice of the Government now was not only to prevent members from getting such accounts, but to prevent the public from getting the proper information regarding them. Only a few minutes ago the Chairman, with an unusual want of courtesy, insisted that the accounts should not go to the public through the press. It was desirable that the public, through the press, should get a fair and true copy of the accounts, but as that was not to be allowed, he (Mr. Lauder) would press his motion that the accounts accompany the minutes.

The CHAIRMAN maintained that copies of the accounts should only be obtained through the Clerk of the Committee.

Mr. MEREDITH repudiated the idea of the Chairman that the press was not entitled to have copies of the accounts brought to the Committee. The interference of the Chairman was most improper and quite uncalled for.

Mr. MERRICK held that the Chairman was acting improperly in interfering in any way with the personal conduct of a member of the Committee, even though that interference was for the purpose of suppressing the liquor bills.

After some further discussion, in which Mr. MacMaster, Mr. Creighton and Mr. Long took part, the motion of Mr. Lauder was carried, Mr. Hardy and Mr. Striker declining to vote.

The Committee then adjourned.—Mail.

THE FREE GRANT ACT.

Mr. PARDEE gave notice that he would move the House to-morrow into committee to consider a resolution respecting the Free Grant and Homestead Act.

Mr. MEREDITH—What is the object of the resolution?

Mr. PARDEE—By the resolution I will propose that a certain portion of the revenue from pine trees, subsequent to the issue of the patent, shall be paid back to the patentee. (Hear, hear.) I think that will remove some of the objections to my bill extending the rights of the lumbermen.

THE LUCAN BUTCHERY.

PUBLIC OPINION ON THE EVIDENCE AT THE INQUEST.

Hard Stories About the Donnelly Boys—Bill Donnelly's Last Visit to His Parents.

LUCAN, Feb. 12.—The evidence elicited before the Coroner's Jury was variously discussed to-day. From what could be heard it was obvious the prisoners are not without sympathisers in the village. Johnny Connor's evidence was belittled by many of the residents, and some went so far as to say that he had been "stuffed." One point they can't understand is how the boy escaped in the face of his statement that James Carroll saw him lying in bed. They take it that when the murderers shed the blood of an innocent girl in order to put the proof of their guilt beyond discovery it was not very likely they would hesitate at taking the life of the boy had they known he was in the house. Other exceptions are taken to the boy's story, which some men claimed was not the same as told on the morning after the tragedy. The authorities speak and feel differently, and if necessary two or three constables can be called to disprove this contention. There was also considerable

SPECULATION AS TO THE NATURE OF THE DEFENCE

the prisoners will offer when arraigned at the Assizes. That their friends will make a determined effort to secure their acquittal can be easily understood. The prevailing opinion is that an alibi will be sworn to in the case of each prisoner, and people say that there will be plenty of witnesses forthcoming for this purpose. "Why," said a man to-day, "the people on the Roman Line will swear to anything in order to get the prisoners off, so intense was their hatred for the Donnellys."

ABOUT THE DONNELLY BOYS.

Patrick and Robert Donnelly were about the streets to-day, and the former stated that he had received several more letters of sympathy from his friends in Thorold. He returns there on Saturday. William Donnelly did not make his appearance in the village. He was out in the township collecting information. It is said that he is writing a history of his family for publication. The Donnelly boys seem to have had some queer adventures in the matrimonial line. Bob was married several years ago to a girl at Waterford. It is said he left her without support before their child was born, and has never lived with her since. About three years ago he was engaged to another young woman. Shortly before the wedding her brother handed him over $500, which he spent, and then failed to keep the engagement. John, one of the victims, was married seven years ago; he too did not live many years with his wife, for the reason it is said that her family would not give him money. The woman remained here for a while after their separation and then went to St. Thomas, where she married the second time, but John never troubled her. The youngest, Thomas, also murdered, is reported to have received $200 from the family of the girl he was about to marry, but having got rid of the money he paid no further attention to her.

THERE MUST BE SOME MISUNDERSTANDING

between the surviving members of the Donnelly family and the three Orangemen mentioned in Monday's paper as to the statement that the latter were willing to advance $2,000 to the former if they required it. Wm. Hodgins, one of the parties referred to, told your reporter to-day that as far as he was concerned no such offer was made, nor did he give authority for any one to use his name. "I'd be very foolish," he said, "to do such a thing, for I haven't got the money to back it up." Mr. Hodgins said he lived on the 5th concession of Biddulph, otherwise known as the "Protestant line," from the fact that it is settled wholly by Irish Protestants. They are on friendly terms with the people living on the Roman line, but there is not much intercourse between the two.

In a conversation with William Donnelly last evening he pathetically described

HIS LAST VISIT TO HIS PARENTS.

It was on the Monday preceding the murder. He had occasion to go over to the homestead for a light buggy, and arrived there very early in the morning. His mother, who had been a sufferer from rheumatism, wore red flannel underclothing, and she was already up sitting by the stove. The oddity of the red garments caused William to make some jovial remarks, when the poor woman burst into tears. "Oh, William," said she, "they have me heart broken. They are dragging myself and the old man all over the country to try to fasten that burning on us. Oh, Bill, if you had the sore troubles on you that I have you could not joke so readily." "She wept so bitterly," Bill added, "it went to my heart, and I could not find words to console her. Father came in just then, and I told him I was in a hurry and must get the buggy and be off. He would not hear of it, and strongly persuaded me to put up the horse and stay awhile. "Sure," says he, "I'm going down to Granton on Thursday for trial, and maybe they'd hang me, and then we'd never meet again."

WERE THE WORDS PROPHETIC?

At all events they came partly true, for I never saw him again after I left that morning. I was prevailed on to remain a while, and when I left it was with a sad heart and a strange feeling of coming evil, but I little dreamt that the next time I visited the old house it would be to look upon the burned and blackened remains of my murdered parents, but so it was."

LONDON, Feb. 12.—After a long consultation to-day between the parties engaged in the prosecution of the prisoners charged with the Donnelly murder, John Darcy (or Dorsey) was brought from gaol to the Central Station, and was discharged from custody on the application of his counsel, Mr. H. MacMahon. No evidence has been found to support the charge against him. It is understood that other persons now in durance will be also discharged. The prisoners were to-day visited by the reporters. They were found with the morning papers before them reading the evidence of the boy Connors, given at the inquest yesterday. The three implicated by his statement are separated, Purtell being in the cell with the elder Maher and Ryder. Thos. Ryder, James Ryder, and Jas. Carroll were placed in separate cells. James Carroll, remarking upon the evidence, said, "the boy goes pretty strong for me."

He appears much depressed at the revelations. He is a young man 28 years of age.—Globe.

WORKING UP EVIDENCE.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—It is understood that additional evidence of an important nature in the Donnelly case continues to be received. Constable Clay claims to have unearthed strong links of testimony against some of those in custody and others not yet arrested. Patrick Donnelly, one of the ill-fated family, arrived in the city to-day.

THE BOY CONNORS.

The Lucan boy Connors is a great object of interest in the city. Wherever he goes he is followed by a crowd. Some person here provided him with a new suit of clothes, and he looks very spruce.

PURTELL'S AND MAHER'S RECORD.

STRATHROY, Feb. 13.—Purtell, the party under arrest in London as being a participant in the Biddulph massacre, formerly resided in this town. Three years ago a party of Germans were attacked one Sunday in the huckleberry swamp in the township of Ekfrid and brutally beaten, one of them being stabbed so seriously that his life was despaired of; several of the gang were arrested, among them Purtell and Maher, and when tried before the Police Magistrate, they were convicted and sentenced to six months in the Central Prison, where they both served their full time. Purtell's record while residing in this section was remarkable for ruffianism and cowardly conduct in several rows in which he was mixed up. It is not known whether the junior Maher under arrest in London is the same person who was convicted here.

AN ECCENTRIC LADY'S DEATH.

Living in Poverty Although Possessed of Means.

For many years Mrs. Edmondson lived in a little white cottage on the corner of Pearl and Curtis streets, her sole companion being her daughter Emily, now in her thirty-second year, but whose thin and gaunt figure would lead one to suspect that her age did not exceed eighteen summers. To say that the mother was a miser would not be expressing the truth. Though possessed of an extensive property in houses, she seldom collected any rents from her tenants. Her whole system of life during the past few years has been founded on pure self-denial. She has made her habitation in the kitchen of the dwelling, never once occupying the other comfortable and almost luxuriously furnished apartments of the house. She and her daughter would sit for hours huddled together on a heap of rags rather than incur the expense of a fire, notwithstanding that there was always plenty of wood in the yard. For days at a time they would abstain from food. When nature could no longer be cheated hunger would be appeased, a meal would be made, perhaps off a crust of mouldy bread. A table, a bed, and a few chairs were all the furniture they used, and although well-wishing friends and relatives frequently brought them food the mother would in many instances refuse to accept it, and on every occasion gave her visitors to understand that they were not welcome.

As weeks rolled on the eccentricities of the extraordinary woman's life became more and more appalling. Whenever a visitor called and entreated her to repair her house and become comfortably domiciled she refused to comply with the request, expressing fears that if she followed such a course she would die in poverty. There were $1,800 lying to her credit in the Southern Loan Society, and when entreated to withdraw a sufficient amount of this sum to provide for her wants she demurred, saying that if she did so she would be certain to eventually starve to death. About three weeks ago a citizen went to the house, and a strange sight met his gaze. Although the day was bitterly cold there was no fire in the stove. The mother sat in a chair, her knees and chin together, while the daughter lay couched in a corner among a pile of rags. The couple were always encased in the most shabby garments, if such the rags could be termed, yet a large quantity of costly and serviceable dresses were packed away in trunks in the house. At last overtaxed nature could bear the strain no longer, and the mother was taken to her bed a few days ago. It was with considerable reluctance she allowed a medical practitioner to be called in, but when the physician did arrive he saw that he had been summoned too late. It was a wasted figure which met his gaze, exposure to the cold and lack of nourishment having terribly emaciated the poor creature. She gradually sank until the last closing scene was ushered in on Friday.

The daughter has lived an exclusively isolated life of late, rarely going without the portals of her mother's house, and although an excellent musician, an examination of the rooms of the dwelling disclosed the fact that the piano and other furniture was covered with mildew from non-usage. Emily has been removed to the residence of a relative, and, it is conjectured, will soon recover her former vivacity and gaiety.

Mrs. Edmondson was sixty-five years of age. Before her demise she made a will, bequeathing the greater part of her disposable property to the daughter. But for her peculiar hallucination the chances are she might have lived for twenty years to come. The remains were interred on Saturday.—St. Thomas Times.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

THE officers of Christ Church, Alexandria, Va., are endeavouring to sell the Bible used by Gen. George Washington to raise money to pay on the debt of the Church.

THE relative growth of different denominations in Connecticut the last 20 years has been estimated as follows:—Congregationalists, 20 per cent.; Methodists, 34 per cent.; Baptists, 12 per cent.; Episcopalians, [illegible]

THE oldest Nonconformist place of worship in Great Britain is to be seen in the village of Horningsham, Wiltshire. It bears the date 1566, and was built for some Presbyterian workmen who were engaged upon the erection of a palace in the neighborhood.

IT is a very startling fact, that at present but five ministers of Protestant Churches are regularly at work in the whole territory of Arizona, and this in a population approximating 50,000! We believe there are but four Protestant churches thus far erected. Even these are small, and together have not a combined seating capacity for one thousand persons.

"ASK MAMMA!"

Leap-year, and of course the ladies
  Have the privilege to pop,—
I, a bachelor at forty
  Cherish once again a hope
That my chances are not vanish'd,
  But e'er winter frosts can thaw,
I may tell some blushing maiden,
  Ask mamma.

That, I take it, is the right way,
  Our positions now reversed,—
I have got my lesson learn'd;
  I have got my part rehearsed.
She must make the first advances,
  With no reference to her pa,
Mine will be the right to answer,
  Ask mamma.

What a bother it will save me,
  And expenses too, not small,
For of me is not expected
  Trottings out to rout and ball.
I have had my share of these things,
  Though no recompense I saw,
Still I'm single, and who wins me
  Asks mamma.

Come now maidens, ye now verging
  On the shady side of life,
Do not let false pride detain you,
  If you would become a wife.
Courage, be not shy or backward,
  Put your faith in this old saw,
"Faint heart never won a husband,"
  Ask mamma.

No Such Word as Fail.

The hectic cheek, the sunken eye, the hacking cough, betray the presence of that dire foe—consumption. If one of our friends or relatives is attacked with this disease, there is nothing that we would not do to give them relief, but leading physicians prescribe in vain. The only known remedy and one which stamps the discoverer as a public benefactor is SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA. Never, in a large and varied experience, has it been known to fail to give relief, and in most cases permanently cure. wd201m

The Markets.

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS.

SATURDAY, Feb. 14.—The general market today was an improvement upon last week's, but was not what might be called a good one. The supply of beef was again large, even beyond the demand, with an occasional sale at an advance on quotations, which is believed to be only temporary. Mutton was more plentiful than for two months, while the price remained firm. Pork advanced 25 cts. on first class meat and $6.25 per cwt. was paid. Poultry was scarce, without any change in quotations. Potatoes were in fair supply with a fair demand at 60c. to 65c., while one lot is said to have brought 70 cts. per bag. Butter, choice roll, sold quickly at 18 to 20 cts., in crocks at 19 cts. Some were holding out for 20 cts. Eggs, although in good supply, were short of the demand. They went at 15 cts, while one lot was sold at 17 cts. per doz. Hides were freely taken at $7.00 to $7.25. Sheep pelts are bringing $1.60 to $1.70 each. Wood was again plentiful to-day, but sold readily at our quotations. Hay meets with ready sale at $6.00 to $6.50, except for very choice clean Timothy, which brings $7.00. Straw is slow of sale, there being no demand. The grain market continues excited. Large quantities of wheat are coming in, and it is readily taken by the millers at an advance, although shippers are offering lower figures than they paid yesterday. While shippers are paying $1.21 to $1.22, the millers are giving $1.23 to $1.25 for choice spring. The receipts are heavy. Peas are also coming forward in considerable quantities, and are selling firm at 63c. Oats are more plentiful; they are firm at 35c.

LOCAL AND MUNICIPAL.

POLICE COURT.

ASSAULT.

SATURDAY, Feb. 14.—The monotony of the Police Court was relieved this morning by the appearance of Lafayette F. Carpenter, with a complaint against John Kearns, charging him with assault on Thursday, the 12th instant. Witnesses were examined, and the evidence proved the assault. The Magistrate reprimanded the complainant for the language he had used, and imposed a fine on the defendant of $2.00 and $1.00 costs, to be paid in two weeks, or ten days in jail.

VAGRANCY.

Henry Lee was charged with vagrancy. He was sent to the Central Prison for six months to enable him to learn a trade and make himself useful to the country.

Valentine's Day.

To-day being Valentine's Day, and also market day, the Post Office has been thronged in a very unusual manner. The addition to the number of letters mailed and received has been very great.

The Weather.

The weather probabilities for this district, as reported from Toronto at 10 o'clock to-day are: Fresh to brisk winds; partly cloudy weather; stationary, or slightly lower temperature. Peterborough, northerly to westerly winds; clear weather. The thermometer indicated this morning at 7 o'clock 20°, and at noon 33°, and 50° in the sun.

Peterborough Streets Crowded.

The streets have presented a lively scene today. Although the regular market may be said to have been small, yet the number of farm teams bringing in wheat, oats, peas, wood and hay has been so great that our streets have been thronged with them and pedestrians. Many others came in simply to see what was going on, get prices and make purchases. The storekeepers and their employees have been kept busy and their sales must have been large.

The French Language.

We have much pleasure in calling the attention of such of our readers as desire to improve their linguistic attainments to the fact that Monsieur L. Lucien Maurice (French Master), educated at the Lycee Bonaparte, Paris, France, has been in town for the last six months giving private lessons in French. He has a thorough knowledge of the subject, and his presence affords a good opportunity for obtaining a knowledge of one of the finest of modern languages. This gentleman has references that show him fully competent to give satisfactory instruction. Persons desirous of obtaining instruction in the French language will be waited upon by Mons. L. Maurice, if they will leave their address with Mr. Jeffers, the Principal of the Collegiate Institute.

Boarding House Entered by a Tramp.

A man tramping from the front, on a visit to Peterborough, entered a private boarding house last evening without asking permission of any one and ascended to the third storey. He took possession of the bed of one of the young men boarders, and went to sleep. The occupant of the room, upon his entering to retire for the night, discovered the sleeping tramp, aroused him, and interrogated him as to his conduct. Not being able to obtain any satisfaction, he, by means of his boot toe, hurried the intruder down two pair of stairs and out through the street door. It was subsequently learned that this enterprising tramp was well known by many residents of Peterborough. As soon as he becomes aware of this he will undoubtedly bid adieu to the town.

Serious Accident.

A serious accident has resulted from the reckless manner in which teams are being driven through the entrances to the tavern yards. Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock, Ada, a little daughter of Mr. Jos. Huston, while passing the yard entrance of the Royal Oaks tavern was knocked down and badly injured by a farmer's team being rapidly driven from the yard. Dr. Bell, who was in the vicinity, attended the little sufferer, and dressed the wounds, after which she was removed to her home and attended by Dr. King, the family physician. The injuries are of a serious nature, and may result fatally. The face is considerably bruised, the nose badly cut, and internal injuries sustained. Every attention is given to the little sufferer that is possible to bestow. Much excitement was created by this accident, and the public have suddenly become aware that more care should be exercised in crossing the sidewalks while passing in and out of the yards. This careless driving in and out of yards, over crosswalks, and around street corners has become a serious inconvenience to pedestrians, and something should be done to put a stop to it.

Anniversary Services.

The anniversary sermons of the Bible Christian Church, Peterborough, will be preached tomorrow at 10.30 a.m., 2.30 p.m., and 6.30 p.m. The Rev. W. C. Beer, Chairman of Cobourg District, will preach. On Monday tea will be served from 6 to 7.30 p.m., when a public meeting will be addressed by Rev. Messrs. Beer, Torrance, Starr, and others. Tickets 25 cents. 2438

BOBCAYGEON.

CONCERT.—The Independent says:—Several of our village musicians have joined together to form an orchestra, and a concert has been arranged at which to present them to the public. As the object of the gentlemen who form the orchestra is simply to give pleasure to their fellow citizens, it is to be hoped that their laudable desires will be received in a proper spirit.

KINMOUNT.

CONFIRMATION.—The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—Last Friday evening, the Lord Bishop of Toronto held a confirmation at Swamp Lake church, when he confirmed three young persons. In the evening he preached a sermon and administered the sacrament in this village. The attendance was numerous, and the sermon was listened to with deep attention. The church being unprovided with a vestry, His Lordship had to put on his episcopal robes in view of the congregation, which detracted somewhat from the general effect.

CODOCONK.

MELANCHOLY DROWNING ACCIDENT.—A correspondent of the Post says:—On Friday morning last the body of Mr. W. Low, miller, of this place, was found in the river, the coat being frozen to the ice. An inquest was held on Saturday, and from the evidence it appeared that the deceased, who was a highly respectable and sober man, had been drinking the previous night at Mrs. Keys, and on leaving at 11 o'clock had missed his way and wandered into the river in about seven feet of water. He was about 59 years of age, and had three sons and a daughter all grown up, the youngest being nineteen. His wife had died many years ago, and he was to have been married on Friday to a Mrs. Cooper, of Norland, and this may have led him into getting jolly. He was a man of some means, and had rented the McArthur mill here for a term of years. The remains were taken to Roblin, back of Napanee, where deceased had a plot in the cemetery, and where a son is buried.

PORT HOPE.

O.Y.B.—Shortly after 7.30 on Thursday night the Grand Lodge members formed into procession, headed by the 46th Batt. band, marched to the Grand Trunk station. A very large number of citizens accompanied them, and the enthusiasm was unbounded. The brethren gave cheers for the members of the Order in Port Hope, and these were returned with interest by the brethren, one and all of whom had become very fraternal with their visitors during three days residence of the Grand Lodge members here. The delegates so conducted themselves while in Port Hope that they won high encomiums, and materially advanced the respect of the general public for the Order. The band played appropriate tunes, and the train moved off amid loud and long-continued plaudits from the crowd.

ICE JAM.—An ice jam of Smith's creek on Friday flooded some of the streets and forced the stream to take a new course across a lot.

MR. BRIGHT ON WAR.

In a recent Birmingham speech, delivered on the anniversary of the battle of Isandula, Mr. Bright referred to the habit which England had had for so long a time past, but especially lately, of entering into savage and cruel wars with tribes of uncivilized or half civilized races of men. When I read of the transactions of this kind something always puts to me this question: What is it that makes, if anything makes, this needless and terrible slaughter different in its nature from those transactions which we call murder? (Applause.) We call one act of transactions war, and it has a totally different idea, and the other we call murder; and we do not appear to enquire when thousands are killed what was it that brought on or should inflict that terrible misery, whilst we are all excited to the last degree if some one unfortunate individual, by the vindictive attack of some one else, is put to death, and the act is called murder. Take these wars we have had lately—the war with the Zulus, the war with the Afghans; we know that we have had sad excuses made for them, and excuses which were not justified by the facts. (Applause.) For example, one excuse is that the Zulus attacked Natal, which is absolutely and notoriously and entirely false. (Applause.) We have had statements with regard to Afghanistan very much of the same character—that they were going to throw their influence with another Northern Power; that they insulted outrageously an Envoy sent to negotiate with them—for all of which I believe there is not a particle of foundation. These are the excuses offered by persons who commit the crimes, in order that you may say that these acts are not crimes, but necessary acts of statesmanship. At the most, with regard to either of these Powers, the case was one of suspicion of which the most experienced persons said there was no ground for suspicion. But is it right upon mere suspicion that a country like this should send, in the one case twenty thousand, in the other forty thousand, troops to invade territories, to put to death not less than twenty thousand men engaged in the defence of their own country, which in our case we generally consider honourable and needful?—that all this should be done merely upon a bare suspicion, which both in the case of Natal and in the case of India was a suspicion declared to be wholly groundless by those who were most competent to judge. (Applause.) And yet, he said, the people of England, though their rulers have not hesitated—why yes, you have hesitated—you have not only hesitated but condemned; but the people of England, through their rulers, have been sending sword and fire and rapine through countries which were governed in their own way satisfactorily to themselves, and which had not stirred one single step to disturb any single, even the minutest, interest of this kingdom. (Cheers.) It may be that these transactions may be viewed in a different light elsewhere, and by other eyes. The Psalmist says, "When He maketh inquisition for blood He remembereth them;" and I cannot conceive, unless all our theory of Bible instruction, and Christian knowledge, and Christian belief be but a fable, but that these transactions must be condemned by the highest tribunal—(cheers)—"in the land of the hereafter," if I may use the words with which Longfellow concludes his charming poem of Hiawatha, "In the land of the hereafter." There is, as we believe, a tribunal before which the crimes and virtues of men will be weighed in an unerring scale. Do you think that the equivocations and the falsehoods of Blue Books, and of political and Ministerial speeches, will be accepted there as evidence in favor of acquittal? For my share, I look with dread, I look with a pain which I cannot describe, upon what has been recently taking place, and what is even now not ended, and may not be for a long time. Indeed, this foreign question seems to me to press more and more upon the hearts of all the people of this country. We are so free from war at home, we live in this island surrounded by the free ocean, and no one molests us. We boast of our freedom; we boast of our internal peace; we boast of our instruction, our Christian missions, our example of freedom and justice, to an admiring world; and yet all the world looks on and sees the transactions of the last two years—all good men, I believe, with astonishment and regret. You recollect, many of you, I dare say, a beautiful ode, written by one of our best poets, who puts into the mouth of an ancient British Queen, who is supposed to have lived nearly 2,000 years ago, a complaint and a denunciation which she utters against the power of Rome, which at that time was invading her country and slaughtering her people. She is made to say, in the indignation with which her heart is filled,

> "Rome shall perish, write that word
> In the blood that she has spilt;
> Perish hopeless and abhorred,
> Deep in ruin as in guilt."

It was not a prophecy of the British Queen; it was perhaps written a hundred years ago by an English poet, but it might well be that which the British Queen thought, and in her words expressed. But what has happened? The great Empire has fallen—it is a ruin everywhere. No completer ruin has history shown, perhaps, than the great ruin of the conquering and sanguinary Roman Empire. Well, I believe, whether I read history sacred or profane, that the punishment which has fallen upon ancient empires, on their rulers and their people, if they persist in the pursuit of empire and glory—sacrificing uncounted and countless multitudes of human lives—it seems to me that that which has taken place in past times must in this respect take place in time to come. The retribution—sometimes of individuals and sometimes of nations—comes slowly, but it is sure to come. A great Italian poet has said:—"The sword of heaven is not in haste to come, nor yet doth linger." We may be quite sure, therefore, that in some shape or other, if the people of England tolerate the bloody and sanguinary crimes which are committed in our names, if they are so committed and we do not remonstrate and condemn them, we shall have no acquittal at that Tribunal by which the actions not of individuals only but of nations and peoples are finally judged. That is my views. (Cheers.) Perhaps I have spoken strongly, and perhaps with a warmth and earnestness which some of you might think unnecessary. No, I believe it is not possible too strongly to condemn the policy by which the hard-earned treasure is wasted, and by which the blood of your brethren, and those whom you are told to call your foes, is spilled. To-day is the anniversary of what they call the battle, or the massacre, of Isandula, where I know not how many, but I suppose at least fifteen hundred men and officers, Englishmen, native troops, and I know not how many of the Zulus, were slaughtered. This is the anniversary of that sad day. Can any man show a justification of that transaction or the compensation that we have received for the enormous and incalculable loss of that one day's work? (Hear, hear.) The Afghan country is a country, I am told, as large as France and as mountainous as Switzerland. You read of the hanging of scores of men, you hear of villages burnt, of women and children turned out into the snow and the cold of this inclement season, and all done at the command of a Government of a people professing to be wiser, more intelligent, more humane and Christian than those on whom these attacks are made. I say let us abandon our professions, let us claim no longer to be Christian, let us go back to the heathen times whilst we adhere to the heathen practices. (Hear, hear.) Let us no longer, as I see some of the leading men of this country have been doing within the last few weeks, proceed with the opening of churches, the laying foundations of churches, out of apparent regard for the Christian religion. I say take down, at any rate, your Ten Commandments from inside your churches, and say no longer that you read and believe and regard the Sermon on the Mount. Abandon your Christian professions, or else abandon your savage and your heathen practices. (Prolonged cheering.)

Cut this Out—It May Save Your Life.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Lung Disease, Coughs, Colds or Consumption, yet some would die rather than pay 75 cents for a bottle of medicine that would cure them. Dr. A. Boschee's German Syrup has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wondrous cures astonish every one that try it. If you doubt what we say in print, cut this out and take it to your Druggist, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it, or a regular size for 75 cents. dw31-1y

If the storm of adversity whistles around you, whistle as bravely yourself; perhaps the two whistles may make melody. If you feel an indisposition to exertion, weak nerves, pain in the back, etc., or are afflicted with any affection of the secretory organs, use Victoria Buchu and Uva Ursi. It improves the digestive powers and strengthens the weakened and debilitated secretory organs. For sale by all dealers, $1 per bottle. d21w7-2w

Throw Physic to the Dogs.

When Mr. and Mrs. Macbeth committed that little indiscretion about King Duncan, and the lady took to walking in her sleep, it is very doubtful that Mr. Macbeth would have exclaimed, "Throw Physic to the Dogs," if the attendant had presented him with a bottle of SCOTT & BOWNE'S PALATABLE CASTOR OIL. It is one of the best medicines extant, as the old prejudices against the nauseating properties of castor oil are done away with by the fact that this palatable castor oil is true to the name and is really agreeable to the taste.
